Noted Doctors Discuss Possibilities Under St. Louisan's Great Bequest

"Discoveries in Medicine Today Are Purchasable Commodities," Declares Dr. Ralph Thompson of St. Louis University, Who Holds That Not Only the Physical Scourges of Today May Be Banished but That Experiments May Ultimately Suggest Cures for the Insane.

WHAT use can medical science make of James Campbell's fortune, estimated at $20,000,000 or more, some day to come into the possession of the medical department of St. Louis University?

This question was asked by the Post-Dispatch of a number of the leading medical educators and research workers of the United States, following the filing of Campbell's will, which assured the university of the estate, after the lifetimes of Campbell's immediate heirs, and possibly an additional 21 years.

Their replies indicate that, in their opinion, there is hardly any limit which can be placed on the effectiveness of the Campbell millions in eradicating disease, prolonging life and increasing human efficiency.

Obviously, with $20,000,000, or with any considerable part of that sum, great buildings can be erected and equipped, and hundreds of the sick can be treated. That James Campbell intended to have these things done is shown by the wording of his will, which states that his estate shall go to the university, at the close of the trust period, "for the erection, equipment, furnishing, maintenance and support of a hospital in the city of St. Louis or in St. Louis County, for sick or injured persons."

But Campbell also saw the broader things which can be done with money, and he made the broader use of his money possible when he added the words, "And for the advancement of the sciences of medcine and surgery."

Medical Discoveries Purchasable.

THIS does not mean merely hiring a faculty to teach medicine and surgery to students. In its modern interpretation, it means both teaching and research work—the tireless striving, in the laboratory, over the microscope to disclose the secrets of the diseases which still baffle the medical man.

Everyone knows that tuberculosis and cancer are still unsolved riddles, so far as finding a specific for their cure is concerned. But what if research should succeed, in the next few years, or at any time before St. Louis University receives the Campbell bequest, in conquering cancer and consumption? Would there still be equally important work for humanity left, which the Campbell fortune might aid scholarship to accomplish?

This question, and others bearing on it, were asked of Dr. Ralph L. Thompson, professor of pathology in the medical department of St. Louis University, head of research work in that institution, and associate editor of the Interstate Medical Journal.

Dr. Thompson's reply was that the importance of research work will constantly grow greater, and that no bounds can be set on the achievement of endowed effort in this direction.

"Discoveries in medicine today are a purchasable commodity," said Dr. Thompson. "Such discoveries must be bought and paid for. The time has passed when great discoveries in medicine can be made by untrained minds, and apart from laboratories equipped with modern instruments of precision.

"Tuberculosis and cancer, important as they are, are but two of the great unsolved problems. A beginning has been made with them, and with others, of equal importance, hardly even a beginning has been made.

Insanity May Be Cured, Too.

NOT only diseases of the body, but diseases of the mind, are subjects of medical research. It is no more unreasonable to believe that medical men will some day learn to cure insanity than to believe that they will learn to cure tuberculosis or Bright's disease.

"Up to a very recent time the resources devoted to research work have been small, and the men most skilled in such work have had to spend much of their time and energy in teaching. In spite of these drawbacks, great achievements have been recorded. In view of these achievements, one may well hesitate to say that there is anything now hidden from medical science, which reasearch will not reveal. But we cannot set a time for any particular discovery, or an amount of money which must be spent to bring it about.

"No one need fear—or hope—that there will not be ample use for the Campbell funds in research work, no matter how long the university may have to wait for them. There will always be work of this character to do. New diseases, or, at any rate, diseases which are not now recognised as diseases, are likely to appear. The hookworm is a case in point. The first announcements of scientists as to the hookworm were treated as a huge joke. A certain class of people in some of the Southern states were considered simply lazy—born tired—and that was all there was to it, until science proved that there was much more to it. Now, with an endowed commission at work, it is likely that the hookworm disease will be wiped out, and will become a closed incident in medical history.

Replies of College Deans to the Post-Dispatch's Inquiry Indicate That It Is the Opinion of the Profession That There Is Hardly Any Limit to the Dreams That May Be Indulged as to the Effectiveness of This Fortune in Eradicating Disease, Prolonging Life and Increasing Efficiency

"We have now learned so much about tuberculosis that we could wipe tuberculosis out with hygienic measures, if those measures could be strictly enforced. We have learned much about the tubercle bacillus, but we have not found the serum that will destroy that bacillus in the human body.

Great Scourges and Their Cures.

"IN the case of some diseases the cure has been known before much has been learned about the nature of the disease. We knew that quinine would cure malaria, and that mercury would cure certain forms of blood poison, before we knew what the organisms causing those diseases were. In the case of tuberculosis, on the other hand, we have discovered the organism, but not the cure.

"The Phipps Institute, in Philadelphia, is perhaps doing more in research work on tuberculosis than is being done anywhere else in the United States at present.

"In our understanding of cancer, there has been great advancement. We have learned that cancer is a growth, and we are now able, as we were not formerly able, to recognize its first manifestations, whenever they appear on an external surface. This makes cure, by surgery or otherwise, possible in many cases. The biological facts about cancer are being learned, and I believe they will all be learned, but it will take time and money, time and money. Important research work in cancer is being done in the St. Louis Skin and Cancer Hospital, chiefly by Dr. Leo Loeb.

"The founding of the Rockefeller Institute in New York, in 1901, gave medical research a great impetus in this country. One has only to compare the death rate from epidemic cerebro-spinal meningitis, today, with that of 15 years ago, to determine whether this institution has justified its existence.

"The field of research is so vast that the work has hardly done more, thus far, than to skim the surface of communicable diseases. An epidemic is dramatic and the death of, say 100 persons, within a week alarms everyone and causes a demand for protective measures.

"But when the 100 persons die at different times through a year or so, from arterial sclerosis, cirrhosis of the liver or Bright's disease, public attention is not attracted.

"Arterial sclerosis, or hardening of the arteries, is a common manifestation of old age. But when it occurs in persons of 30 or 40 years, it is in the nature of an infectious disease.

Even Old Age May Be Routed.

"TO prevent arterial sclerosis in the old would be, in part, to conquer old age, and it would vastly increase the efficiency of many persons past middle life. Research has done little in this direction thus far, but as to arterial sclerosis in younger persons, it has established certain facts. It has shown, among other things, that the germs of typhoid fever, remaining in the blood, sometimes cause this disease.

"But if the arteries could be kept from growing old, there remain the problems presented by the ductless glands, the thyroid, the pituitary and the suprarenals, all as important to life as the heart itself. If the secretions of these glands become disordered, the danger is as great as if the lungs or the heart were impaired. All this is a field hardly touched in effective research work up to the present.

"Then consider the frightful loss to humanity through insanity and impaired mentality. Compare the size of our city sanitarium, or insane asylum, with the city hospital, and compare the number of the insane, here and elsewhere, with the number of sick, and it will be found that more are sick in mind than are sick in body.

"This is just as truly a field for research work as any other. With the exception of paresis, nearly all the forms of insanity are a mystery to us. The field of psychosis is an undeveloped one. Two psychopathic institutes, that in Boston and the one connected with Johns Hopkins in Baltimore, have engaged in this study of mental diseases.

"It is to be hoped that the St. Louis University medical school of the future, and other great institutions, will not only strive for these great discoveries in their laboratories, but will place the profession of medicine on a much higher plane

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

BROOKLYN, Mass., June 20.—Munificent gift, wisely administered will make St. Louis one of the great medical centers of the world. It will help her citizens and the medical profession of the whole State.

Cornell Head Says Gift Should Awaken Other Rich Men to Mankind's Needs.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ITHACA, N. Y., June 20.—It is impossible to estimate the benefits which may result from the bequest of James Campbell. Investigations along the lines of preventive medicines will offer great opportunities for years to come to discover the causes of diseases and the means of arresting them will repay the best efforts of many eminent investigators.

This gift should enable St. Louis University to obtain the services of trained men and to place at their disposal unlimited resources for their research. It should also stimulate investigation in other institutions and ought immediately to call to the attention of other wealthy men the needs of medical schools for large endowments for medical education and research.

We must have many thoroughly trained investigators prepared to undertake advanced research, opportunities for which will be opened up by this gift, and there should be similar opportunities in other large cities. The greatest good to mankind will come first from preventing disease and when this is impossible from the discovery of a cure.

Disease May Be All but Eliminated in 50 Years, Says the Dean of Tulane.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 20.—In the light of medical advance in the past 50 years, no man can divine the medical state of human society 50 years hence. With genius working for discovery and with such unlimited means to carry out new ideas many revolutions of current opinion may come. The future points to the obliteration of epidemic and contagious diseases and in another generation institutes of health to keep the well sound will take the place of hospitals, which will survive only for the care of those who suffer from accidents or new diseases of society and advanced civilization. The era of hygiene will have arrived through perfected preventive medicine.

"Difficult to Say Today How the Bequest May Be Used 50 Years From Now."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

CINCINNATI, June 20.—In answer to your telegram as to how the twenty or thirty million dollars of the Campbell endowment to the St. Louis University, available fifty or seventy years from now, can best be expended in the interest of hospitals and the advancement of the science of medicine and surgery, it is difficult to say at this time, but devoting the income to the discovery of the cause and finding the specific for every disease still unconquered at that date in conjunction with teaching the people with preventive medicine and enforcing the laws governing same would be using the gift to the best possible advantage as we see it now.

"Will Enable the University to Duplicate the Work of the Rockefeller Institute."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, June 20.—Heartiest congratulations to St. Louis University from Northwestern University Medical School. Enormous endowment enables the school to duplicate experimental work of Rockefeller Institute, New York; to build up superlative teaching institution and send out highest type of physician. The greatest, most probable achievement will be in clinical line, working out scientific problems on practical subjects, giving direct results to patients and public and paying sufficient salary to brilliant clinical men to hold them in research.

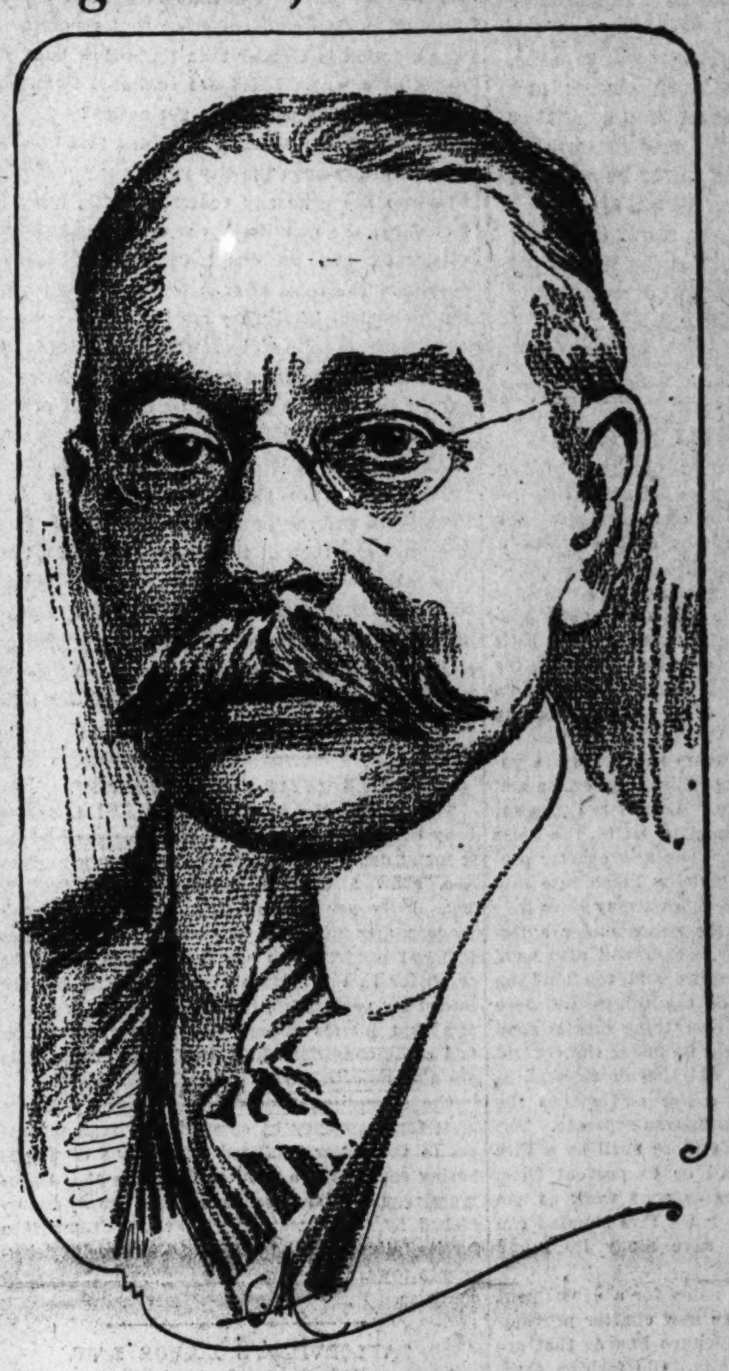
"Labor Exemption Clauses in New Anti-Trust Bills Unamerican Class Legislation," Declares Wickersham

Attorney-General of President Taft's Administration Says Proposed Legislation Is in Clear Conflict With the Ideals of Freedom Set Forth in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution.



GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM.

IT is admitted by both their proponents and their opponents that the labor exemption clauses of the new anti-trust bills, now pending in Congress and which have already been adopted in the House, constitute the most radical industrial legislation that has been projected in this country. On the one hand, it is maintained that these clauses are necessary to enable labor unions to fight their battles with corporations on equal terms, while on the other it is protested that they are in defiance of the spirit of the Declaration of Independence and the American Constitution. One of the strongest opponents of the exemption plan is George W. Wickersham of New York, Attorney-General in President Taft's Cabinet and successful prosecutor of the Oil and Tobacco Trusts. His views, written for the Post-Dispatch and the New York World, follows:

By GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM.
Former Attorney-General of the United States.

THE bill (H. R. 15,657) which passed the House on June 15, provided, in section 7:

> That nothing contained in the anti-trust laws shall be construed to forbid the existence and operation of fraternal, labor, consumers, agricultural or horticultural organizations, orders or associations instituted for the purpose of mutual help and not having capital stock or conducted for profit, or to forbid or restrain individual members of such organizations, orders or associations from carrying out the legitimate objects thereof be held or construed to be illegal combinations or conspiracies in restraint of trade under the anti-trust laws.

It will be observed that the language employed in this bill not only provides that nothing in the anti-trust laws shall be taken to forbid the existence and operation of labor organizations for mutual self-help, but that they shall not be construed to forbid or restrain such organizations or their members from carrying out, NOT "THE LAWFUL OBJECTS THEREOF," BUT THE "LEGITIMATE OBJECTS THEREOF." The legitimate object of an organization is the natural or logical purpose for which it is formed. As the organization of laborers for the purpose of mutual help is made lawful, any logical or natural means which they may adopt for the purposes of helping themselves are by this act given legality.

If the first clause of the section stood alone, the fact that labor organizations were declared lawful could not be construed to authorize them or their members to carry out the objects of their organization by unlawful means. But this consequence is expressly removed by the provision that the anti-trust laws shall not be taken to forbid or restrain individual members of such organizations from carrying out the legitimate objects thereof. In general, the law punishes the carrying out of an unlawful purpose by any means, lawful or unlawful; and the carrying out of a lawful purpose by unlawful means. The natural meaning of the clause under consideration is to make lawful acts of members of these organizations done to carry out the purposes which this bill declares "legitimate," even if the acts in themselves are unlawful.

"Sop to Public Sentiment."

WHATEVER doubts might otherwise exist on this point are removed by section 18 of the bill, which, after providing that no restraining order or injunction shall be granted in a case between employers and employes, etc., unless necessary to prevent irreparable injury to property, etc., enacts as follows:

> And no such restraining order or injunction shall prohibit any person or persons from terminating any relation of employment, or from ceasing to perform any work or labor, or from recommending, or persuading others by peaceful means so to do; or from attending at or near a house or place where any person resides or warks, or carries on business or happens to be for the purpose fully obtaining or communicating information, or of peacefully persuading any persons to work or to abstain from working; or from ceasing to patronize or to employ any party to such dispute or from recommending, advising or persuading others by peaceful means so to do; or from paying or giving to, or withholding from, any person engaged in such dispute, any strike benefits or other moneys or things of value; or from peacefully assembling at any place in a lawful manner, or for lawful purposes; or for doing any act or thing which might lawfully be done in the absence of such dispute by any party thereto; nor shall any of the acts specified in this paragraph be considered or held unlawful.

The words "peaceful," "peacefully" and "peaceably," emphasized in this paragraph, constitute the sop to public sentiment which was intended to sugar this dose for the public consumption. The provision, in effect, legalizes the secondary boycott. To appreciate its full effect, let us turn to the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the famous Danbury Hat Case (Loewe vs. Lawler, 208 U. S., 274) and see what was there decided and how this new law would operate in such a case.

The facts set up in the complaint in that case, which the court held made out a cause of action within the Sherman law, were that the plaintiffs were manufacturers of hats in Danbury, Conn., having a factory at that place where they manufactured a hat which they shipped to purchasers in some twenty states other than Connecticut, a very small proportion of their output being consumed in Connecticut. The defendants, according to the statement in the opinion of the Court, "were members of a vast combination called the United Hatters of North America, comprising about 9000 members and including a large number of subordinate unions, and were combined with some 1,400,000 others into another association known as the American Federation of Labor," of which they were members and whose members resided in all the places in the several states where the wholesale dealers in hats and their customers resided and did business; that defendants were "engaged in a combined scheme and effort to force all manufacturers of fur hats in the United States, including the plaintiffs, against their will and their previous policy of carrying on their business, to organize their workmen in the departments of making and finishing, in each of their factories, into an organization, to be part and parcel of the said combination, known as the United Hatters of North America, or as the defendants and their confederates term it, to unionize their shops, with the intent thereby to control the employment of labor in and the operation of said factories, and to subject the same to the direction and control of persons, other than the owners of the same, in a manner extremely onerous and distasteful to such owners, and to carry out such scheme, effort and purpose, by restraining and destroying the interstate trade and commerce of such manufacturers, by means of intimidation of and threats made to such manufacturers and their customers in the several states, of boycotting them, their product and their customers, using therefor all the powerful means at their command, as aforesaid, until such time as, from the damage and loss of business resulting therefrom, the said manufacturers should yield to the said demand to unionize their factories."

According to the complaint, the conspiracy or combination was so far progressed that out of 82 manufacturers of this country engaged in the production of fur hats, 70 had accepted the terms and acceded to the demand that the shop should be conducted in accordance, so far as conditions of employment were concerned, with the will of the American Federation of Labor. The local union demanded of plaintiffs that they should unionize their shop under peril of being boycotted by this combination, which demand defendants declined to comply with. Thereupon the American Federation of Labor, acting through its official organ and through its organization, declared a boycott.

THE provisions in the bill under consideration are intended to prevent any employer from recovering damages in the future for loss or injury resulting to him by the destruction of his business by "peaceable" means, such as those adopted by the United Hatters of North America described in the Danbury hatters' case.

The bill is an example of undisguised class legislation. If the "legitimate object" of an association of the character described in Section 7 is to prevent any person from successfully conducting business unless he complies with the rules and requirements of that organization, this bill would make legal any act short of physical violence to which the organization may deem it expedient to resort for the purpose of compelling acquiescence in its requirements. IT WOULD BE DIFFICULT TO FIND AN EXAMPLE OF A CLEARER CONFLICT BETWEEN A LAW AND THE IDEALS OF AMERICAN FREEDOM AS EXPRESSED IN THE DELARATION OF INDEPENDENCE AND THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

Representative Henry of Texas, speaking in support of this bill in the House of Representatives on June 1, called section 18, above quoted, "a bill of rights establishing a 'new freedom' for labor," and he said it was "written into solemn laws to endure as a Magna Charta for those who toil and produce for the balance of mankind."

Bills of rights in the past have been enacted for the benefit of all the people, not for the benefit of restricted classes of the people. The "new freedom" gives to particular classes the right to terrorize others. The old freedom, the freedom secured by Magna Charta and the Bill of Rights, endeavored to secure liberty to all the people under the law applying to all.

The Declaration of Independence proclaimed that all men were endowed by their Creator "with certain inalienable rights; that among them are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; that to secure these rights governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."

The "New Freedom," proclaimed by Mr. Henry and embodied in the legislation under consideration would modify this to read that all men are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, except in so far as labor organizations may conclude that such rights interfere with their purpose and to the extent that they do interfere no one is entitled to them.

In the Northern Securities case, Mr. Justice Harlan said that the anti-trust act forbade only combination which by its necessary operation destroyed or restricted free competition between those engaged in interstate commerce. The rule established by the bill under consideration expressly enacts that any combination of laborers or farmers and anything which such a combination may do to carry out its purposes shall be lawful, even though its necessary operation destroys or restricts free competition among those engaged in interstate commerce. In other words, there is one law of combination for employers and another law of combination for employe, and thus is it sought to be enacted in this land a rule of class foreign to every principle that has been

IF the "legitimate object" of an association of the character described in Section 7 is to prevent any person from successfully conducting business unless he complies with the rules and requirements of that organization, this bill would make legal any act short of physical violence to which the organization may deem it expedient to resort for the purpose of compelling acquiescence in its requirements. — Former Attorney-General Wickersham.

STORY OF THE CHARTER

No. 7. Public Safety and Public Welfare.

FEW voters of today were old enough to vote in 1876, when the present charter was adopted. Three-fourths of the voters of today were not born in 1876.

In a thousand ways the needs of St. Louis have outgrown the ideas of the men of an older generation who made the present charter for a little St. Louis. We need a new charter to fit the times. We need a charter made on up-to-date lines. We have learned a lot about governing a city since 1876.

We are going to have home rule. We are going to have control of our police, our excise and our election departments. Under the present charter if home rule were given us by the State today we could not use it. The new charter provides the machinery for putting home rule into force as soon as the State says we may have it.

The new charter puts the police under a Department of Public Safety, which will also have charge of the excise, the fire and the building divisions. This is one of the things we have learned in 38 years—that everything that is good for the public safety should be under the control of one department. The old charter says nothing about the police or excise and makes the fire and the building departments separate. The new charter also says that there shall be a Fire Marshal whose work shall be to prevent fires. Our Fire Department does as good work as can be done putting out fires; but a Fire Marshal can prevent many fires and save many lives and thousands of dollars.

Public safety is a good name for a department in an up-to-date city. The new charter provides for a number of Public Welfare Boards that are needed by an up-to-date city. Old fashion charter makers knew very little about public welfare. They thought a city required only streets and sewers and water and gas to be happy. Among the Public Welfare Boards we will have when the new charter is adopted are: A Board of Parole and Probation that shall look after young folk who violate the law; a Board of Children's Guardians that shall look after the poor orphans and worse than orphans who ought to have a chance to grow up to be honest, educated citizens, and a Board of Complaints that shall receive all your kicks against city officers and find out why those officers are not doing their duty.

RISK FOR U. S. RISES IN MEXICO.

By Frank Putnam.

Villa gets supreme command of the revolutionary army. Carranza retains control of civil and diplomatic relations and is titular head of the provisional government.

This division of authority and responsibility means Villa's genius for action in the field will have free play. It means he won't grant any more concessions to get quick financial accommodations.

To Huerta it means the hastening of the hour when he must fight Villa for his life in Mexico City—or evade it by provoking a war with the United States.

If Uncle Sam can keep out of the fray for a few weeks longer, it is better than an even bet Villa will "clean up" clear down to the capital city and lodge the Constitutionalist government in the national palace.

Both the great oil interests—Cowdray's of England and Standard of the United States—dread this. Both would infinitely prefer to have the United States take charge. Cowdrey is in actual partnership with the Diaz family—Porfirio and his women folk own large shares of the Cowdray corporation.

Standard has believed it could deal with Villa, the soldier, reckless of everything but tearing down the usurper's government and restoring the land to the peons. Standard has believed Villa would suppress Carranza. Standard has known it couldn't hope for more than a fair field from Carranza. Carranza is conservative, but his highest hope is to save the wealth of Mexico for the Mexican people. He hates the plundering foreign concessionaire even worse than Villa does. And he knows better than Villa the enormous value of the concessions for which the foreign corporations are contending.

Washington's task, of umpiring the fight without getting drawn into it, is made much more difficult by what has just taken place between Villa and Carranza. If Taft or Roosevelt were in the presidency, it would be easy to forecast prompt armed intervention by the Americans. With Wilson in the White House—and remembering his Mobile declaration—one may hope this country will escape the gulf of war that yawns before it south of the Rio Grande.

A NEST OF CORRUPTION.

A question of deeper importance than who holds the seat or draws the salary is emphasized anew in the conclusion of the Twelfth Congressional District contest by Congress.

Congressman Rucker is quoted as saying Friday on the floor of the House:

> I state as my judgment, that there has not been an honest congressional election held in the Fifth Ward of St. Louis in 12 years. In 14 years there have been at least six contests. In every one, including this one, fraud was charged and proved to have been perpetrated by the political bosses of that ward.

How do the residents of the Fifth Ward relish being constantly held up to the country as corrupt? How do the residents in general of the Twelfth District relish sharing that reputation? The question is broader than that—How does St. Louis as a whole relish the continual flaunting of its election frauds before the nation?

But the shame which a notorious nest of corruption draws upon the city is not the worst feature—we are primarily concerned with, and affected by, the evil itself, the crime against the electorate, and its direct demoralizing consequences. The roots of such foul growth go deep into municipal life. They are intricately tangled with many other social growths that extend beneath and beyond ward and district boundaries.

They can only be torn out by the revolt of the city, its people and their functionaries, as a whole.

Civic conscience must be focused upon the Fifth Ward and the Twelfth District. The August primaries and the fall elections will afford a test of whether corruption shall continue by public consent, indifference or default. The eyes of publicity will be sharply turned on Twelfth District activities and conditions. It remains for citizens and their police and election and prosecuting officials to do the real work of reform.

JAILS UNFIT FOR OCCUPANCY.

The report of the Corrections and Charities body that Missouri almshouses, in many of which it found deplorable conditions only a few months ago, show a decided improvement, is gratifying. Fifty per cent of them are credited with modern appointments. However, in 20 counties indigent unfortunates are still farmed out to be cared for in the private households that bid the lowest for performing the service. This is a system that invites abuses and scandal. Sanitary and other conditions in a number of county jails are also reported to be disgraceful.

The suggestion that counties whose jails are unfit for occupancy be compelled to send prisoners to the better equipped institutions of neighboring counties is a good one. A test of the progressive, enlightened sentiment of a county is furnished by the humanity with which it provides for its failures in the battle of life and its delinquents toward the law. The improvement should continue.

TAYLORVILLE'S LIQUOR LAW.

Among other stringent provisions in a new liquor ordinance just adopted at Taylorville, Ill., is one providing $200 fine for any citizen who keeps any sort of intoxicants on the sideboard or in the medicine chest of his home. Sumptuary legislation having exhausted practically all available devices in restricting the traffic, its continuance on the theory of controlling the acts of individuals is perhaps logical. But a law that crosses the threshhold of the home and prescribes what a man shall do there and what he shall keep there is likely to make even prohibitionists gasp until they get used to it.

Reform by meddlesome interference is making progress in this country.

POLICE AND FREE SPEECH.

At the meeting of the Association of Police Chiefs at Grand Rapids President Richard Sylvester in his annual address recommended restrictions on free speech. He declared that the privilege is so abused, especially by foreign residents, as to endanger the country.

Maj. Sylvester did not explain the practical method by which restrictions applied to foreigners would be prevented from applying also to citizens. At the same meeting Chief Charles Schastian of Los Angeles predicted that aviation corps will soon be added to all metropolitan departments. The aeroplane can be made as useful to the police force as to the army, he said, and the aerial patrolman or fly cop will soon be put-put-putting regularly over beats in the air.

Police officials are not unappreciative of modern, up-to-date equipment. Why are so many of them unappreciative of the helpfulness of modern ideas and policies in the practical administration of their departments? Medieval influence is shown by apprehensions relative to the broadest latitude in free speech.

Free speech is a safety valve. Time and again it has been shown that to close it is perilous. No abuse of the privilege is comparable to the abuses invited by its denial.

CHARIOTS OF FIRE.

The description of the Rodman Wanamaker transatlantic flying machine, in a recent Post-Dispatch, with its tanks containing 300 gallons of gasoline and 25 gallons of cylinder oil, brings to mind the chariot of fire of the Scriptures, in which the Prophet Elijah is said to have been caught up to heaven. It is fire, and fire alone, that will waft Lieut. Porte and his mechanician across the Atlantic, if they succeed in making the flight.

Three tanks of gasoline, of 150, 60 and 50 gallons capacity are to be placed in one compartment of the little boat, separated from the human freight by only a thin partition; while four 25-gallon tanks will be placed in the four corners of the tiny cabin itself. And eight feet above, pumping their liquid fuel from these reservoirs, will be the two big 100-horsepower engines spitting fire at each explosion like ancient dragons, as they drink up the hydro-carbon and transform it into energy.

It is worthy of note that this huge machine will be painted red all over, not to make its similitude to a dragon of fable more complete, but simply because red is the color that can be seen best at a distance. It will be a wonderful sight, and he who is not stirred by it has no spirit of romance in him.

The Post-Dispatch has the promise of certain secrets which Lieut. Porte has discovered, by which he expects to make this transatlantic flight successful. It will keep its readers fully informed on all future developments.

"IMMORAL FASHIONS."

There are no such things as immoral fashions, but the General Federation of Women's Clubs thinks there are and the Chicago convention has been wrestling with the bogy.

An immoral fashion is an anomaly and self-contradiction. Fashion is a queen that can do no wrong. Right does not make custom but custom makes right, or propriety, in the matter of dress, and has done so since the wearing of clothes at all became customary. This means that what most of the people do in the same period is considered right for that time. If a perfectly decent woman in the mode of 1914 should meet a stylish lady of the 'Fifties, each would be properly shocked at the other. But the other ladies of their respective periods would vote them models of sartorial propriety.

Usage and fashion have put the seal of propriety, or "morality," upon a thousand matters of dress or undress, of uncertain character and doubtful origin. Custom has made moral that which was immoral, and it has made immoral that which was moral. When Queen Victoria first "did her hair up" her contemporaries found the effect "startling." If one of the other ladies had first attempted it, it would have been voted shocking and indecent. But promptly they all followed the Queen and showed their ears with perfect modesty.

What is commonplace can never be conspicuous, whether it be clothes or none at all. Nor does it make a particle of difference that an outre style is alleged to have been designed for the half-world of Paris—the which is mostly myth, showing how even fictions follow a sort of fashion, rule or habit. The point is that what's what is what because the mass of women adopt it, and it is "immoral" only before or afterwards.

THE OUT-PATIENT HEN.

To Dr. Philipa Skrainka's informative pen in the Interstate Medical Journal we are indebted for a moving narrative. Recently a small boy fetched a hen that had a broken leg to the out-patient department of the Bolingbroke Hospital, London, which is supported by almoners. The Samaritan-souled house surgeon gave it attention, heedless of the fact that the hospital was being supported by private contributions and was not a Poor-Law infirmary, a technical but a real distinction.

The London medical world is agitating the question whether the house surgeon had a right to treat the hen free of charge, and Dr. Skrainka comments, "A bold, bad precedent this, for it might lead to patients frequenting the out-patient department, now that the hen has received such humane treatment free of cost, and insisting on the same privileges, despite what the almoners may think of this sort of an invasion."

But what should not be overlooked in the hen's case, remarks "The Hospital" (London), is that it was a casualty case, and adds this comment:

> It is clear that aid must be rendered, abuse or no abuse, to casualty cases, even if, as in the case of the hen, there is no doubt of the ineligibility of the patient if the letter of the regulations is to be observed; and, secondly, that humanity and considered help for patients, however troublesome in themselves, and indeed irregular, are still more economical in the long run than any mere saving system.

And Dr. Skrainka neatly points the tale with this conclusion:

> That the incident occurred in England and not in this country is very fortunate indeed, for had it happened here no thought would have been given the matter, since we are too busy with our own little affairs to recognize the true significance of whether a hen should be treated as a charity case or a fee be exacted from its owner. But since we get so many of our practical ideas from England, let us hope that this little hen story will bear fruit with us, and that the next time a casualty case, that is unmistakably "charity," occurs in close proximity to a "private" hospital, the stranger will be taken in on the strength of the humane treatment accorded a hen in an English hospital.

We cheerfully commend this hen story to a careful reading by all hospital managements and functionaries high and low.

George W. Wickersham helped on the return of the prodigals to the fold by declaring Mr. Roosevelt to be Mr. Wilson's greatest asset. He is not Mr. Wilson's greatest, but it must be confessed that the Colonel is rapidly approaching the stage where he is an asset of value to any party to which he is opposed.

PRAGMATIC PASTORS.

What is a pastor or shepherd to do if some of the sheep refuse to eat, though the grass be never so succulent? That is the problem facing certain British pastors—"shepherds of souls." And some of them have replied, with regard to the sheep, "Let them die." Says one: "Let them start at once and make up for lost time."

That looks heartless, but what is a poor, puzzled shepherd to do in a case of the kind? The injunction given him was: "If thine enemy hunger, feed him." But nothing was said, categorically, we believe, as to the step to be taken if the hungry one refuses to eat. In fact, if the hungry one kicks and scratches and bites when food is forced upon it. Isn't it highly pragmatic, that is, tending to bring about satisfactory results, to let the fasting one fast to extinction? Won't the other sheep stop kicking?

Unfortunately, Christianity is not pragmatism. And, unfortunately, there is an alternative in the present case. Instead of doing those things or leaving these things undone that cause foolish sheep to fast, why not treat the sheep so that they will be satisfied and not kick, bite, scratch or refuse food?

In fact, there is an injunction to these shepherds that would solve their difficulty. It reads something in this wise: "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, even so do unto them." And it covers every phase of conduct.

THE FIRST THRUSH OF SUMMER.

(Republished by Request.)

'TWAS the first thrush of Summer. How often, how often
Had other such songs when the sun redly sets
Upwelled in the soft glow of even to soften
The heart that forgets—
A tenderness sweet as the song he intoned
Upon the still air when the night was come near
In time when the heart in its opulence owned
So much that was dear.

'TWAS the first thrush of Summer. I heard his sweet singing
Across the green fields at the close of the day,
And memory stirred at the sound of that ringing
And beautiful lay—
A memory sweet as the song that he sang—
Of years that are gone, and of friends that were dear
In time when another such roundelay rang
In the spring of the year.

YOUR INCOME TAX.

Your income tax must be paid by June 30. Failing that, you will be sold for taxes, and will be held by the buyer until redeemed. If you get yourself in this fix, don't count too much upon your wife. She may redeem you, and she may not. If you are in your wife's name, that may be a help, but don't be too sanguine. The average woman is much more interested these days in reading her title clear to equal rights than in anything she has been in the habit of having or has probably wearied of seeing around. Trust to your instinct as a man, and pay your income tax. The women are nice people, but they are the women.

Harry Vardon has won the British open golf championship for the sixth time. He first won it in 1896, 18 years ago, when he was 26. That is the advantage which golf has over all other outdoor sports. One lasts. Perfection is not for a day, but forever. Harry Vardon will still be a champion when most people will not be able to recall whether it was Hans or Richard Wagnre who wrote "Parsifal."

This is the longest day of the year. Where we are expecting him to fall daily, it is hard to see how Huerta can hold out until sundown.

The American policy of keeping the women quiet somehow has obvious advantages over the British plan.

He Can Prove It.

From the Delineator.

Rumor credits Dr. Eliot, former president of Harvard University, with saying he knows he is younger than he was half a century ago, and can prove it. When he was a tutor in the college, shortly after his graduation, he used to overhear the students referring to him as "old Eliot." Yet, while walking home not long ago about midnight from an entertainment, he overheard a freshman behind him say:

"I wonder what's kept Charlie out so late tonight."

AFTER THE ARCTIC SECRETS.

From the New York Evening Post.

It is not to be supposed that the loss of Stefansson's ship in the ice, after being knocked about by Arctic currents for four months, will bring to a stop the task Stefansson has set himself—his search for a great land mass north of the North American coast. For definite results Stefansson's earlier work along the northern edge of the continent has been the most fruitful of any recent Arctic exploration. The discovery of the North Pole and the tragedy of Scott in the Antarctic have been of superior dramatic quality, but the general public carries away from the record of such achievements the impression of a magnificent but rather empty struggle by man against the elements. The value to science of most polar work is problematical; at any rate, the results very seldom reach the average reader. Stefansson, on the other hand, brought from the North a human interest story which has stirred the imagination. Just how white his white Eskimos are is of importance secondary to the fact itself that some form of human society goes on in those dreary latitudes.

BLIND WATCHMAKERS.

From Tit-Bits.

Blind people—those who have been born blind—are, as is well known, exceedingly clever with their fingers, but it is not often that we hear of a watchmaker who was born blind. And yet there have been instances of the kind.

A famous blind watchmaker lived at Holbeach, in Lincolnshire. His name was Rippin, and, although completely blind, he could take to pieces and put together again watches of the most delicate construction with the greatest ease and in quicker time than most watchmakers who have the advantage of good eyesight. On one occasion some of the tiny wheels and screws used in his trade were stolen from him, but the thief was captured with the property on his person, and Rippin identified them by his delicate sense of touch.

A Barnstaple watch and clock maker brought up his blind son to his trade, and the young man proved so skillful that on more than one occasion he detected faults in timepieces which other tradesmen had failed to discover.

GETTING RID OF TOIL.

From Collier's.

We all know something of labor-saving machinery in a vague way, but we are not likely to have any idea of the ceaseless, scientific, wide-reaching improvement that goes on in these devices. Magnet cranes that will pick up and carry five tons of loose scrap iron; one-man-coil-handling bridges that will unload 500 tones of coal in an hour, so that you can see the ship rise in the water; lathes in which 10 tools cut into two pieces of steel at one time and one man runs two such machines—these are only three of the new weapons we are now using to conquer the world of things. What are we going to do with it?

Life's Simple Formula.

Our Recurring Illusions.

From the Columbus Journal.

Another pathetic little figure of everyday life is the way a man of sedentary pursuits will start out on his day off oppressed by the haunting fear that his new six-quart minnow pail isn't anywhere near big enough to hold an adequate supply of bait for all the fish he might catch.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

MRS. S. P. R.—Cherry preserves: Stone and stem cherries, saving all the juice. Weigh the fruit and to every pound of this allow a pound of granulated sugar. Put into a preserving kettle the juice and sugar, and simmer for a half hour; then, when the syrup thickens, add the cherries, cook until the syrup is very thick, pour into jars and seal.

MRS. G. W. A.—Javelle water, so popular a bleaching agent with our grandmothers, is made by pouring one quart of cold water over one-quarter of a pound of chloride of lime, stir with a stick thoroughly, allow to settle, then pour off the clear liquid into a pitcher. Dissolve two ounces of washing soda in one pint of boiling water and when cold pour off the top, adding it to the other liquid. Keep in glass stoppered bottles.

Mrs. E. V. S.—If you are going to California, you want the recipe that follows. If you stay where you are, substitute green plums, ordinary well grown, but not ripe, for olives in the recipe. To pickle olives: A can of lye to 10 gallons olives; dissolve lye and mix very well with the water (enough to cover the fruit) before putting in olives. Otherwise, the alkali may blister them. Leave in lye four days. Then cut into an olive to see if pit is colored. If so, the lye has penetrated to the core. Lay in fresh cold water to extract lye. Leave in this 10 days, changing water three times a day. A housewife says: Years ago I put up some olives and to freshen them let the hose run slowly into the barrel all the time, pusing the hose clear down to the bottom of the barrel. When freshened, put into brine of one pound of table salt to one gallon of water. After three or four days change the brine to one and one-half pound salt to one gallon of water. Brine should be boiled, then cooled before using.

W. R.—To make lemonade at its best the water and sugar should be boiled together to make a syrup. Allow half pound sugar to each quart water, boil together five minutes, then strain and set aside to cool. To this quantity syrup allow four good sized, juicy lemons. Wash well, then rub the rind of two of them with a few lumps sugar until you have extracted the oil. Add to the syrup. Squeeze the juice from all the lemons and add to the prepared syrup. Chill and serve. Another recipe: For lemonade select lemons, wash carefully and roll until soft. Allow three lemons to each quart of water and the thinly peeled rind of one, with three or four tablespoons sugar, according to taste. Having put the rind of the lemon in a cup, cover with a little boiling water and let stand a few moments to get the peculiar zest of the lemon. Extract the juice from the lemons, using a glass lemon squeezer and rejecting pulp and seeds. Have ready freshly boiling water, pour over the lemons, add the strained water from the shredded yellow peel, cover and leave to cool. After it is cold, set on the ice until ready to serve. In serving add a little cracked ice and a strawberry or slice of lemon to each glass.

O'BRYAN AND HOTCHKISS.—There is some mistake about the great value of the silver pesos coined under Emperor Maximilian. You may get any number of these from a St. Louis dealer at [illegible] cents each. They are worth but a small fraction more than their bullion value. Newspaper correspondents are often imposed upon with stories of the extraordinary value of coins of little or no value.

R. C. B.—We find this statement: Vice-President Sherman died Oct. 30, 1912, after his renomination. No provision was made by the Republican National Committee for nominating a successor, and that was not necessary, as the people did not vote for President and Vice-President direct, but for Republican and Democratic electors. In the election that followed Taft carried only two states, Vermont and Utah, and in the absence of any instructions the Taft electors of those states voted for Nicholas Murray Butler of New York for Vice-President.

BE-BEE.—Juniata is not Juanita. It is an Indian word meaning "they stay long," or "beyond the great bend." Juanita is a Spanish name, a diminutive of "Juana," in our language "Jane;" therefore "Juanita" means "little Jane." In the pronunciation "J" has the guttural aspiration of "H," which makes the name as spoken "Huanita." A term of derision has grown out of it. Juana, daughter of Ferdinand and Isabella, was out of her mind, and the Spanish people allude to her as "Juana la Loca," meaning "the insane." While the designation is not used with disrespect in this connection, we have the term "crazy Jane" used in descriptions of the tawdry and fantastic.

S. R. G.—Antidote for fleas—By John Phoenix: The following recipe from the writings of Miss Hannah More may be found useful: "In a climate where the attacks of fleas are a constant source of annoyance, any method which will alleviate them becomes a desideratum. It is, therefore, with pleasure I make known the following recipe, which I am assured has been tried with efficacy: Boil a quart of tar until it becomes quite thin. Remove the clothing, and before the tar becomes perfectly cool, with a broad, flat brush, apply a thin, smooth coating to the entire surface of the body and limbs. While the tar remains soft, the flea becomes entangled in its tenacious folds, and is rendered perfectly harmless; but it will soon form a hard, smooth coating, entirely impervious to his bite. Should the coating crack at the knee or elbow joints, it is merely necessary to retouch it slightly at those places. The whole coat should be renewed every three or four weeks. This remedy is sure, and having the advantage of simplicity and economy, should be generally known." So much for Miss More. A still simpler method of preventing the attacks of these little pests is one which I have lately discovered myself—in theory only—I have not yet put it into practice. On feeling the bite of a flea, thrust the part bitten immediately into boiling water. The heat of the water destroys the insect and instantly removes the pain of the bite. The Scientific American says: "It is almost impossible to drown fleas by dropping them into water, but soap and water will do for any flea." Thus is the flea the hobo among insects, for, dipped in tincture of green soap, he is dead beyond peradventure in two minutes."

Canal Tolls Bill Repeal

GREAT VICTORY FOR WILSON.

Philadelphia Public Ledger: The President's victory in the canal tolls repeal is the most significant he has won. His advocacy of repeal, he must have known, would split the well-disciplined majority, expose him to the attacks of jingoes and the yellow press throughout the nation, invite assault as a repudiator of the Baltimore platform, menace the popularity of the administration, and perhaps break its ascendancy in Congress, or even ruin the legislative program under way. There was little public demand for the repeal. Scarcely more than a corporal's guard could have been grouped to fight for it had a Congressman proposed it.

In the face of these staggering difficulties, despite the political danger of the program, the President took the chance. The objectors were argued out of court. He leaned on the "national honor" and Congress was ashamed not to vindicate it. And the great victory has been won without the forfeiture of even a contingent right in the canal.

NOT APPROVED.

Washington Post: When the President affixes his signature to a repeal of the tolls exemption law, he may be given the thanks of the owners of the Tehuantepec Railway of Mexico, the subsidized railways of Canada, the transcontinental railways of the United States, the subsidized shipping combines of Europe, the merchant marine interests of Great Britain, but he will not be entitled to nor will he receive the approval of the voters of the United States.

The Democratic party cannot exist as an ally of foreign or domestic transportation monopolies.

The rank and file of the Democratic party will stand by the platform. They will be found shoulder to shoulder with the patriotic men of other parties voting for the rights of the republic and in favor of the people as against combines and monopolies.

CAN BE AMENDED.

New Orleans Times-Picayune: Now that the thing is done—after months of debate and agitation that have neither resolved the doubts regarding the principles involved nor definitely ascertained the drift of public opinion—both sides should rejoice that a saving amendment was forced into the bill by the Senate. If Congress blundered by its surrender, the blunder, thanks to the amendment, is reparable. The reservation of national rights is so clear that the most skillful causist on the side of repeal cannot dispute it. If the bill had been passed in the shape in which it was driven through the House, any future attempt to assert our right to place the Panama Canal upon the same footing with other canals and waterways with respect to domestic commerce would have been met by the plea that Congress, by pleading guilty to the charge of treaty violation, had bound the nation for all time.

HEADS OFF A GRAB.

Chicago Tribune: The passage of tolls exemption repeal closes, at least for the time being, another stage in the perpetual fight against privilege. It saves the canal from exploitation. It heads off another subsidy grab.

That is its domestic significance.

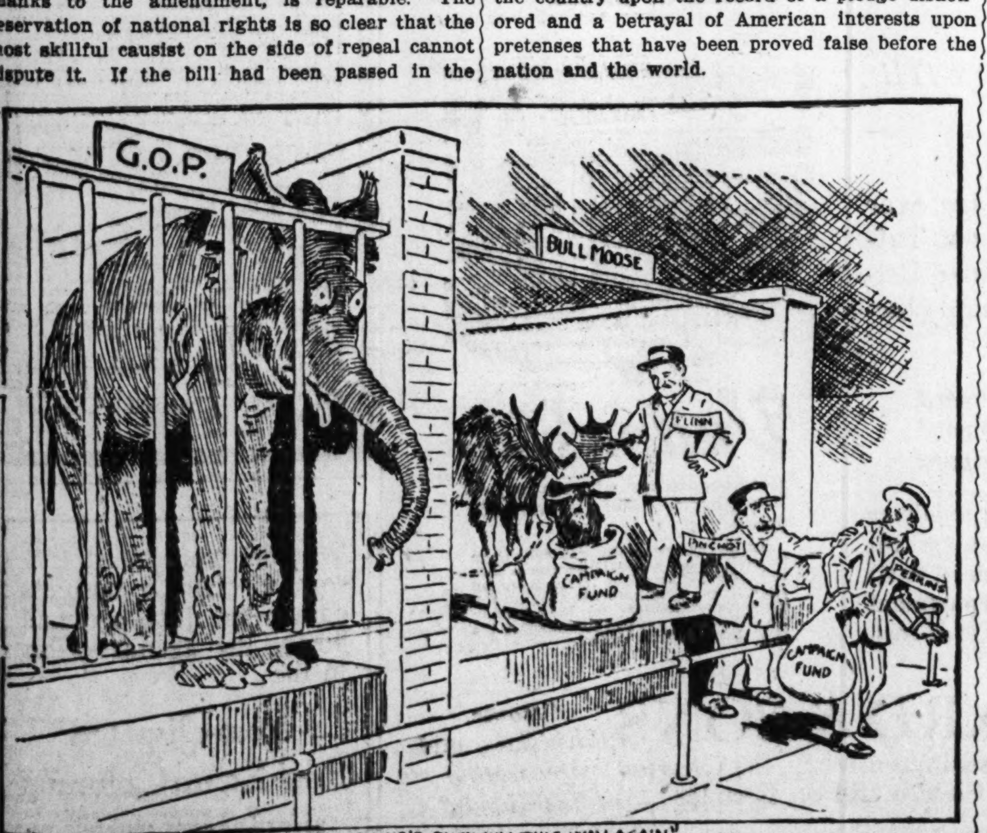
But back of this, or perhaps it may be said above it, is its international significance, for in spite of the Norris amendment, a device legally without effect, it represents an assurance to the world that the American nation guards jealously its honor and its reputation for good faith. Rather than seem to go back on its bond, rather than to quibble or wriggle or seek defense in legal technicality, it has brushed aside doubts and taken the straight course.

A RAILROAD VICTORY.

Philadelphia North American: The repeal is a tremendous victory for the transcontinental railroads, which fought for years the building of the canal and have now succeeded in destroying one of its chief purposes, which was to cheapen transportation between the east and west coasts of the country.

But this act has inflicted a far more grievous hurt than any of these. The plea of the President and its granting by Congress—the surrender of national interest, "right or wrong"—have wounded the national spirit. The administration has confessed to the world that it must pay a humiliating price for support in foreign affairs, and has put upon the nation the stigma of having attempted to wrong a friendly Government. No country can be truly great whose people have been led to doubt its honor or its ability to command just and respectful treatment from the world.

This is an issue which will not die. It is one which has more vitality than tariff or currency or any other economic matter, for it touches deeply the nation's honor. And this lesson will yet be learned by the party which must go before the country upon the record of a pledge dishonored and a betrayal of American interests upon pretenses that have been proved false before the nation and the world.



THE G O P—"WISH HE'D PUSH HIM THIS WAY AGAIN."
—DE MAR IN THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD.

Business Campaign Against Trust Bills

BUSINESS MEN SINCERE.

Indianapolis Star: If the business men of the country are appealing to their representatives, why not give them credit for sincerity, even if they were prompted by the larger interests? Why not consider that there may be some merit in the contention of "big business" if it appeals to people outside its ranks? At least, there is nothing reprehensible in a legitimate effort on the part of any one to secure the indorsement of public sentiment.

RIGHT OF SELF-DEFENSE.

Philadelphia Press: For the first time in the history of the country business is denied the right of self-defense. If business men come personally or send representatives to Congressmen in order to get some favorable considration for their menaced business they are an "insidious lobby." If they send letters and telegrams for the same purpose they are denounced with no less emphasis. The trust measures are pushed because the President so wills it. As a result profound business depression continues all over the country which is made no less actual and damaging by being termed "psychological."

INJURIOUS DELAY.

Philadelphia Record: The President is undoubtedly right in attributing the delay in acting on the trusts bill to the campaign against it conducted by many of the concerns at which it is aimed. They are ill-advised, however, for the bill represents the mature judgment of the country after years of discussion. The Republicans will be likely to attack it, but much of their own party has felt the imperative necessity of further legislation. Business concerns that would rather have less legislation complain of the indefiniteness of the Sherman law and will welcome more specific legislation and the substitution of a commission to prevent violations of the law as a substitute for the action of the courts in punishing violations.

ARE THE BILLS NECESSARY?

Pittsburg Dispatch: The interests affected by the legislation have a right to be heard, in a legitimate way. When those interests' strongest power lies in employing money to get up a protest, or a fake protest, it is likely to resort to means a little more than legitimate. Of course, the question whether men are out of employment now or not has very little to do with the issue before Congress. The question is whether the measures proposed will cure the evils that have been dominant in business and whether they are necessary. On these points there should be very careful consideration and deliberation.

Our impression is that some parts of the bills now pending in the Senate are desirable and will aid the development of free business, while other parts are unnecessary and may prove harmful.

NO PANACEA.

New York Evening Post: One general consideration, affecting this whole question, remains to be mentioned. It is that laws of this nature never meet expectations. They do not do so actually, and least of all politically. It seems to be the thought at Washington that the enactment of the trust bills would close the entire chapter of that kind of legislation. But it would be folly to imagine anything of the sort. Behind the panacea-man there always lurks another to affirm that this particular nostrum is valueless, and that the country will never be happy until he gets a chance to put his nostrum on the statute book. The bills referred to are plainly a pretty large borrowing from the Progressive platform. But does Mr. Wilson fancy that the Progressives will stop there? Already some of their leaders are agitating for the Government ownership of railroads. That sort of appetite is simply whetted by giving it only a part of its bill-of-fare.

WHY NOT ORGANIZE?

New York Sun: Why should not business men organize opposition to the President's anti-trust program if they consider it dangerous or even if they merely dislike it? Is the "new freedom" entirely a one-sided affair?

The President himself and a large and organized support are agitating vigorously for this legislation. Cabinet officers, certain members of both houses of Congress, uplifters in and out of office and sundry publications insist day in and day out on the beneficence and the urgency of the drastic regulation of business.

But when a New York business man, not an official of a great corporation, but just an ordinary citizen with the ordinary interests of citizenship at stake, invites others through the country in the same position with himself to join in remonstrance against the proposed new laws, the President at once sees in his action a conspiracy, "a combination of business interests" to thwart benevolent psychology.

REFERENDUM PROPOSED.

Philadelphia Inquirer: If the President is convinced that the country is with him and is ready to support his theoretical policies, why this burning desire on his part to push his anti-trust bills through before the adjournment of Congress?

If he is correct in his belief that all is well with the country; that the near-free trade tariff law is working out splendidly and that whatever business depression there is is "merely psychological," he need not fear for the results of the coming election. Congress has been working under high pressure. It is getting weary and would appreciate a vacation. The House has put through the anti-trust measures and the country understands them well enough to judge of their value. They can be discussed as among the campaign issues—coupled with the tariff and considered. If indorsed by the ballots of the people the Senate could and would adopt them next winter. Surely that would be time enough. There is no necessity for haste.

Or is it possible that the President is afraid to submit his policies to a referendum, and that is the reason why he insists on immediate action?

Perkins and Pinchot

"PERKINS HAS THE STRAW."

New York World: As the New York County Progressive truly remarks, in regard to the relative merits of Mr. Pinchot and Mr. Perkins, "Col. Roosevelt's advice and opinion will, of course, serve as a guide, as it has in all important matters;" but unless our studies of the Colonel have all been in vain, nothing serious will happen to a gentleman who is enough of a patriot to pay the freight on "a government OF, FOR AND BY THE PEOPLE."

The Colonel sometimes does bizarre things; but he never tries to make bricks without straw, and Perkins has the straw.

BULL MOOSE NEEDS PERKINS.

Savannah News: Col. Roosevelt is reported as saying at Madrid, when he heard of the Pinchot-Perkins row, that he didn't have much further use for Mr. Pinchot; that, in fact, he considered Pinchot radical to the point of foolishness. The Colonel, it seems, stands by Mr. Perkins. And it isn't surprising that he does. Throughout the campaign of 1912 Mr. Perkins stood by him, and that was a time when the Perkins checkbook was in frequent demand.

In an effort to throw oil on the troubled waters Miss Jane Addams is quoted as saying that she respects Mr. Pinchot's opinions, but that she thinks he has misjudged Mr. Perkins. So it seems that the Colonel and Miss Addams stand by Mr. Perkins, the man of millions. And the only fault that Mr. Pinchot has to find with Mr. Perkins is that the latter is in too close touch with the trusts. But doesn't the Colonel also believe in protecting and regulating big business?

A CHEERFUL VIEW.

Indianapolis Star: The outlook of Progressivism is bright because its success threatens no legitimate interest. The honest man does not want more than a square deal, but he wants that and is entitled to it. The Progressive party was organized to see that he gets it, and the party may be expected to grow steadily as the people realize that Progressivism is essentially humanitarian and not merely a new form of old-fashioned politics.

"SAME OLD PERKINS."

Milwaukee Sentinel: If the Pinchots and other celestial spirits of the "progressive" party feel themselves too great and good and pure to associate with Perkins, what about Flinn? Why this belated sense of spiritual superiority over their old chum and financial angel at Armageddon, anyhow? Is he not the same old Perkins?

The Colonel says he will attend to this matter when he returns from Spain. For a practical man, the choice between Perkins and Pinchot should be easy.

Meanwhile, Perkins utterly declines to be excommunicated by Pinchot because of his views about national incorporation and supervision (and, consequently, conservation) of great business combines, and so on. And, indeed, how can he be read out of the tabernacle on any such grounds? Why, his views about the trusts coincide with Roosevelt's doctrine and program in every particular? Who and what is Pinchot that he attempts to take the Colonel's right bower with a nine spot?

THE CRISIS IN ENGLAND.

Buffalo Times: Some are shouting of the hunger strikers, "Let them die!" They might as well say "Kill them!" It means the same thing. If one hunger striker were to perish of starvation in a British jail it would create a scandal—an outburst of indignant horror that would re-echo round the world. "Let them die" forsooth! Don't these advocates of allowing famine to become martyrdom know that Russia, the most tyrannical country on earth, doesn't dare let women hunger strikers die? The bare suggestion of a hunger strike of women within prison walls is enough to throw any Siberian jailer into a fit.

Yet the mobs must be suppressed. How to do it? Are women to be trained by police clubs—shot down with police revolvers? Are the soldiers to be called out and the suffragettes blown to pieces with grapeshot? Let any such catastrophe happen and England and civilization would be disgraced forever.

What, then, shall be done? If the remedy can't be found in the sane womanhood of England, we cannot imagine any adequate resource. Let the law-abiding elements of English suffragism no longer permit appropriation of this question by the lawless. The salvation of England rests with English women.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE WILL STAY.

Savannah News: As was expected, the woman suffrage law in Illinois was sustained by the Supreme Court of that State. Although the Court would not have hesitated to knock it out if it had thought it was unconstitutional, yet it may be said that when once women are given the vote they never again will be deprived of it. No step they take towards equal civil rights with men will ever be retraced. All the fighting over woman suffrage must occur before the granting of the ballot to women, for when that is done one time it is done for all time.

AS TO OBEYING.

Chicago Herald: In relegating the marriage ceremony to oblivion Dr. Anna Shaw says: "No woman obeys her husband." Considering the point that she intended to make, the assertion may be accepted as the truth. Certainly no woman obeys her husband because the word "obey" appears in a marriage service.

On the other hand, many husbands have obeyed their wives even though the marriage service formally made the man the master. The question is determined neither by the ceremony nor the sex, but by the strength of the individual will. Kings have been ruled by Queens, philosophers by wives unphilosophical, hulking laboring men by their more determined dames.

This has been true since marriage was first instituted. It is no new development of feminism or any other ism. Equally true is it that where the masculine will was the stronger it has prevailed and commanded obedience. We may learn both truths from public history and private history. They are taught all the time by what goes on before our very eyes and they will be taught exactly as they have been to the last generation of men and women.

THE GOODNESS OF WIVES.

Los Angeles Express: Wives in Taft, Cal., have consented to overlook the delinquencies of their husbands for a whole day on June 22—"Fathers' day." Did not wives everywhere, out of the depth of their love and greatness of their charity, overlook every day the delinquencies of husbands, the "God Bless Our Home" motto might as well be taken down from the wall.

SUFFRAGE IN ILLINOIS.

Chicago Tribune: The woman voters of Illinois now may take off their wraps and hang up their bonnets. They have come to stay. The Supreme Court has confirmed their right to remain in the house of politics and their uncertainty as to whether it was worth while to make themselves at home is over.

The Court was divided, and one Justice might have reversed the movement and have forced the women to work for constitutional reform to obtain electoral freedom. As it is, they are established in possession of part suffrage and have to fear only a repeal of the enabling act.

Part suffrage will hardly hold the suffrage workers satisfied, but it is a fulcrum. The State Constitution stands in the way of further advance.

BOBBIES WOULD GIVE VOTE.

Indianapolis Star: The policemen do not like their task of watching and regulating the women, though they show no hostility to them. "We never 'ardly get 'ome to our families nowadays, sir," one "bobby" is quoted as saying. The consensus of opinion among shopkeepers is that they "eyent" going to stand for the militant warfare much longer. "They've got to put a stop to it, that's wot," is the verdict. Asked who would stop it, the answer is, "The Government, that's 'oo." And to the question of how the Government would do this comes the reply, "Give the silly dossers the vote, that's wot!"

King of Sweden Is Having Fine Time at Carlsbad

As Count Tuilngarn He Roams About at Will, Drinks the Water Like Other People, Goes to the Opera and Runs His Auto—American Girl Discovers That the Long Famous "Cuckoo" Is Ex-Baker With a Flute.

CARLSBAD, Bohemia, June 20.—Whatever the doctors may say about the physical condition of King Gustavus of Sweden—and the reports preceding him led Carlsbad to fear that the water could not cure him—he has not been carrying himself at all like an invalid since his arrival at this resort. Detectives and special guards engaged by the management of the Hotel Savoy to keep the curious at a distance from the sick man's apartments and to assure him the quiet of a private retreat find themselves grotesquely misplaced, for the King makes little use of the apartment except for sleeping and eating and spends his time by preference, where the crowds are thickest and the least check is placed on gayety.

No visitor to Carlsbad is more democratic than King Gustavus. He is registered at the hotel as Count Tuilngarn and Prince William, his second son who accomponied him, appears on the books as Count Stenzammer. This means that the King is here incognito. People know who he is, of course, and it is proper to address him as "Your Majesty," but the visit has no frills and the incognito registration relieves the imperial and town governments from tendering formal honors to him.

The doctors who had watched the reports of serious illness must have been amazed to see him walking the streets like any other visitor within an hour after his arrival. Jostling the promenaders gave him an appetite for a hearty meal, after which he lounged about until time for the Philharmonic concert in Posthof, which he attended.

Goes to Spring to Drink.

Hot water from the Schlossbrunn was taken to his apartment the first morning after arrival. The next morning he headed off the water carrier by slipping away early and walking to the spring for his drinks. And that has been his practice since. He usually takes a second cup in an afternoon walk. For a night or so he followed his days in the open by going early to his rooms, but the hotel guards were not left free long to count on his going to bed with the chickens for the third night he went to hear "Die Kinokoenigin," the comic opera from Vienna that is running here. The press agent did not keep to himself the fact of the King's attendance, and when the show ended a crowd had gathered on the sidewalk to see him to his hotel.

The automobile waiting for him seats four. Prince William, Chamberlain Baron Otto Von Thott, Dr. Carl Flensburg and First Secretary Bostroem, who composed the King's party, uncovered and stood aside to let the King enter the car first. He motioned to Prince William to precede him and then in turn to the others. They deferentially protested, but obeyed and all the seats were filled.

"Which place is your Majesty to occupy?" Baron Thott asked in perplexity.

"This one," the King answered as he sprang to an outside seat beside the chauffeur and laughed banteringly at his attendants.

The sidewalk spectators gaped at this spectacle, but next day it was told all over the place in admiration of the fun-loving King.

Other Royalties at Springs.

Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, second in line for the Austrian-Hungarian throne, will pass another summer in Brandeis, near Prague and naturally will be a frequent visitor to Carlsbad.

Archduchess Isabella, sister-in-law of the Queen Dowager of Spain, and two of her daughters are at Marienbad.

Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria is expected at the Imperial Hotel here in July.

Frederick C. Penfield, the American Ambassador to Austria, and Mrs. Penfield will pass the summer at the Germania Palace Hotel. He and, Mrs. Penfield are very fond of Carlsbad. Hearing recently in Vienna that the people here are raising a fund for a Beethoven monument he sent to the committee an unsolicited check for $60, thus making himself particularly persona grata to the Carlsbaders.

The season is prosperous, although not yet at its height. On pleasant afternoons about 20,000 persons enjoy the promenade between Kaiserpark and Stadtpark, a stretch of about two miles and a half.

A little American girl's native curiosity led her to investigate the "cuckoo" which, from its supposed perch in a tree near the St. Leonhardt Cafe, has charmed countless thousands with its call and has been advertised as one of the standing attractions of the resort. Visitors heretofore have listened, smiled, passed dreamily on and told their friends of the wonderful "cuckoo."

The little American wanted to see the songster with her own eyes and went up to its tree in order to peer among the branches and scrape acquaintance. She walked around the tree and found sitting on the far side of it, with a flute at his lips from which he was "cuckooing," an old chap named Stagler, who used to be a baker until he devised this game. For more than 20 years visitors of all degrees and from all nations have lingered at the tree and admired the sweet call of the "Carlsbad cuckoo," who acquired a world-wide reputation.

PEDESTRIAN MUST PAY FOR RUNNING INTO AN AUTO

PARIS, June 20.—A French court has entered a judgment of $450 against a pedestrian who ran into an innocent motor car that was traveling in public street at a high rate of speed.

The pedestrian, Pedro de Florez, was trying to cross the street. In order to keep from running into one rapidly moving car, it seems he backed up and ran into another car. The driver of the car into which he ran swerved to the right to avoid hitting him and hit the other car. The court held that the pedestrian had no right to cross the street without making sure that no car was approaching and therefore was responsible for the damage done to the cars.

KING OF ENGLAND'S CLOCKS NOW KEEP CORRECT TIME

LONDON, June 20.—The clocks in Buckingham Palace and other royal residences which, during the reign of King Edward, were always kept 30 minutes fast are set to Greenwich time. The late King kept the clocks fast on the theory he would be less apt to be late for an appointment. Englishmen are always ready to follow the example of the King so the clocks in many homes were set 30 minutes fast as soon as King Edward's custom became generally known. Now they will all go back again.

Display of Feminine Charms at Ascot Rivals Efforts of the Police to Keep Militants From Royal Party.

LONDON, June 20.—One of the most prominent women at the fashionable Ascot races this week was the Countess of Granard, formerly Beatrice Mills of New York. On both days she was in the royal procession as the wife of the Master of the Horse and was Queen Mary's most constant companion on the balcony of the royal box.

On the whole, is was a crowded but not especially brilliant Ascot, for black and white was almost universally worn and the general effect was dull. Although the prevalent lack of color was monotonous, the Queen's expressed desire for restraint in the matter of dress revealing feminine charms was ignored, even in the royal inclosure. Her Majesty remarked to Lady Granard on Tuesday that she believed such freaks as were parading before them were impossible.

The Countess laughed and glanced at her own gown with a feeling of relief. It was a beautiful brocade of sapphire blue and flower designs in silver, with an open tunic of very old lace, caught at the waist by a sapphire and diamond buckle to match the paste sapphire embroideries around the hem of the skirt. Magnificent sapphire earrings, swung as gold chains, nearly touching her shoulders. Sapphire blue flowers were bunched high on the side of her transparent straw hat and underneath a black bow with a sapphire plaque rested on her hair. She was chic, smart and not super-eccentric.

On the first day, the weather being chilly, she wore a full cape of blue silk, which nearly brought her trouble from the harassed police. During a stroll in the paddock after luncheon she tried to go back through the inclosure gate, but the arm of a policeman barred her path. Fortunately, Lord Churchill, who was just behind her, made a sign to the policeman and Lady Granard, apparently not aware that she had been suspected of being a militant suffragette, was allowed to pass.

Lady Manners Defies Police.

Lady Diana Manners also was stopped by the police, asked to throw back her wraps and show that she was not concealing anything. This she indignantly refused to do. The official insisted and followed somewhat suspiciously when her mother, the Duchess of Rutland, went to her rescue and explained who she was.

Lady Evelyn Butler, the daughter of Lady Arthur Butler (Miss Ellen Stager), insisted on getting through the police line with a friend. Both ran hard toward the inclosure gates, followed by the police, causing a great commotion. They were recognized before being actually grabbed.

No one envied the police their job of being responsible for the safety of royalty and at the same time continually offending inoffensive racegoers.

"If you please, Miss," was the continual request, "kindly throw back your cloak." Some smiled, some were furious.

The King and Queen tried to appear unconcerned, but they were exceedingly nervous, having lost faith in the efficiency of police arrangements.

Mrs. Montague Eliot Miss Nelly Post) was pestered by the suspicious police. She made no objection to throw back her cloak and finally took it off.

Lady Granard was the belle of the Wednesday company. Her dress blue-flounced with silk over an underskirt of creamy lace, a silver belt, roses in her black hat while red roses were tucked into her waist. She carried a parasol of blue silk with a knot of scarlet carrots and a small cluster of sprouts on the top of the ferrule, as is the latest fashion, coming out, not through the center, but the side.

Vegetable Parasols Amuse the King.

King George was greatly amused at the vegetable parasol and asked if it was her own idea.

She pointed out half a dozen in the enclosure, one carried by Lady Newborough (Miss Grace Carr), whose taffeta silk sunshade had a ring of small bright green cabbage centered with turnips.

Lady Randolph Churchill, whose possible third marriage is eagerly speculated on, had quite a court under the royal box. She wore a striking futurist costume in squares and angles of black and white silk, large black and white check shoes with green heels and jeweled buckles, the costume being finished with green gloves. Her parasol was topped with a cluster of laurel leaves.

The Countess of Craven (Miss Cornelia Martin) wore bright heliotrope silk, striped with white mauve carnations in straw to match, and carried a deep rose red sunshade. Her costume was quiet compared with others.

Mme. Dominguez wore a futurist costume of black and white with shoes and hat to match. Prince Arthur of Conaught who was asked what he thought of the spectacle.

"Well," he answered, "I didn't know it was humanly possible to create such costumes. I suppose they're all right."

He was talking to pretty Nancy Cunard, who looked charming in her favorite shade of green, which no one else has been able to obtain.

Mrs. Lewis Harcourt (Miss Mary Ethel Burns) was one of those outside the royal party who took tea with the Queen.

Mrs. John Ward (Miss Jean Reid) was another royal favorite.

Princess Christian left the royal box to speak with Mrs. Adair, who ventured from Windsor under the wing of her niece, Mrs. Montague Eliot, and being unable to see much was sitting quietly chatting with friends.

GRACIOUS DUCHESS DRINKS OUT OF HER FINGER BOWL

ROME, June 20.—One of the most charming figures in the recent festivities here has been the Duchess de San Lorenzo Dampierre, who was born Princess Ruspoli of Poggio Suasa. She is a niece of Princess Eugenia Ruspoli, who was Miss Berry of Washington. Her sweetness gives her as many admirers as her beauty, which is of the dark Italian order.

In spite of his French name, her husband is an Italian.

At a recent function the Duchess sat near a foreign woman who did not know the use of finger bowls and solved the difficulty by sipping some of the water out of the one placed before her. The Duchess noticed the horrified looks of the other people at the table; the stranger did, too, saw she had made some mistake and grew crimson with confusion. So the Duchess raised her own finger bowl to her lips and took a sip out of it, too.

PAGES HAVE PRINCE FOR NEIGHBOR AT SUMMER HOME

ROME, June 20.—Ambassador Page has taken an apartment at Fluggi for the summer, a favorite spot for people who want to get out of Rome, but must not go too far. The Pages will have as near neighbors the Prince and Princess of Mirko of Montenegro, who are stopping at the Palazzo del Fonte at Fluggi. The Prince is brother to Italy's Queen; he married a beautiful Montenegrin, daughter of Gen. Constantinovitch. Lately there were rumors of divorce, for the Prince is a well-known philanderer; but the Queen of Italy and her father, King Nicholas of Montenegro, have managed to bring about a reconciliation.

LONDON, June 20.—The Queen's chief dresser, who is responsible for packing her Majesty's baggage when the royal family travels, has a list of presents from the late Mrs. Gladstone. Altogether personal and specially treasured belongings which must always go with the Queen. Among these treasures are a Bible and a shawl, both wedding there are about 30 articles, including the photographs of the different members of the royal family.

London Debutantes Calmly Seize Social Leadership

Under Command of the Sprightly and Much-Admired Miss Cunard They Decline to Retire After Whitsuntide—Miss Asquith Is Her Father's Constant and Sympathetic Companion Even in Parliamentary Circles.

LONDON, June 20.—One of the prettiest debutantes this year and a huge favorite among the girls of her set is Joan Meredith Sturgis, daughter of Mrs. Henry Sturgis, who was presented at the second June court by her mother. For this important event they came to town for a week and were guests of Mrs. Ritchie at 33 Cadogan place. A smart party for luncheon was entertained for Mrs. Sturgis and Miss Sturgis by Mrs. Ritchie, at which Mrs. Ronalds, who has been again ill since her return to town, was able to be present.

Miss Sturgis is the first of George Meredith's grandchildren to be presented at court, and the occasion was one of much present-giving and entertaining.

Each week-end Mrs. Sturgis gives parties at Givons, her place near Box Hill, so closely associated with George Meredith and his old home. The latest party was a very gay one and included such lovely girls as Lady Diana Manners, Miss Keppel, Miss Chauncy and Miss Cunard.

At Lady Bailey's ball, where Miss Cunard (whose mother was Miss Maud Burke of New York) was one of the belles, two admirers watched her dancing with the keenest enjoyment. One remarked:

"No, she's not beautiful; she's just IT."

With the passing of Whitsuntide (years back it was Easter) the girls' season was considered as practically over, but "not a bit of it these days," said the sprightly Miss Cunard at a party given by Lady Salisbury for girls and, heading the legion of girls just out and "over," the debutante will carry things before her until the end of the London season, which is a very different thing from what it was a dozen years ago. It is the day of the American and the debutante.

Miss Violet Asquith is the Prime Minister's right-hand daughter. She is always within the precincts of the House of Commons. Not only when she accompanies him to such functions as the luncheon given to the newly appointed Colonial Governors, but in the daily exercise of her duties as her father's companion and friend, does she live in the parliamentary atmosphere. It is a friendship and companionship so close there probably is no important question on which the father and daughter disagree. Her opinions are formed while she is at her father's side.

For a time it was rumored that her sympathies were with the suffragettes. It was said that she had walked in a suffrage procession and had been recognized in Hyde Park beside the banner bearer. But if, having donned a hat that was intended to disguise her, she did fall in with a procession, it did not follow that she believed in votes for women. When she went to Larkin's meeting at Albert Hall it did not mean that she was satisfied as to the exact right and wrong of the enormously difficult Dublin problems.

SOCIETY

The Summer Season Is On—Most of It Is Being Lived in the Open—Merrymakers Go in for Aquatic Sports, a Favorite Resort Being the Randolph Laughlin Estate in St. Louis County.

SOCIETY is largely amphibious these days, and incidentally cultivating a taste for aquatic sports which bids fair to produce some near-record breakers ere the summer wanes.

Swimming and boating are among the popular forms of outdoor diversion dividing interest with the golf links, tennis courts and motoring. Social life is—for the most part—being lived in the open.

Almost any Sunday one may find congenial groups of merrymakers enjoying a cool dip, among other places, in the placid waters of the lake on the Randolph Laughlin estate in St. Louis County—a favored rendezvous for picturesque gatherings of both young and old guests of the genial host and hostess. The stream is 30 feet deep, a quarter of a mile long and has nearly two miles of shore line, being shaped similar to an oak leaf, with irregular indentations.

Situated on an island is a diving tower, with platforms erected at 10, 20 and 30 feet above the surface of the water. Few, however, have been intrepid enough to venture higher than the middle station, but several young women have taken the leap at that height, including pretty Emily Cabanne, Mary Lambert, the spirited daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lambert of Forsythe road, and Stella Garrett of Kingsbury place.

THE two attractive daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cummings Collins of 20 Lenox place, Ann and July, add a note of interest to the locale when present. Miss Ann is not excelled by any as a canoeist, although Kathleen McBride of Washington terrace, Helen Maloy, Marie Bollman and Katherine Peddle of Berlin avenue are adroit with the paddle. July Collins is a fearless diver and swimmer. In the same class with her are the vivacious Anna Benoist, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Benoist of Berlin avenue, Lenore Cahill, Marion Bond, daughter of Judge Henry W. Bond of Washington boulevard, and Jane Taylor of Berlin avenue. Miriam Benoist is one of the best swimmers to be seen.

There are usually an equal number of dependable young gallants in evidence to enliven the company and act as escorts in the festivities which follow.

It is quite a habit with friends of host and hostess to motor out to the lake in the early forenoon, spend the heated portion of the day wading, splashing, swimming, diving and boating, join the tennis and golf contingent at the various country clubs, remaining for supper and the dance, which closes the program.

NEARLY every Tuesday—which is ladies' day at Bellerive Country Club—one may see Mrs. Edward L. Preetorius and Mrs. Edward Magill of Lenox place, with a small coterie of friends, energetically exercising on the tennis courts. With them, as a rule, are Mmes. William Dee Becker, David Crane, Howard and Warren Bailey and H. W. Soper. Mrs. Breckinridge Long, who was Christine Graham of Lindell boulevard, before her marriage, is also a tennis enthusiast and plays an excellent game.

At Normandie and St. Louis Clubs there are many golf devotees who unfailingly assemble on the links. Mrs. A. H. Brueggeman of Westminster place is indefatigable in her devotion to the sport and is scoring high, but Miss Grace Semple has thus far defended the championship against all aspirants. Mrs. Brueggeman has declared her intention of entering the tourney next year, and it is her purpose to qualify as a competitor. This is an interesting bit of news, for those who have seen Mrs. Brueggeman play realize she will make a dangerous opponent and that her entry will infuse great enthusiasm into the contest.

Mrs. Harrison Steedman and Mrs. Charles Parsons Pettus also play splendid golf, as well as Mesdames Sterling Edmunds, Charles Scudder of Vandeventer place, David Calhoun of Lindell boulevard and E. Lansing Ray of Lake avenue.

Mrs. Henry B. Graham and daughter Marjorie are at Marlborough-Blenheim, Atlantic City, for two weeks.

EXCEEDINGLY pleasing was the innovation introduced at the Tobin-Robyn wedding, a fashionable nuptial event of the week, at St. Francis Xavier Church, in the bouquet or rainbow effect in which the dress of the bridal party was carried out. The bridegroom, John C. Tobin, and his attendants, Messrs. Edward Tobin, Gerald Stanley, Frank Tobin, Paul Robyn and James Carroll, appeared in immaculate white serge suits, while the gowns worn by the petite bride and her escorts, brought out all the colors of the rainbow, shading from the faint into the deeper shades.

The bride, Miss Pauline Robyn, was gowned in a wonderful creation of duchess satin, trimmed in rare old lace, with a majestic court train brought from the shoulders and trimmed also in old lace. A veil of illusion held to her coiffure by a wreath of orange blossoms, and a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley completed the toilette.

Miss Lucille Robyn, maid of honor, was in a white taffeta, trimmed in orchid tulle and white chiffon. She wore a pleated white chiffon petticoat and her winged sleeves were of the same material.

The bridemaids, Misses Marie Grone, Virginia Robyn, Josephine Grone and Esther Kelly of Milwaukee, Wis., wore gowns of yellow, lavender, French pink and blue, with Priscilla caps, trimmed with flowers to harmonize. The flowers carried also were tinted to match.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Robyn, 3716 West Pine boulevard, after which the couple departed for Colorado Springs on the honeymoon. Mrs. Tobin is a niece of Alfred Robyn, former St. Louis musician and composer, who has resided in New York the last three years.

Lillian Russell

The Home Beauty Parlor
by Betty Dean

B. A.: The quickest way to remove dust and oil from hair is by shampooing occasionally with a teaspoonful of canthrox (which, like all the simple things I recommend, can be bought at any good drug store), dissolved in a cup of hot water. This makes a thick, white lather that instantly stops irritation and dissolves every particle of dust, dandruff and excess oil. Rinsing leaves scalp and hair wonderfully sweet and clean; the hair will dry quickly and evenly. I find canthrox shampoo is splendid for correcting the dull, "stringy," brittle condition of the hair and inducing a luxuriant growth, which is brilliant and fluffy.

A. P.: Your weak, languid feeling is undoubtedly caused by impure blood, or a sluggish condition of the organs of elimination. In either case, a tonic and body-builder will prove effective in restoring full health and energy. A rare tonic is made by dissolving 1 ounce kardene in ½ pint alcohol (not whisky), then adding ½ cupful sugar and hot water to make a full quart. Take of this 1 tablespoonful 3 times each day. The kardene tonic purifies the blood and restores health and strength. It is also splendid for ridding the skin of pimples, discolorations and sallowness.

Ada: I would remove those wrinkles and bring back the youth-tint to my complexion by using the following greaseless cream-jelly: Into ½ pint cold water put 1 ounce almozoin and 2 tablespoonfuls glycerine. Let stand over night. Apply this cream-jelly plentifully after cleansing and drying the skin. For wrinkles, put the cream thickly upon the creases. This stimulates in a way the stunted tissues of the creases and after a few treatments the furrows will have entirely vanished. For renewing the complexion, a light, rotary movement should be employed, using plenty of the almozoin cream-jelly. This will banish pimples, blackheads, oiliness and other complexion upsets, and leave the skin soft, clear and velvety.

Josie: You will always have a poor complexion as long as you use face powder. Make up this formula at home and your complexion troubles will be at an end. Into ½ pint witch hazel or hot water put 4 ounces spurmax and 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply sparingly and rub lightly until dry. This imparts a dainty tint and exquisite loveliness to the skin and is actually invisible when on and seems part of the skin. Neither wind nor perspiration will affect the spurmax lotion, and one application in the morning will last throughout the day.

Worried: You need not suffer with over-fatness if this simple, harmless treatment is used: Into 1½ pints hot water put 4 ounces parnotis. When it cools, strain, and take a tablespoonful before each meal. This treatment gradually dissolves fatty tissues and restores the symmetrical lines to the figure without leaving the flesh flabby or the skin wrinkled. When the weight is sufficiently reduced, the treatment can be discontinued.

Belle: I think singeing the hair is working at the wrong end, because the trouble is at the roots. Make up at home and use this hair tonic: In ½ pint alcohol put 1 ounce quinzoin (get from druggist), then add ½ pint water. Use this 2 or 3 times each week, massaging well into the scalp, and you will not be further troubled with brittle, falling hair. The quinzoin hair tonic is excellent for overcoming dandruff and excess oiliness and soon puts the scalp and hair roots in a healthy condition.

Mrs. P. C.: You may not require glasses. Try this harmless eye tonic: in one pint clear water dissolve an ounce crystos, then put 2 or 3 drops in the offending eye a few times each day and keep up until soreness has entirely vanished. The crystos eye-tonic is valuable for tired, sore eyes or to relieve eye-strain and is excellent for inflamed or granulated lids. It also gives to dull, listless eyes a delightful sparkle and luster.

M. L.: Here is an inexpensive home treatment for removing hair from chin, lip or cheek: With water and powdered delatone mix enough paste to cover the objectionable hairs. Apply and in about two minutes remove, wash the skin and it will be free from hair or blemish. Be sure you get delatone.

Advice on Beauty

by Claire Ainsworth

A Beautiful Complexion

As I regard it, there are only two essentials for a beautiful complexion—pure blood and the proper materials to treat the skin scientifically. Given these and time, with effort, and any woman under fifty can possess a beautiful, tinted complexion, making her admired by all mankind. Pleasant, generous thoughts make expressions divine.

Assuming the blood is pure, but the skin red, sallow, hard, dry, oily, muddy or blotched, then all that is required is scientific treatment and care. The treatment I have found best of all—and likewise hundreds of my correspondents—consists of gloriol glowene, a "water massage," gloriol balm, a vanishing cream and gloriol emollient, a nourishing cream. With the treatment is full and detailed directions for use, to restore and preserve a beautiful skin and complexion. This is a treatment that all women, pretty or otherwise, should use, as it makes the "pretty even prettier."

Mrs. E. S. L. asks: "A friend of mine living in Denver informs me that after trying innumerable treatments for developing the bust without success, she learned through a physician that medicated venosol would. She says that in three months her bust increased from 30 to 38. Would you advise me to use medicated venosol or do you know anything about it?"

Answer: I know it to be one of the best and surest treatments, and advise any woman who wants to develop to use it as per directions with each sealed tube.

Consuella asks: "My blood is impure, my face pimply, greasy and muddy, and some few blackheads. Advise me?"

Answer: There are many good blood purifiers, but medical experts assert that for clearing and whitening the skin of the face and hands there is only one reliable article and that is one-grain quinoxide tablets, sold in sealed tubes at druggists, with accompanying directions. These tablets may safely be used by you or any one.

Ione asks: "Can you recommend a formula for waving and curling the hair?"

Answer: I use regularly about once a week a splendid preparation called gloriol wavolene, and by my picture you can judge how beautifully it keeps my hair. I advise you to try it, as it is harmless and cannot be detected.

NOTE—If the reader does not find the information wanted in the questions answered below, just address a letter to Miss Claire Ainsworth, 40 Patterson bldg., Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope, and she will gladly advise on health and beauty problems. The articles and preparations mentioned are on sale by all wholesale druggists, large and retail department stores; or any accommodating dealer can obtain them for you.

Mrs. C. R. asks: "I notice that you have a wealth of beautiful hair. Do you use a tonic?"

Answer: My hair was thin and lost luster until I began using one-half ounce hairwand powder mixed with a pint of water. In less than six months my hair grew eight inches and it has ever since been envied and admired. Use this tonic once or twice daily.

Mrs. L. C. R. asks: "Will you please advise some safe reduction treatment? In a year my weight has increased 40 pounds."

Answer: I have frequently answered this question, but repeat it for you. Obtain 5-grain phythyrin tablets in sealed package with full directions as to diet and use. I have received splendid reports on the efficiency of this treatment.

Miss C. B. asks: "How can one remove superfluous hair on face and arms?"

Answer: By obtaining a sealed original vial of fluvol powder and applying as per the directions with vial. It does not irritate the skin or scar it and is prompt in action, too.

Harry M. asks: "Will you kindly advise a sure cure for itching scalp, dandruff and falling hair?"

Answer: I used plain yellow minyol [illegible] years ago and have never had a return of the trouble. Physicians and professional hair dressers recommend it highly. It is on sale in 4-oz. jars.

Miss Elsie J. asks: "Can one overcome extreme thinness and an anaemic condition of the blood?"

Answer: A diet of fresh milk and beaten raw eggs made into a flavored, palatable drink, and taken once each day, together with 3-grain hypo-nuciane tablets will add a pound a day in most cases. Thorough mastication and a half hour's rest after eating are very beneficial.

Miss Ella C. asks: "Will you please recommend a harmless but sure freckle remover?"

Answer: There is on sale an ointment call Madame Lesslie's Freckle Balm which has proven to be a most excellent remedy for the removal of freckles, and I would advise you to try it.

Mrs. J. C. asks: "Do you recommend eggs for shampooing?"

Answer: No, I do not, because of the animal matter, which is likely to ruin the hair unless every particle is removed. Gloriol liquid shampoo is superior to anything I know of. It cleans the hair and scalp thoroughly and gives the hair a soft lustrous appearance.

Miss Arline asks: "Please advise if one should use face powder and what is the best?"

Answer: Face powder is almost essential and the gloriol face powder is my favorite. It comes in pink, white and brunette shades. It is pure and very fine.

What Campbell Millions Mean to Medical Science

than it now is, and make it of greater daily use to humanity.

"Co-operative treatment is what many of the sick need today, and it is what they do not get. In this respect, the very poor have the advantage of persons of moderate means. If a very poor man is sick, he is taken to an institution, and a specialist, in whatever disease he may appear to have, prescribes for him. If there are complications, other specialists are called to consult, and if surgery is needed, he gets a skillful surgeon's services. That is co-operative treatment.

On the other hand, a wage earner, or man of moderate means, if he is ill, is likely to go to the nearest physician's office. The 'M. D.' on one man's shingle looks just like that on another's, though one may represent two or three years' study in an inferior school, and the other may represent a dozen years of special training in European hospitals. He takes such treatment as is given him by the doctor, who may or may not have special knowledge of his disease, and if a specialist or a surgeon is called in, he has to pay roundly for the extra service.

"In England and Germany the governments have dealt with this condition, and by state systems of medical insurance, have provided proper co-operative treatment on an equitable basis. I expect to see something of the sort done in this country. The public everywhere is becoming more interested in medical science. At the International Congress of medical men in London last year, delegates had to answer questions—and intelligent questions—about the work of the gathering from the persons they met in the street, and from waiters and bus drivers."

WICKERSHAM SCORES THE LABOR EXEMPTION CLAUSE

handed down from the earliest colonial times and which is expressly prohibited to the States by the fourteenth amendment, which forbids any state to deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

It is a matter of interest and importance to note that England was called upon a few years ago to face the same problem in regard to labor unions as that which is discussed in this article.

Up to the year 1901 it had been generally assumed in England that in respect of loss or damage inflicted by strikers the only remedy at law open to the sufferer was in the form of a suit against the individual offender. In the Taff Vale railway case, 1901, it was contended in court by counsel for the plaintiff that a trade union could be sued for acts done by its agents within the scope of their authority, and an execution against the funds of the union could be enforced for the recovery of any damages awarded to a plaintiff.

The case was carried on appeal to the House of Lords and the above contention was upheld. The immediate effect of this decision was to stimulate the labor unions to extraordinary efforts to have the law changed, and in 1906, largely as a consequence of these efforts, the trade disputes act was passed by Parliament.

The act covers innumerable points in relation to intimidation, picketing and so on. But the broad principle underlying the law is stated in unmistakable terms in its fourth section, which expressly forbids any court to entertain any action against a trade union as a body in respect of any wrongful act alleged to have been committed by or on behalf of the union.

Whatever may be the demerits of this prohibition, it has at least the merit of perfect frankness and charity.

"Adele" Arouses British Prejudice Against American Theater Offerings

Presented at London's Gaiety, It Is Superciliously Sneered at by Critics, Even Though It Seems to Please Its Audiences—Significant Admissions of Its First-Night Popularity Are Made and an Interesting Situation Is Created—Other Footlight News.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

BRAVING the peril of British prejudice against American stage offerings, and especially daring in selecting the Gaiety Theater, with its time-honored brand of musical plays so dear to the English heart, "Adele," the biggest New York musical comedy success of several seasons past, has been presented in London with an American company which includes many of the players appearing in the original cast on this side of the water.

It is still an open question as to whether this clever and tuneful piece, its book by Paul Herve and its score by Jean Briquet, adapted for the English-speaking stage by Adolf Philipp and Edward A. Paulton, after having achieved a big Paris triumph, now shall be able to overcome the handicap created by John Bull's stubborn partiality for British-made theatrical goods. Craufurd Kent, Georgia Caine, Dallas Welford and William Danforth are among those of the original New York company now appearing in the London production, and they constitute a very entertaining Big Four indeed. But they are not the type of musical comedians whom London has been accustomed to applaud at the Gaiety, and, for this peculiarly English reason, their best efforts may count for nothing in the end. Even Dallas Welford, born Briton though he is, now seems to be under the Great Taboo because of his association with an American company that has shattered London traditions by invading the Gaiety's "sacred" precincts.

The insular spitefulness of the London play-reviewers is much in evidence in their comments upon "Adele's" premiere performance. "The twang of most of the performers" is deplored. "The riot and restlessness of the American brand of music-play" superciliously is sneered at, even in the same breath conceding that this alleged American riot and restlessness is lacking in the offering under discussion. Indeed, it is complained that the entertainment is unduly quiet and sedate—"strangely unlike the Gaiety of rollicking memories!" wails the very commentator who shrinks so sensitively from "the riot and restlessness of the American brand of music-play." The animus of deliberate hostility toward an American entertainment reveals itself in practically all the London reviews of the first-night performance.

Then, in the final paragraph of an especially vitriolic study of "Adele" and its American company, one encounters a significant admission. "The reception at curtain-call was somewhat mixed," it is stated, "but a large section of the audience was enthusiastic." There's where the hope for "Adele's" London success comes in. If a "large section" of its audiences continues to wax enthusiastic, it makes precious little difference what the critics write of the play. The situation becomes especially interesting for this reason.

It is declared that an exceptionally significant success has been scored by "The Day That Never Comes," a new comedy drama, the author of which, Francis X. Conlan, himself is an actor, and which recently received its premiere production at the Grand Theater, Worcester, Mass., preliminary to its presentation in New York City early next fall.

The play was "tried out" by the Poli Players, one of the most capable of the Eastern stock companies, with Mae Desmond in the role of Mignon, or "Pet," Grant, the story's heroine, which is pronounced as effective a part as the title role in "Peg o' My Heart." As the plot is shaped, "Pet" Grant is in the power of her "crook" husband, Lionel, and is compelled by him to deceive the members of the Nash household in order to "get the lay" of their residence for purposes of robbery. Lionel Grant, the villain-husband, insists that she best can do this by pretending to be in love with John Nash, a singularly attractive young bookworm. In following these instructions "Pet" Grant falls into a trap of her own making by actually coming to love John most tenderly, this being the first pure and unselfish attachment of her hapless life. But she is a stronger woman than her daredevil criminal of a husband suspects. In the play's "big scene" she refuses to betray the man whom she loves, and, suddenly, the nefarious plotting of the "crook" husband is utterly foiled by an unexpected circumstance that enables "Pet" Grant to defy and renounce him for all time to come. In the last act she confesses to John Nash her complicity in the attempt to rob his house, he understands her position, and forgives her, and the last curtain falls on a very happy scene, indeed.

Miss Desmond is said to play the role of Pet admirably. Frank Wilcox makes an appealing character of the bookish young John Nash. A big hit seems to have been made by Harold Salter as Lionel Grant, the criminal husband, whom he portrays as a dashing gentleman-crook, a sort of drawing-room "Jimmy Valentine," of uncommon magnetism and theatric effectiveness. Frank Conlan, the play's author, is now appearing in one of the leading roles in "The Dummy" at the Hudson Theater in New York City.

Whether or not Billie Burke has imperiled her own future as a Frohman star by becoming the wife of Florenz Ziegfeld Jr., it must be maintained that Ziegfeld's professional rivals and enemies have not the right, in common decency, to ridicule the new Mrs. Ziegfeld and her mother on a public stage as a means of "evening up things" with Ziegfeld himself.

CRAUFURD KENT and GEORGIA CAINE in "ADELE" GAIETY THEATER LONDON

This, it is asserted, seems to have been done in one of the feature acts in "The Passing Show of 1914," now on the stage of the Winter Garden in New York City, and a vigorous protest has been voiced against the act. The scene shows an employment agency conducted by "Mrs. Burke and daughter." The daughter, according to a story published in the New York Morning Telegraph, is impersonated by a young woman wearing Billie Burke's shade of hair and attired in pajamas as she was in "Jerry." The dialogue, it is said, is not in good taste "and manifestly was introduced for personal, rather than comedy reasons."

It is further said that "there is a suspicion that the management, piqued by the great success of 'Ziegfeld's Follies,' an entertainment which the Winter Garden producers have vainly tried to imitate, is venting its spite in this thrust. A request has been made by a management which is not identified with Mr. Ziegfeld, but is friendly to Miss Burke, to eliminate the scene. Also, an attorney has been consulted."

"Cain and Abel," a new one-act opera by Felix Weingartner, the famous German conductor and composer, received its premiere production recently at the Grand Ducal Opera House in Darmstadt, Germany, and is conceded by critical authorities to be a work of unusual musical and dramatic power.

Weingartner, as was Wagner, is his own librettist, and in this instance he has gone to the Bible for his story. But he has given his imagination a free rein in dealing with the tragedy of the first human fratricide, so far departing from the biblical version of the slaying of Abel by his brother Cain as to create for the crime's motive a "triangle" plot of somewhat daring character. He bestows upon Cain a wife, Ada, the daughter of Adam and Lilith, and then causes Ada to fall in love with the gentler Abel, a type of the God-fearing man in striking contrast to the evil spirit incarnate in Cain. He also makes Abel a son of Adam and Lilith, instead of Adam and Eve, and, therefore, Cain's half-brother. Abel returns Ada's love, and, believing he has found the Lost Paradise from which Adam and Eve were driven after the First Sin, he sings a love duet with Ada and attempt to fly with her to this paradise. They are intercepted by Cain, who slays Abel with the trunk of an uprooted tree.

While it seems to be agreed that the dramatic demand of this Weingartner work called for a stronger motive than is found in the actual version in Holy Writ, the truth also is pointed out that the story loses much of its elemental force in the new shaping. Nevertheless, the introduction of the themes of sexual love and jealousy gave the composer a wide range for his creative musical genius, and he is said to have risen to the opportunity with genuine competency. The fury of Cain's dark soul is effectively represented and the score is said to reveal much lyrical beauty in the tender passages between Abel and Ada. Weingartner also has shown a fine regard for the emotional possibilities of the human voice and, in addition, has utilized the orchestral forces with rare skill.

Mme. Weingartner-Marcel as Ada is declared to have won the leading honors of the opera's first-night performance, at the close of which the composer himself was cordially applauded and called before the curtain many times.

Berlin playgoers are laughing heartily over the real fun of "Der Juxbaron" ("The Sham Baron"), a new musical comedy, its score by Walter Rollo and its book by Pordes-Milo and Hermann Haller, which now is running at the Theater am Nollendorfplatz to crowded houses.

The story told in this play's action is distinctly diverting. A newly married couple are determined that they shall remain undisturbed by visitors during the blissful period of their honeymoon. Suddenly they receive letters notifying them that their parents-in-law are coming to see them. They are desperate. Resolving to "head off" the impending invasion, they write to the old folks that their little home is not large enough to accommodate other visitors, since a certain friend, a Baron von Kimmel, already is occupying the only guest room. But the parents come, nevertheless, and the problem now confronting the newlyweds is that of how to produce the mythical Baron, of whose visit they had told. A tramp emerges upon the scene. Instantly he is "commandeered," so to speak, and decked out at short notice as the Baron von Kimmel—the Juxbaron, who gives the play its title. And the tramp as instantly adapts himself to his comfortable environment, playing the role of the Baron so completely as to make love to the bride's sister and become engaged to her. The play's climax of complication is said to be irresistibly humorous, and then, swiftly, everything is straightened out and the last curtain falls on a happy and hilarious scene.

The piece is said to have been delightfully acted and Rollo's music so tuneful that the audience eventually joined in with the players in the song numbers, whistling and singing the "catchy" airs with much relish of their medolic charm.

SHAW'S GARDEN HAS PLANTS THAT DEVOUR INSECTS

Venus Fly Trap Has Leaves That Shut Up on Flies and Gnats and Eats Them.

VISIT AFTER 57 YEARS

St. Louisan Lover of Flowers Says Shaw's Foresight Benefits Boys and Girls of Today.

Among the visitors to the Missouri Botanical Gardens last week was J. D. Nichols, 86 years old, of 3624 Cook avenue. It was his first visit since 1857, when Henry Shaw founded what is now one of the great botanical gardens of the world.

"Shaw was a man of marvelous foresight," said Nichols. "Back in the '50s, when he started to collect plants from every part of the world, people looked at him questioningly and shook their heads pityingly, but he has done more real good for St. Louis than any other man through his generous and beautiful gift. Away back in those days, I take it, Mr. Shaw's vision was so far-reaching that he knew the time would come when the boys and girls of St. Louis would have to have some spot where they could study the mysteries of nature and the source of life; the growing of trees, grass, grains, fruits and flowers.

"The herbacious section affords the city boy and girl marvelous opportunity for study and knowledge. The garden has grown to such wonderful size and is full of so many interesting things, that I will have to come again and again before I can see all of its wealth. On my first visit there were only two small greenhouses, and I judge that where the lake is now was the potato and corn patch. The greenhouses contained what I considered a remarkable collection of tropical plants. They were the plant sensation of St. Louis then."

Nichols was greatly interested in the collection of Biblical plants in the south wing of the new conservatory, and in the floral display in the southwest wing, which is composed of spotted lilies, tuberous begonias, gloxinias, acaladiums and a rare new blue flower, "Achimenes," a native of South Africa.

The floral novelties which will attract the lovers of the curious to the garden during the next fortnight are the carnivorous plants in the small vestibule of the Pitcher planthouse. It is difficult at first glance, to realize that the dainty little plants are bloodthirsty miscreants; an anomaly in that the vegetable actually eats the animal, thus reversing the natural order of higher forms of life preying upon lower ones.

The Venus flytrap, quaint of form and innocent looking, its slender, delicate stem surmounted by a tender green leaf of two lobes, gives no hint of its carnivorous habits. The two lobes are surrounded by spines or horns. On the inner surface of each lobe are three sensitive hairs—the only sensitive part of the plant. When the insect alight on the lobes, touching the hairs, the lobes, working on the principle of hinges controlled by a spring, close with a snap, the spines on the outer edges of the lobes interlock, crushing the fly. The leaves then begin to masticate the victim and absorb the nutrition through its pores. The Venus flytrap is a native of North Carolina.

The "parachute plant," now in bloom in the cacti house, is another interesting plant. The flowers look like miniature parachutes, the plant is leafless and has long rope-like stems. It belongs to the cacti family.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Drosten to Tour Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic W. Drosten will sail for Europe on July 6. They will be abroad for two months, visiting the European gem centers where Mr. Drosten will select precious stones. They expect to spend some time in Switzerland, Italy, France, Belgium, Germany and Holland. Mr. Drosten is well acquainted with the prominent European gem connoisseurs and anticipates an unusually interesting trip. He will make a special study of ancient jewelry and art, which has always been particularly fascinating to him. Mr. Drosten has one of the most complete libraries relating to ancient as well as modern jewelry in this country.

HEIRS SAY MRS. BLANK'S ESTATE WORTH $20,500

Petition Made Does Not Show Former Widow of Brewer Possessed Brewery Stock.

A petition filed in the Probate Court yesterday valued the estate of Mrs. Louise Anheuser Blank, who died at her home, 3131 Allen avenue, June 15, at $20,500. This includes $2500 personal property and realty appraised at $18,000.

The petition, which was signed by Mrs. Blank's husband, Joseph P. Blank, and her children, Mrs. Dewey Hickey, Nellie, Lillie, Edmee and Eberhardt Anheuser, states Mrs. Blank did not leave a will. At the request of the other heirs, the son was appointed administrator.

Before her marriage to Blank, Mrs. Blank was the widow of Adolph Anheuser, partner of Adolphus Busch in the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association. She received stock in the brewing company by her first husband's will. The petition did not state whether her estate contains any of this stock now. The par value of the brewing stock is $500 a share, although the market value is many times that amount.

The Charter Fight.

BY CLARK M'ADAMS.

THE charter fight is on again—
We lost it once before;
So rally round, ye merry men,
And make the welkin roar.
It looks as if we ought to win
With Dr. Boyd away,
And Dr. Hill, who was agin
Us, helping us today.

The charter fight is one of those
Chock full of sinking ground;
One underestimates its foes
With just a look around.
They're thick as fiddlers if you scratch
A little through the skin,
And they will make us hard to catch
Before we ever win.

The mildest man may be at heart
A veritable jinx;
So try to take him well apart
And see just what he thinks.
Democracy is full of cranks
Who love to see us stuck,
So stand together in the ranks
And hope for better luck.

THIS battle song doesn't cost the charter people a cent. They are welcome to it, and if they will sing it when occasion offers, they will probably win. The average battle song doesn't avail because it fails to get down to hardpan. This one gets down there in the very first stanza. Certainly nothing is more encouraging at this time than that Dr. W. W. Boyd is up north fishing. That alone ought to win for us with any kind of luck at all. Nor is it at all disquieting to learn that Dr. Preston Hill, formerly president of the People's League, is with us this time. Dr. Hill has jumpel. Dr. Boyd is merely staying away. He is weary with undoing.

Then there is the Wather Man. No question at all about the Weather Man being with us. When the campaign opened it seemed that he must be against us. The weather was ideal for cranks. They were swarming like bees. One couldn't mention the charter in public but 20 cranks gathered around one, each wanting a different thing. Single-taxers were on the warpath. Short ballot men were raging. Socialists were buzzing around like hornets. I said at once, knowing something of temperature in relation to human nature, that if the weather didn't change the charter would lose by 25,000 votes. A few days later the weather did change. It became delightful. Everybody working for the charter took heart. Cranks subsided. Odds and ends of the science of political economy became amenable to reason. Anybody in the fight will tell you that last week was the best week the charter has had. It was a wonderful week. We had only one hot day—Friday—and the heat blew off that night with a veritable norther. Old charter wheel horses like Percy Warner and Mayor Kiel were dancing around as if the victory were already won. The Weather Man did it. If he keeps it up this week, the thing is done. We could stand a couple of hot days in the end. It would by that time be impossible for the opposition to work itself up to a sufficiently high state of feeling to do any great harm. Boost the Weather Man. Call him friend, patriotic—what you will.

WE are on the upgrade in St. Louis. It would be a tremendous pity if the charter lost. We have stopped the free bridge monkey business. Even our baseball teams are feeling the impetus of the local uplift. The Browns, who have been walking in their sleep for 20 years, are running third in the American League; and the Cardinals, who have been a joke on the National League circuit ever since Rip Van Winkle came down from the hills, are running third in that organization. It is a thrilling spectacle—two of our baseball teams at that dizzy height! It is enough to make one who would not go out and see the Pageant feel a faint thrill of civic pride somewhere in his impervious being.

If the charter carries the Young Turk movement will break out in St. Louis like the prickly heat on a eugenic baby. The most wonderful projects will leap to their feet. The past will float off behind us like a distant shore line in the wake of a ship. Not that the charter itself is so remarkable. It no doubt has faults. Any charter has. The thing is that it typifies the very spirit of the city, and if the charter carries that spirit, flushed with victory, will take wing in our midst.

If you cannot be for the new charter for big reasons, try to discover some little reason for being for it. For example, I am for it because Miss Charlotte Rumbold, who gives us our free bathing pools, can have her salary raised under the new charter without the formality of an ordinance. Miss Rumbold, considering her usefulness, is probably the worst paid person in the world. She thought of the Pageant. She has more democratic ideas in a minute than any man in town has in a month. If we paid her what she is worth she would get more than the Mayor. I don't know what she gets, but it is nothing. There has been a bill raising her salary before the Municipal Assembly, but it has not succeeded. Everybody says she ought to have a better salary, but she is a woman. If you want to see men engaged in some half-hearted task, you want to see them voting to increase the salary of a woman. The war of the sexes is much older than popular recreation.

J. Hampton Moore's Effort as Labor Mediator Didn't Get Far

WASHINGTON, June 20.

A FEW days ago Representative J. Hampton Moore of Philadelphia shook his fist at the big labor leaders and told them that had he been present he would have voted against the exemption provision in the anti-trust bill. One time this same Moore acted as peacemaker between labor and capital. That is, he tried to be a peacemaker. He did not succeed.

It was during the Homestead strike in Pittsburg in 1892. Moore was a reporter on a Philadelphia paper and was assigned to cover the strike. The owner of the paper instructed him to find out upon what terms the strike could be arbitrated.

Moore went to the strikers and they told him that they would arbitrate if their demands were all conceded. Then he went to the employers and they told him they would arbitrate if the strikers would withdraw their demands, stop rioting and go to work.

It was very simple. All that was necessary to bring about a peaceable settlement was for both sides to concede everything. Moore reported the results of his mediation, wrote a story about it and that was as far as it went.

Representative Leads the Applause of His Own Speech

REPRESENTATIVE PERCY E. QUINN of Mississippi is not immodest, but absentmindedness made him appear as such recently. He made a speech in the House and as he sat down he was loudly applauded. He had his mind on the speech he had just made and forgot that the applause was for him, so he joined in. Finally he was applauding louder than anyone else. He came to himself when a friend walked over and said:

"You must have liked that speech."

Oratorical Prize Paid for Mrs. Bryan's Engagement Ring

WILLIAM J. BRYAN was not only an orator but an athlete during his college days in Illinois. He modestly says that he was only an average in athletics, except in jumping. He won a watch chain at Illinois College for a standing broad jump of 12 feet 4 inches.

It was Bryan's ortaory that furnished him with the cash to buy an engagement ring for Miss Baird, who became Mrs. Bryan. He won $50 in an oratorical contest at Galesburg, and with a part of it he purchased the ring.

Congressman Palmer Makes His Debut as Church Speaker

REPRESENTATIVE A. MITCHELL PALMER is a Quaker. Of course he comes from Pennsylvania. A few Sundays ago he attended church in the little Friend's meeting house in Washington. He discovered that he had arrived during a celebration of Peace day. The program included essays and speeches, all pleading for peace among the nations of the earth.

Palmer was interested and listened attentively until the program was ended. Then he was much surprised when they called upon him to make a speech. There was not time for preparation and so he proceeded to the front and added his plea for international peace.

"It was the first time I ever spoke in meeting," said Palmer later, "and I did the best I could. You know in our church the congregation does the preaching and we are expected to talk when the spirit moves us, or when we are called upon to do so. Up to that time I always listened to older and wiser people talk."

Rainey's Hat Is Bigger Than Any Other in Congress

REPRESENTATIVE RAINEY of Illinois wears the largest hat in Congress. It is not the largest hat as to numerical size, for it is only 7 5-8, whereas Sereno Payne wears a 7 3-4. In total area, however, no other hat in public life outside of Mexico compares with Rainey's. The hats worn by patent medicine salesmen who appear in front of rural courthouses are not nearly as large. Rainey says he got the ponderous hat as a present, and so he wears it, even at the risk of becoming round-shouldered.

This Lung Remedy Known Fifteen Years

Persons suffering from, or threatened with lung trouble, should investigate Eckman's Alterative. What it has done for others it may do for you. Read this:

145 E. 122d St., New York.

"Gentlemen: December, 1912, I took a sudden cold, which developed into Pneumonia. The doctor did all he possibly could for me, but could not clear my lungs. One day I saw a testimonial telling of the good results someone had from taking Eckman's Alterative for a trouble of the lungs. I began taking it and soon felt good results. My lungs began to gain in strength, and was soon well enough to take up my work again. I am a missionary worker for the New York Home for Homeless and Friendless Boys." (Abbreviated.)

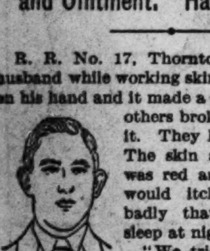
(Affidavit) ERNEST P. WILCOX.

Eckman's Alterative is most efficacious in bronchial catarrh and severe throat and lung affections and upbuilding the system. Contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs. Accept no substitutes. Sold by Raboteau Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Co. and leading druggists. Write Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet of recoveries.

ERUPTION ON HAND COULD NOT SLEEP

Looked Like Boils. Inflamed, Itched and Hurt. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Hand Well.

R. R. No. 17, Thorntown, Ind.—"My husband while working skinned a little place on his hand and it made a running sore and others broke out all around it. They looked like boils. The skin all around them was red and inflamed. It would itch and hurt so badly that he could not sleep at night.



"We tried several kinds of medicines but nothing helped it until I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent and got a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after the first two or three days using it began to heal. He would bathe the sores with the Cuticura Soap and then use the Cuticura Ointment night and morning. He used one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment. In a week's time his hand was well." (Signed) Mrs. Bertha Gleason, June 16, 1913.

In the care of baby's skin and hair, Cuticura Soap is the mother's favorite. Not only is it unrivaled in purity and refreshing fragrance, but its gentle emollient properties are usually sufficient to allay minor irritations, remove redness, roughness and chafing, and soothe sensitive conditions. Assisted by Cuticura Ointment, it is most valuable in the treatment of eczemas, rashes and other itching, burning infantile eruptions. Sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

☞Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Going Deaf? Good News!

An engineer who had ear trouble for years finally became so deaf he could not hear the sound of a steam engine, bells or voices. After vainly seeking relief he was compelled to give up his position. His case seemed hopeless. His deafness was aggravated by head disturbances, dry catarrh, nervousness and despondency.

To the surprise of all he began to hear and continued improving until he could listen to conversations, could hear a train at a distance and even the singing of the birds in the trees. His head and nerves became tranquil. He got his position back again. This was no miracle; no surgery, no artificial hearing devices, no electric apparatus, no loss of time.

Whoever is becoming deaf can obtain particulars free by writing to Edward Gregory, 348 B Forbes street, Jamaica Plain, Mass., enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope. He will tell you how he and many others have been wonderfully benefited.—ADVERTISEMENT.

COURT DISMISSES TERMINAL'S LOCAL TRAFFIC PETITION

U. S. Circuit Judges Hold They Lack Jurisdiction to Interpret Ouster Decision.

APPEAL IS NOW PENDING

Plea Affects More Than 30,000 Cars of Purely Local Industrial Traffic.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 20.—The application of the Terminal Railroad Association for a modification of the decree in the Government ouster case so that it might continue to engage in industrial switching over its lines in St. Louis, East St. Louis and St. Louis County was denied by United States Circuit Judges Sanborn, Hook and Smith today on the ground that as the Government had appealed to the Supreme Court the District Court had no jurisdiction.

This decision may prove a severe blow to the Terminal Railroad Association and may have a direct bearing on its attitude with respect to the bridge arbitrary which, it holds, the decree recognizes and legalizes.

After the ouster decree was entered by the District Court at St. Louis last March the Terminal discovered a paragraph which it interpreted as making it impossible for it to move a shipment originating on its lines to any other point of destination on its lines.

Serious Effect on Local Traffic.

The enforcement of this provision would make it impossible for the Terminal to handle the traffic of many concerns like the Union Sand & Material Co. and the Evens & Howard Fire Brick Co. The Terminal handles more than 30,000 cars of purely local traffic every year.

Several large companies having plants on the lines of the Terminal intervened and asked the court to modify the decree so that the Terminal could continue to handle their traffic.

Edward C. Crow, special counsel for the Government, was not at the hearing today. The Government was represented by Assistant Attorney-General Blackburne E. Sterline of Washington, who objected to the motion on the ground of jurisdiction. Crow is in Arizona, where several of his children are ill.

The court took Sterline's view of the proposition, holding that as the case is before the Supreme Court on appeal, that tribunal is the proper one to decide all questions relating to the decree.

May Affect Arbitrary.

Henry S. Priest and T. M. Pierce represented the Terminal Association; John F. Lee and George T. Block represented the Union Sand and the Evans & Howard companies and other intervenors, and Sears Lehmann represented the Pullman Palace Car Co., which seemed to fear that the Terminal would be forbidden to handle its cars if the decree should be enforced.

The refusal of the Circuit Court to make the modification as requested may give the Government a decided advantage in the fight to force the Terminal to abolish the bridge arbitrary at St. Louis. The Government's appeal was on the ground that it was the intention of the Supreme Court to abolish the arbitrary and that the district court had failed to do this in its final decree. The appeal is set for argument in October.

LAWYER SAYS WIFE'S SUIT LOST HIS PRACTICE

Pleasant P. Mason Contends $5000 Income Ceased as Result of Divorce.

Pleasant P. Mason, a lawyer, blames recent legal complications involving him as the cause of his loss of revenue from his practice, he testified in Judge Cave's court Friday in opposing an allimony motion in the divorce suit of his wife, Mrs. Emma Mason. According to the defendant a charge made recently, and of which he was cleared by the court, started a decline in his law business.

"The finishing touches were put on it when my wife brought this divorce suit," he said. He declared that his practice, which once yielded from $5000 to $8000 a year, had been lost as a result of his recent troubles and that he had no money to pay alimony. The Masons lived at 720A North Euclid avenue at the time of their separation several months ago.

TWINS KILLED SAME WAY

SCRANTON, Pa., June 20.—Martin Langan Jr., 21 years old, was killed on the Delaware & Hudson Railroad near the South Scranton depot this morning in the same manner and the same spot where his twin brother, Joseph Langan, was killed two years ago.

Langan was on his way to work and it is believed that he failed to hear the approach of a southbound locomotive, which bore down upon him from behind.

A Human Churn

"WHEN the food reaches the stomach it is subjected to a peculiar churning movement by the muscular walls of the stomach"—(See Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, page 45). In the liver, kidneys and skin, the blood is purified of its waste materials—these organs act as human filters, leaving the blood pure and clear—unless liver, digestive tract and kidneys are clogged.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a stomach, liver and kidney tonic—by assisting the stomach to assimilate, the liver to filter, the kidneys to act—the poisons are removed, the red blood corpuscles are increased and one feels light, fresh and active instead of logy, dull and heavy. The "Discovery" stimulates the stomach, increases action of heart and arteries and is a most satisfactory alterative in blood-taint of any character. The refreshing influence of this extract of native medicinal plants has been favorably known for over forty years. Everywhere some neighbor can tell you of the good it has done.

Sold by all medicine dealers in liquid or tablet form; or send 50 one-cent stamps to Dr. V. M. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y., a trial box will be mailed you.

STATE IS TO BEGIN INQUIRY INTO U. R. SERVICE TOMORROW

25 Washington U. Students to Assist in 30-Day Investigation of System.

WOULD RUN MORE CARS

Public Service Commission to Consider Plan for New Loop to Relieve Congestion.

The State of Missouri, through its Public Service Commission, is about to subject the United Railways Co. to a searching and far-reaching investigation which will begin tomorrow and continue at least 30 days.

All St. Louisans who know of the many ways in which the service could be improved are expected to aid in the inquiry and furnish the commission with whatever information they have.

The investigation is the direct result of a petition filed with the State Public Service Commission by the West End Business Men's Association, through its attorney, Ephraim Caplan, last December, following complaints of inadequate street car service made by residents of north and northwest St. Louis and other sections.

It is the commission's purpose to make a thorough survey of the street car situation in St. Louis. All lines will be included in the investigation.

Students Keep Tab on Cars.

J. L. Harrop, chief engineer of the commission, will start the investigation tomorrow and will remain in St. Louis to supervise the work of 25 Washington University students who have been selected to keep tab on the St. Louis street cars to determine whether they are being operated in a manner calculated to serve the best interests of the public.

The student investigators, under Harrop's direction, will ride the cars at all hours of the day and night. They will try to find out just what extent the company serves its own ends rather than those of the riding public by reducing the number of cars operated on all the lines in the period intervening between the morning and evening rush hours.

It is a matter of general observation that on many of the principal lines of the United Railways system the cars are crowded at all times and standing loads are carried in the middle of the day, as well as in the morning or evening. It is the apparent policy of the company at all hours to run just a sufficient number of cars to carry passengers with a maximum of crowding and a minimum of comfort, so that a large proportion of those who ride cannot obtain seats.

Keep Watch on Car Sheds.

Engineer Harrop's corps of investigators will make a special study of car she sleight-of-hand as practiced by the United Railways Co. Cars disappear from the sheds as if by magic between 5 and 9 a. m. and between 4:30 and 7 p. m. But they all come back. From 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. a large proportion of the company's rolling stock doesn't roll. Hundreds of cars are in the sheds while those in operation are carrying standing loads.

While the Public Service Commission's investigation is on a close watch will be kept on all the car sheds and accurate reports will be made to show what proportion of its equipment the company retires in the middle of the day.

The West End Business Men's Association petition describes the congested district of St. Louis as being bounded by the Mississippi River on the east, Jefferson avenue on the west, Chouteau avenue on the south and Cass avenue on the north.

The association asks the commission to order that on all days except holidays the United Railways Co. shall so operate its cars that at least 7423 car trips shall be made into this congested district every 24 hours beginning and ending at 5:30 a. m. It asks that at least 5025 car trips be made into the district on holidays. It also asks that on the lines which do not enter the congested district not less than 3896 cars shall be run on every week day.

Another Subject of Inquiry.

Another subject which will receive serious consideration from the commission's investigators will be the spacing of cars, especially with reference to their time of meeting at transfer points.

It has been a matter of frequent complaint that the number of cars run on most of the north and south, or crosstown lines, is disproportionately small compared with the number operated on east and west lines. In many instances the cars are so spaced that one crosstown car picks up the accumulated load from two westbound cars at a transfer point. This deprives the resident of north and south St. Louis of their chance to get a seat after they have transferred from westbound cars.

It has been charged that at most of the transfer points crossed by the Olive street line two and sometimes three Olive street cars arrive and discharge passengers before one crosstown car comes to pick up the passengers.

The routing of the cars on the United Railways system also will be investigated by Harrop and his assistants. The West End Business Men, in their petition, assert that the present routing of most of the lines causes great inconvenience, delay and congestion and that the downtown loop now in use is wholly inadequate to handle the traffic.

Supplementary Loop Suggested.

Harrop will report to the commission as to the advisability of requiring the company to build a supplementary loop to relieve the present congestion. Practically three-fourths of the cars now operated in St. Louis have their downtown loop terminals in the district between Eighth street and Fourth street and Pine street and Washington avenue.

It has been suggested to the commission that the congestion could be relieved by constructing another loop east of Eighteenth street, preferably on Twelfth street or Fourteenth street, and have part of the cars which now come downtown diverted over this new loop.

It is pointed out that at present the cars in the evening rush hour pick up all the passengers they can carry before leaving the downtown loop district and that many persons walk from points as far west as Twelfth street to Broadway to make sure of catching a car.

The West End Business Men believe the new loop would remedy this condition. Eastbound cars would carry signs showing which loop was their destination, so that passengers desiring to come all the way downtown could take the car going to the downtown loop.

Besides the loop question Harrop and his assistants will give much attention to the present routing of some of the lines which are long and devious.

The Washington University students who ride the cars will look for all the inconvenient routes which make it necessary for a passenger to take two or more car lines to get to his destination and Harrop will use their reports as a basis for suggesting ways in which the kinks may be taken out of some of the present routes so as to make them shorter and of greater public convenience.

The Causes of STAMMERING

are fully explained, beginning on page 16 of this new and valuable book. It is absolutely free to you, and every page of the 68 which are included between its covers contains information of vital importance to those who stammer or have friends or relatives who are afflicted.

Stammering can be cured. It is being cured week after week at the Bogue Institute for Stammerers, where Benjamin N. Bogue, who himself was a stammerer for 20 years, is now devoting his life to this humanitarian work.

On page 28 you will find the beginning of a four-page detailed explanation of the Bogue method of cure. Look on page 37 and read Mr. Bogue's guarantee, which is backed by ample security. Then turn to page 5 and read the eleven pages which are devoted to the story of Mr. Bogue's life and his struggle to free himself from the affliction of stammering. Read how he tried first one thing and then another, only to meet with failure in every effort. He learned that medicine and surgery were of no value, but in the end he did find the one method which restores perfect speech.

Since then he has cured hundreds of others and you will find their grateful statements scattered through the pages of this valuable book. They have been cured and you can be cured. All cases of stammering in any normal person, eight years of age or older, respond promptly and surely to the simple instructions involved in the Bogue method. Men 60 years of age have been restored to perfect speech at the Bogue Institute, after years of suffering and failure.

Write today for this valuable book and let Mr. Bogue place the facts before you. There is absolutely no charge for the book and it contains information that is invaluable to every person afflicted with stammering. When writing, state your age and how long you have stammered. A Reliable Treatment For Superfluous Hairs

(Beauty Culture)

A new and highly satisfactory method has recently been found for the quick and painless removal of objectionable hairy growths, and it is so simple that anyone can use it in the privacy of her own home and enjoy the pleasure of a clear, hairless skin.

To remove hair or fuzz from lip, chin or cheek, a thick paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This paste is then spread on the hairy surface for about two minutes and then rubbed off, after which the skin is washed to remove the remaining delatone and it will be found to be free from hair or blemish. No danger or inconvenience attends this treatment, but to avoid disappointment or failure, see that you get the delatone in a small original package. Any good drug store can supply you.—ADV.

FARMERS ASK MORE FOR MILK; SCARCITY THREATENED HERE

Producers of Southern Illinois Want 13 Cents a Gallon, Price Is Now 12 Cents.

St. Louis is threatened with a milk scarcity and higher prices because Southern Illinois farmers are demanding 13 cents a gallon for the milk which is retailed to St. Louis consumer at 32 cents a gallon. Three of the largest St. Louis dairy companies, that supply retailers, are unwilling to pay more than about 12 cents a gallon and there is a deadlock between them and members of the Southern Illinois Milk Producers' Association.

Representatives of the big dairy companies say they are getting all the milk they need and there will not at present be an advance in price, but that if the drouth continues and the companies have to obtain their supply at greater distances, an increase will probably be necessary.

The producers' organization extends over seven counties—St. Clair, Madison, Clinton, Green, Jersey, Macoupin, Montgomery and Bond, and it has a membership of 1200, according to Cyrus Love of Hamel, the secretary. "We're going to stick her out," is the way that Love expresses the feeling and intentions of the members.

Believe Dairymen Organized.

It is the belief of the officers of the producers' association that the St. Louis dairymen have an organization. The St. Louis men deny this. The producers think that the dairyman are organized because the territory from which milk is shipped is divided among them and they do not infringe upon each other's preserves, and because there is approximately agreement in the prices that they offer. The dairymen explain that the division of territory is automatic and that conditions which affect all alike result in approximation of prices that are offered.

The demand of the producers is for $1.50 per hundred pounds of milk delivered at the shipping stations for the months of June, July, August and September. It takes a fraction over 11⅓ gallons to weigh 100 pounds. The price they ask is therefore about 13 cents a gallon. The dairy companies refuse to pay more than $1.40½ per 100 pounds. The dispute, therefore, is over less than one cent a gallon.

The dairy companies pay the shipping charges, amounting to 1½ to 2 cents a gallon, according to distance.

Three other large dairy companies and a number of smaller ones are paying the $1.50 price. Producers who ship to the smaller companies have to pay the freight.

It has been the custom for the large companies to post prior to April 1 the prices that they propose to pay for milk during the summer months. These vary according to normal pasturage conditions and are subject to advance if abnormal conditions develop. Last summer the prices posted by the St. Louis Dairy Co. at the beginning of the summer season averaged $1.17½ per hundred pounds. On account of drouth conditions the prices were increased to an average of $1.37½ per hundred pounds. This, according to General Manager R. L. Kayser, was the highest that had ever been paid. The average for the summer months of 1910 was $1.26, for 1911 $1.16 and for 1912 $1.12½.

The prices paid during the winter months averaged $1.85. The winter average for the three preceding winters had been $1.65 5-6.

Early last spring the officers of the producers' association asked officers of the dairy companies to meet with them. The meeting was held and the producers demanded prices for the summer months averaging $1.45. No agreement was reached.

After the meeting the St. Louis Dairy Co. announced prices averaging $1.26 2-3. Another meeting was called. Kayser was the only dairyman who met the producers. The latter reduced their demand to $1.35. and finally proposed $1.30 as a compromise. Again no agreement was reached. The St. Louis Dairy Co. paid $1.40 during April and $1.10 during May, the prices that were contemplated in the $1.26 2-3 average.

Producers Demanded $1.50.

The producers demanded $1.50 for June, July, August and September. The company had posted $1.10 as the June price. The company agreed to raise the June price to $1.25 and to make the prices for the four months average $1.40, which would have made the average for the season $1.35.

June 10 members of the producers' association stopped delivering milk to the company's shipping stations in Madison and Macoupin counties, which supply about 30 per cent of the St. Louis Dairy Co.'s supply.

Kayser, in speaking to a Post-Dispatch reporter, spoke of these counties as "our territory." He had previously said that there was no organization and no understanding among the St. Louis dairymen. He was asked to explain. He said the territory was divided automatically. "If we pick out a town, and put up a shack and hang out our shingle," he said, "the other companies keep out of that town. This is not because of an agreement but because experience has proved that if rival shipping stations are established at the same point they get to bidding against each other, to the injury of both."

Secretary Love told the reporter that the rival companies respected each other's territorial rights to the extent of refusing milk offered by a producer in the territory of another company when the producer had had a dispute with the company he had been doing business with and wanted to sell to another.

The three companies holding out against the producers' demand are the St. Louis, the Union and the Pevely. The Pevely company announced that it would pay $1.40 for June and if the drouth continued would make another advance. General Manager M. W. Kerckhoff said Friday that if the drouth continued it would probably be necessary to pay more than the farmers are demanding, but that the company wanted to be the judge of when a further advance was necessary.

WIFE SAYS HILL TAUNTED HER WITH WOMEN'S PHOTOS

Crossbill Charges Professor Drove Her From Home by "Crabbed" Temperament.

Mrs. Elsie May Hill, wife of Thomas J. Hill, an instructor at McKinley High School, filed a crossbill in Circuit Judge McQuillin's court yesterday, in which she alleges her husband associated with other women and once had his picture taken with two women, posing with their arms about his neck. She says he exhibited this picture to her and taunted her with it.

The Hills were married January 28, 1908, at Clayton, and separated in March, 1913. Before the last separation Mrs. Hill said, she was compelled to leave home on two occasions because of her husband's temperament, which she described as "morose, sullen and crabbed."

When she left on these occasions, she said, she found employment teaching school in Kentucky, but her husband followed her and she was forced to give up her work and return to him because he made trouble for her with the Board of Education and at the places where she was boarding.

Hill, in his petition, alleges his wife treated him with indifference, that she embarrassed him by contracting debts, and deserted him.

Mrs. Hill asks the restoration of her maiden name, Duffield. She says her husband's salary is $2340 a year. She has two garnishment suits against the Board of Education growing out of Hill's failure to pay temporary alimony.

Summer Season Is Now Booming at Mount Clemens, Mich.

The season at Mount Clemens, Mich., is now fairly open and it is expected that 1914 will be the banner year for this summer resort. Heretofore more than 70,000 persons visit Mount Clemens annually for the benefit of the baths.

Mount Clemens is famous throughout the country as a summer resort. Its fame for mineral water, beauty of scenery, restful atmosphere and scenery is widespread. It is close to Detroit and Lake St. Clair. The town itself is extremely active and has only modern stores. Every effort is making this year to develop Mount Clemens into a more attractive resort than ever before.

Explanation of Our New Circulating Music Roll Library Plan

You Subscribe for One Year

You are allowed the use of twelve rolls of music at a time and you may keep them as long as 30 days, or one month, or you may exchange them every day if you like. They must, however, be exchanged at least once a month.

There are no library fees; the only stipulation being that you agree to purchase two rolls every time you exchange the twelve.

Thus, you may buy two rolls a month—have the use of twelve rolls of music, and at the end of the year you own twenty-four rolls and have had all privileges of the Circulating Library for the full year.

ARMY OFFICER IS PUBLICLY WHIPPED BY DISCARDED GIRL

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

BERLIN, June 20.—A Berlin girl of German-American parentage wreaked this week complete revenge, after years of waiting, upon an officer who forsook and insulted her. First she lashed him across the face with a dog whip, then humiliated him before the court when he sued her for "attempted assault."

This officer engaged himself several years ago to marry the girl, and it was agreed that, as neither was wealthy, he should resign his commission and seek civil employment. He found excuses, however, for continual postponing his resignation, and when the girl's parents died he persuaded her and her sister to practically support him.

On being promoted to be a Captain the officer broke off the engagement and announced publicly that the girl never had been anything but his companion.

She refused to sue for libel, arguing that there was little prospect of getting even in that way. Instead of seeking the aid of the courts she arranged to meet him at a railway station in East Berlin when a large number of her friends were in the crowd on the platform. When the officer left the train the girl suddenly drew a dog whip and belabored her faithless lover across the face, leaving long cuts.

The Captain was obliged by the military court of honor to take action against the girl, and when the cuts were more or less healed he sued her for "attempted assault."

In court the girl defended her case herself. Instead of pleading justification she addressed the Judges, informing them of all the facts and closed:

"I plead guilty to assault and I have brought many witnesses to prove that the assault was highly successful."

The court promptly discharged her. The officer has been compelled to resign his commission.

NEW YORK FIRM BUYS THE NEUSTETER STORE

Concern Headed by Eastern Millionaire, Who Will Erect Building on Old Site.

What was formerly the Neusteter store, Seventh street and Washington avenue, has been purchased by the New York Cloak and Suit Co., of which A. M. Bedell is the active head. Under the new management James Grau will be the directing head. He has been the firm's manager in Newark, N. J. Nearly all of the old Neusteter employes will be retained; this is more especially emphasized among those who sell to the public. The sales folk of Neusteter's have a clientele that is unique among bargain seekers and St. Louisans who look for the highest kind of quality.

With the announcement of the new firm's advent into the commercial field of St. Louis also comes the news that it will erect a new building on the present site, the lease of which will not expire for 28 years. The firm plans to erect a six-story structure of terra cotta on this site within a year at a cost of $250,000. Each floor, it is planned, will be devoted to an exclusive department, business gowns, costumes, coats, waists and furs. The building will be of fireproof material.

The store in St. Louis will be one of a chain of six, New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, St. Louis. They all derive their ideas and goods from the New York establishment. The minimum price will be a dollar for waists, $10 for coats, $15 for suits and the variety of offerings will be increased from time to time.

Mr. Bedell is quoted as saying:

"In our policy newspaper advertising plays a prominent part. The only time to advertise is all the time. We use the newspapers every day. Our copy depicts the offerings with exactness. The reader sees the article advertised just as it is. Such advertising, backed by the goods, is a very large part of our success."

A. M. Bedell is said to be many times a millionaire and prominent in New York investment and development circles.

5585 CIVIL CASES TRIED IN CIRCUIT COURT IN A YEAR

Unpublished Report for 1913 Shows Judge Grimm Led in Number of Cases Heard.

An unpublished report of cases disposed of by the nine Judges of the civil division of the Circuit Court between Dec. 1, 1912, and Dec. 1, 1913, was shown to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday. It was prepared several months ago by Circuit Clerk Charles R. Graves, and was sent to a printer to be put in pamphlet form for general distribution among lawyers. But it was withdrawn after Judges expressed the opinion that the report might cause a false notion that some of the Judges were not doing as much work as others.

It was pointed out by the Judges that one Judge might have had several cases which took a week or more to try, while others had cases requiring less time, and the report would be unfair to the former.

Judge Grimm Tried 693 Cases.

Several weeks ago a reporter asked Graves for the record and was told such report had been prepared and a copy placed with all of the Judges. The clerk said publicity of the matter should come from them and he would not discuss it.

Within the time embraced the report shows that in Division No. 1, where Judge Grimm presides, 693 cases were disposed of. This was more than in any of the other divisions. In No. 4, Judge Rassieur, the record shows 682 cases were disposed of; in No. 9, Judge Cave, 659; No. 7, Judge Taylor, 652; No. 5, Judge Jones (he now is in the criminal branch, being succeeded by Judge Kinsey), 645; No. 8, Judge Withrow, 611; No. 2, Judge Fisher, 593; No. 6, Judge McQuillin, 581, and No. 3, Judge Hitchcock, 577.

Judges Hitchcock and McQuillin did not preside in their respective divisions during all the time included, they having been transferred from other courtrooms early last year. Judge Hennings, now serving in the criminal division, also served in No. 8 during part of this time, being succeeded by Judge Withrow.

5585 Cases Tried in Year.

The record shows that out of 1647 divorce petitions filed, 1253 decrees of divorce were granted. Judge Grimm also has the highest record for divorces, having granted 163. Judge Fisher separated fewer mismated couples than the other Judges, having granted 109.

A total of 5585 cases of all description were disposed of in the nine courts, 973 more than in the year before. There were 674 jury trials at a cost of $32,080 for jurors. The average cost of each jury is placed at $49.06.

PIERCE GARMENT CO. IS HERE TO STAY

Although the Pierce Garment Co., 511-15 Washington avenue, has only been established for the past six weeks, the business has been such that the firm announces it has come to stay. The Pierce Co. deals in every kind of women's outer apparel, cloaks, suits, skirts, waists, furs, millinery, etc. It has adopted a policy to give the purchasing public the best goods for the least money by keeping down expenses. It occupies only the ground floor and the large store has a high ceiling and is light and airy. In order to keep down the overhead expenses for the benefit of customers the firm does not plan any elaborate extra displays of women's finery either for the present or near future.

The general manager of the Pierce Garment Co. is Ralph Aal, well known in St. Louis. He was with the Stix, Baer & Fuller Co. for seven years and for 25 years his father's was the first name in the city directory. His cards caused amusements, reading "first in war, first in peace and first in the city directory."

Ralph Aal, in speaking of the firm's plans, said:

"The Pierce Garment Co. has come to stay. We are satisfied that we are on the right track. Our motto is one price to everything and everything to be marked in plain figures. Our aim is to sell at the lowest figures possible. We have no elevators to contend with and our customers are waited upon with alacrity. We also have a system of refunding money or making an equivalent exchange without question whenever a customer is not satisfied."

C. F. Jackson is president of the firm and Louis Arkush is secretary and treasurer. Ralph Aal is also vice-president, as well as general manager.

CARRANZA REFUSES TO DECLARE TRUCE; WAR TO CONTINUE

Constitutionalist First Chief Decides to Reject Request of Mediators That Hostilities Be Suspended Pending Niagara Conferences, but Reply Is Not Made Public.

HOPE REVIVED FOR MEDIATION'S SUCCESS

Mexico City Hears That Villa Has Proclaimed Gen. Angeles Provisional President—Villa Rebukes Admirers.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The gunboat Dolphin, with Rear Admiral F. F. Fletcher and his staff aboard, sailed from Vera Cruz tonight for Washington. Admiral Fletcher, who has been in Mexican waters for more than a year, is to confer with Secretary Daniels and the President.

By Associated Press.
SALTILLO, Mex., June 19 (via Laredo, Tex., June 20.)—Hostilities will not be suspended between the Constitutionalist forces and the forces of Huerta, according to the note to the Niagara mediators from Gen. Carranza.

After a long conference with his advisers, Gen. Carranza decided today that the request of the mediators could not be granted.

The text of the reply to the mediators was not made public as it has not yet been transmitted to them.

Break Between Villa and Caranza Definite, Mexico City Hears.

MEXICO CITY, June 20.—The Interior Department reports that Villa has proclaimed Gen. Felipo Angeles Provisional President of Mexico and that the rupture between Villa and Carranza is definite.

Pedro Lascuarain, formerly Minister of Foreign Affairs, it was said tonight by his friends, would under no circumstances accept the provisional presidency of Mexico. They declared that he is out of politics.

Gen. Manuel Zozaya, commanding the Federal column which has been repairing the railroad to Colima, is lying seriously wounded at Guadalajara. He received his injuries in a recent engagement with the Constitutionalists.

Both houses of Congress held preliminary meetings this afternoon and elected Manuel Mercado speaker of the lower house, and Enrique Gudino, chairman of the Senate, for the extraordinary session of Congress which will be held next week.

Owing to the lack of fuel, the Government railroad service had been suspended.

Juarez Hears Angeles Will Be Provisional President.

JUAREZ, June 20.—Gen. Felipo Angeles is reckoned here as the next Provisional President of Mexico. Dispatches from Torreon today denied that Villa had placarded the city with a proclamation calling Angeles the Provisional President, but stated that "Gen. Angeles has not yet announced his candidacy."

This is considered here as equivalent to a statement that Angeles will make such an announcement.

Gen. Obregon, commanding the Constitutionalist forces besieging Guadalajara, has gone over to Villa as against Carranza. This information was received at the rebel headquarters in Saltillo today. Obregon has been one of the most successful of the Constitutionalist generals.

Gen. Villa today sent a rebuke to rebel admirers who congratulated him on having severed relations with Carranza.

HOPE REVIVED FOR MEDIATION PLANS

U. S. Tells Minister Noan Names of Men It Favors for Provisional Presidency.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—When Minister Naon left Washington for Niagara Falls Friday night he carried with him for consideration by himself and the other mediators the names of these two revolutionists who are acceptable to the United States for Provisional President of Mexico and whom it is believed the Revolutionists would also accept:

Gen. Felipe Angeles, Chief of Staff for Gen. Villa.

Miguel Covarrubias, in charge of the Revolutionary agency in London, and until six months ago a member of the Mexican Diplomatic Corps. Gen. Angeles was Carranga's Secretary of War, but recently was dismissed from that office by the Constitutionalists' first chief.

In his conference with Luis Caberra last night Minister Naon inquired whether the selection of these two men would be recognized by the Constitutionalists and he was informed

Why doesn't the longest day come in cool weather?
JUNE 21 14.

This is the longest day of the year. The sun is scheduled to shine 14 hours and 55 minutes, starting on the job at 4:35 a. m. and bringing its ardent activities to a close at 7:30 p. m.

Many things may happen on this day. Huerta may resign. The People's League may indorse the new charter. The St. Louis Federal team may even win a game. But while these things may happen, there is one thing which is considered fairly sure to happen. That is, that it will be a hot day.

Illinois: Fair today; warmer in north portion; tomorrow probably fair and continued warm; moderate variable winds mostly southeast and south.

BANKER LOCKED IN STEEL VAULT WORKS WAY OUT

With Screwdriver He Gets Through Three Steel Doors While Coroner Waits.

BELLINGHAM, Wash., June 20.—When locked in a steel vault for two hours today, C. K. McMillan, vice-president of the Northwestern National Bank, worked his way past three steel doors with a small screwdriver and emerged little the worse for his experience. He had entered the vault to repair the burglar alarm system and the doors were accidentally closed behind him.

A locksmith worked frantically from the outside and physicians with a pulmotor and the county coroner assembled to give aid.

"They'd have a hard time keeping me in jail," was the banker's comment as he emerged perspiring freely.

WOMAN WEARS DIAMOND RING ON TOE FOR SAFETY

Wife of Oklahoman Reports Loss of Gem While Asleep in Pullman.

Mrs. Eugene W. Dixon, wife of an Oklahoma City physician, put a diamond ring on one of her toes for safekeeping as she afterward explained, before she went to bed in a sleeping car on a Frisco train bound for St. Louis. After the train reached Union Station yesterday morning, Dr. Dixon reported that his wife had lost the ring.

Detectives questioned Mrs. Dixon, who told with some reluctance how she had placed the ring on her toe. She said it was missing when she awoke. She said she did not believe her foot had been outside the berth, which her husband had shared with her.

LAWYER IS SLAIN ON ROAD BY WIFE BECAUSE OF 'LOVE'

Says She Killed Husband So He "Would Not Marry Another Woman."

FOUND BESIDE HIS BODY

Party of Autoists Discovers Tragedy and Police Arrest Her an Hour Later.

EXETER, N. H., June 20.—Henry J. Folsom, a Boston lawyer was shot and killed by his wife on the road between here and New Market today. Mrs. Folsom was arrested nearly an hour later when the police found her standing over her husband's body with a revolver in her hand. She confessed.

"I did it because I loved him," she told the police, and also declared she was jealous of her husband.

The Folsoms have a summer home at New Market, eight miles from here. Mrs. Folsom has been there several weeks. She came to Exeter today and met her husband, who arrived on an afternoon train from Boston. It is believed they were driving to New Market when the shooting occurred. A party of men in an automobile came upon the body with the woman beside it and after questioning her they hurried here and notified the police.

Police Find Woman With Body.

When Chief Andrew Davis and John Knowlton, the medical referee, reached the scene they found Mrs. Folsom still standing over the body. She handed the weapon over to Chief Davis.

"Is he dead?" she asked.

The Chief assured her that he was.

"I don't think he is," she said. "Feel his pulse."

The medical referee made another examination of the body, finding no signs of life and Mrs. Folsom stepped into the Chief's automobile saying simply: "All right."

She was locked up here to await a hearing. Mrs. Folsom is about 40 years old. Her husband was a little older.

After a hearing before Judge Edward Mayer, Mrs. Folsom was held for the grand jury of the October term of court. She pleaded guilty and said the court would not understand if she told her reasons for the shooting.

"I have no case," she said.

Counsel Named by Court.

The Court appointed counsel for the woman. Her attorney entered a plea of not guilty in her behalf.

Chief of Police Davis testified that when he asked Mrs. Folsom why she shot her husband she answered:

"So he would not marry another woman."

The Folsoms were in a two-seated carriage when the shooting began. It is believed that Folsom was in the front driving and his wife was in the rear seat. Five shots were fired, all taking effect.

At the conclusion of the hearing Mrs. Folsom was taken to the Portsmouth jail.

Wife Who Killed Lawyer Was Inmate of Sanitarium Three Years.

SOMERVILLE, Mass., June 20.—Henry Folsom, killed today at Exeter, N. H., by shots alleged to have been fired by his wife, was chairman of the School Committee here for three years. He was formerly principal of the High School at Gardner, Mass. He was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1892.

APARTMENT HOUSE STORM-CENTER AS JANITOR MOVES IN

HIS WIFE DOES CLEANING.

New Tenant Replies That He Is Honest and Could Buy Three-Fifths of Neighbors.

Residents in the 5800 block on Washington boulevard were greatly agitated yesterday over the efforts of a janitor to rise in the world by forsaking his basement quarters and moving into second floor living rooms in a finely appointed apartment house at 5897 Washington boulevard.

The man, whose sudden flight into the realms of affluence caused much jangling of telephone bells and exchange of gossip, punctuated by vigorous expressions of protest, is Charles Blomberg, janitor of the Thurles Building, at the southwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Hamilton avenue.

Bernard Quigley, manager of the rental department of the Mercantile Trust Co., was kept busy answering telephone calls from persons in the Washington boulevard block who wanted to know why the Mercantile, as agent, had rented an apartment to a janitor.

Lived in the Basement.

Quigley told all inquirers that it was against his protest that A. Plesner of 4301 West Belle place, the owner, allowed Blomberg to sign a year's lease. Until Friday Blomberg and his wife lived in basement rooms in the neighborhood. The rent of the apartment they now occupy is $50 a month.

There was more consternation when it was learned that Mrs. Blomberg planned to do housecleaning for other dwellers in the apartment house where she has her new quarters, and that Blomberg intended to sublet some of the rooms.

When told of the storm of protest which had arisen, Blomberg said that although he had signed a year's lease for the apartments, he would be willing to surrender them and move if the matter could be satisfactorily adjusted.

"I didn't have the advantage of an education—I had to go to work when I was 12 years old," Blomberg said. "But I have saved my money. Today I do not owe a man in the world a single penny. And there are two banks in this town which will cash my checks for larger amounts than you imagine.

A First-Rate Janitor.

"I've lived straight-forward and I've made my money honestly. I can look any man in the face. Sure I'm a janitor. Somebody's got to do this work, you know. But I'm a first-rate janitor.

"This is America, you know, and I thought my wife and I could occupy the apartment without creating so much consternation. She is cleaning up the rooms of George M. Burns, a bachelor, who occupies the flat opposite ours, No. 4.

"I will admit I don't wear fine clothes and diamonds. But I'll bet I can buy out three-fifths of the people in that neighborhood."

Mrs. Eugene F. Howe, who lives in one of the apartments, said their lease had 10 months yet to run, but that they would rather break that lease than stay in the same building. "I understood this was a first-class apartment," she said.

BULLET GLANCES FROM WATER; KILLS A CHILD

Illinois Youth Hits Girl on Bank When He Shoots at Fish.

PRAIRIE DU ROCHER, Ill., June 20.—Celestine Duclos, 12 years old, was killed accidentally here yesterday by Lewis Pelate, aged 19, who was trying to shoot a fish. A bullet fired at the water glanced and struck her in the breast.

The girl, with her sister, was standing on the bank of the river, watching Pelate, who was in a boat, shooting fish with an old cap and ball rifle. When a fish appeared near the surface, Pelate fired, without noticing that the girls were in range.

When the bullet bounded from the surface of the water and struck the child, she fell and died within a few minutes.

The girl was a daughter of Michael Duclos of Fort Chartres Landing. [illegible]

MRS. MARRE, NOW PRONOUNCED WHITE TO ASK A DIVORCE

Appellate Court Sets Aside Annulment on Ground It Wasn't Proven She Was Negress.

A decision of the St. Louis Court of Appeals yesterday conducted Mrs. Agnes Nash Marre of 3627 Gravois avenue across the color line which severs black from white. For two years, under a decision of the Circuit Court, her legal status was that of a negress. The Appellate Court, reversing the verdict of the lower court, pronounced her a white woman.

The case was that of a suit brought by her husband, Louis Marre, son of James Marre, former owner of Forest Park Highlands, to annul their marriage on the ground that, as she was a negress, it constituted miscegenation, which is forbidden under the Missouri law. A verdict for the plaintiff was returned Feb. 23, 1912, by Charles Claflin Allen, then Circuit Judge. The suit attracted a great deal of attention.

The Court of Appeals determined the plaintiff had not proved Mrs. Marre to be a negress, and went farther to say that even if it were granted that her veins held a tincture of negro blood, it was not shown that the proportion amounted to one-eighth, which is the ratio defining a negro under a Missouri statute.

Says She Will Bring Suit.

Mrs. Marre told a Post-Dispatch reporter last night that she regarded the finding of the Court of Appeals as a vindication, and that she would now bring suit to divorce her husband.

Her complexion is reddish, rather than swarthy, and, except for a fulness of the lips, her features seem Indian in cast. She has an abundance of straight, raven hair. She declares her descent is Indian and Mexican.

Mrs. Marre said her family was broken-hearted over the lower court's decision, and she thought this was a factor in the death of her father and sister. Her father died in October, 1912. Her sister, Mrs. William Smith, died five months ago.

Mrs. Marre is 31 years old and lives with her mother, Mrs. Emily Nash Marre formerly resided with his father at 3815 Potomac street, but is now in the contracting business in Cincinnati.

TY COBB INJURES HIS HAND IN FIGHT WITH A BUTCHER

Ball Player Arrested; Injury Probably Will Put Him Out of Game for Days.

DETROIT, Mich., June 20.—Tyrus Raymond Cobb, center fielder of the Detroit American League baseball club, was arrested tonight in the butcher shop of W. L. Carpenter on Hamilton boulevard while engaging in a fist fight with Harold Harding, 20 years old, one of Car-

Cobb's right hand was injured in the fight and was at first reported to have been broken.

Harding told the police that Cobb assaulted him after the ballplayer had pointed a revolver at the proprietor. Carpenter confirmed the charge and said Cobb attacked Harding when he interfered.

The explanation given by the ballplayer after his arrest was that the butcher insulted Mrs. Cobb. Carpenter denied the charge, but admitted that Cobb rushed into the shop, made the allegation and then started trouble.

Cobb said that his wife told the butcher a fish purchased earlier in the day was not satisfactory and during words which followed, Carpenter had insulted her. Cobb said he went to the butcher shop to demand an apology from the proprietor.

Cobb was released late tonight. No formal charge was made against him but friends of the ball player said they understood that court proceedings might be instituted.

A physician dressed his hand and reported that the thumb was strained and bruised.

A long statement to the newspapers was dictated by Cobb late tonight. In it he declared that Carpenter grabbed a butcher's cleaver when the two began their argument. It became known that Cobb has been permitted to carry a revolver for some time. Threatening letters which he received caused him to arm himself, he said.

Cobb's injury may keep him from playing baseball for several days.

WOMAN, 45, SHOOTS HER PET DOG AND KILLS HERSELF

Housekeeper for Her Brother Is Found Mortally Wounded by Police Who Force Door.

Miss Mary Montgomery, 45 years old, shot herself twice at her flat at 3111 New Ashland place at 1:10 p. m. yesterday, after having fired two shots into her pet fox terrier "Duffy."

Police were called by Mrs. George Flannigan. Finding the Montgomery premises barred, they forced a front door. Miss Montgomery was found unconscious in a middle room, with a pistol at her side. The dog, yelping with pain from a bullet wound in the back, was in a rear room.

Miss Montgomery was taken to the city hospital. She regained consciousness there for a few moments, but gave no explanation of her act. Her only words to doctors were: "Let me alone; let me alone." She died at 2:40 p. m.

Miss Montgomery for years had been housekeeper for her brother, Hugh, a gasfitter for the Gas Consumers' Association. After reaching the house, he said he believed his sister had become insane. "She has been acting queerly for several weeks," he said. "I had no idea she would kill herself, however, or I should not have left my pistol about the house. My revolver had been in the same place for 15 years, and I never had known her to touch it."

Mrs. Leora Ozee of 3113 New Ashland place said she, as well as other neighbors, had noticed strange actions by Miss Montgomery lately. She said Miss Montgomery recently got the idea that people were watching her and making fun of her. Mrs. Ozee said Miss Montgomery accused two of her sons of talking about her, but they had assured her they had not. Then, she declared, Miss Montgomery accused others in the neighborhood of tormenting her.

PILOT RAN MAJESTIC INTO TOWER; FAILED TO SEE RED LIGHTS

U. S. Authority to Start Investigation This Week to Fix Blame for Accident Near Chain of Rocks; Captain Stayed on Boat Many Hours.

ONLY ONE MAN IN CREW OF 40 IS MISSING

Steamer Had Discharged 900 Passengers at Alton and Almost All on Board Were Asleep; Survivors Swam Miles in Night Clothing.

The sinking of the excursion steamer Majestic in the 20-foot channel of the Mississippi at the Chain of Rocks at 1:30 a. m. yesterday, a few minutes after it struck the submerged foundation of the new Waterworks intake tower, probably will be investigated this week by the United States steamboat authorities, with a view to fixing the responsibility.

Whether a life was lost was still in doubt last night. Capt. Frank Gill, of 3905A Sullivan avenue, who remained on the wreck until dark, said he had heard that all the 40 members of the crew were safe, but police reports stated that William Cuthbert of Peoria, Ill., a watchman, was not accounted for. The boat had no passengers on board.

Owner Visits Wreck.

D. W. Wisherd of Quincy, Ill., principal owner of the Majestic, visited the wreck last evening, and examined particularly the position of the two warning red lights, kerosene lanterns, which stood 3 or 4 feet above the water at the time of the accident, and which the pilot, S. B. Withrow, 70 years old, said he did not see. Withrow also said he did not know the new intake tower was being built, as he had not lately been running on this part of the river.

Wisherd said, before going to the Chain of Rocks, that he had talked with Withrow, and that from the pilot's statement, and from other sources of information, he did not think the lights were properly placed. He said Withrow told him the outer light was not far enough out by several feet, to indicate the position of the submerged obstruction, and that the point at which the boat struck was outside the boundary shown by the lights.

Boat Recently Rebuilt.

After his visit to the scene, Wisherd said he would have no statement to make, as to the responsibility for the accident, until after a thorough investigation, which he said he would make today. He said the Majestic, which was formerly called the Keystone State, recently was rebuilt at a cost of $32,000, and that he and H. E. Wisherd, associated with him in the ownership, had refused an offer of $50,000 for the boat.

Water Commissioner Wall visited the wreck in the morning, and took with him a photographer, who made pictures showing the position of the boat and the lights. He said there could be no question that the lights were burning at the time of the accident, and he said he did not see how the city could be held responsible for the wreck.

Col. C. M. Townsend, United States Lighthouse Inspector, said he ordered the lights placed on the submerged masonry at the opening of navigation last March, and that he had heard no complaint about them. It was the nightly duty of Julius Miller, who sleeps in the old intake tower, to place the signals. The lights were burning after the accident.

Steamboat accidents on this section of the Mississippi are investigated by W. J. McDonald, United States Inspector of Steam Vessels. He was out of the city yesterday, but it was said at his office, in the old Federal building at Third and Olive streets, that he would be back this week. In cases where a pilot is found responsible for an accident, Inspector McDonald, who issues the licenses, has authority to revoke or suspend them.

$5000 Still on Boat.

T. W. Posey and John Tardy, two of the crew, remained last night on board the Majestic, whose texas, or upper deck, and pilot house projected well above the water. They were under orders from Wisherd to desert the wreck if it should appear to be in any danger of breaking up. The proceeds of a big day's business, believed to be about $5000, are in the safe on the submerged main deck.

Hundreds of persons visited the Chain-of-Rocks yesterday to view the wreck, which could best be seen from the terraced park behind the waterworks.

Had Discharged Passengers.

The question whether the Majestic can profitably be raised and rebuilt may be determined by the owners this week, after examination by divers. The plan of building a cofferdam around the boat and pumping the water out has [illegible] could be done, the question is whether it would pay.

The Majestic, a stern-wheeler ranked among first-class river steamers, as to size, and was licensed to carry 2500 passengers. Its hull was 225 feet long and its width of beam was 37 feet, while the passenger decks were 43 feet across. It had four decks, the lower, main and hurricane decks, the latter serving as a promenade around the texas, which was raised a few feet above it and was canopied.

Since its rebuilding the Majestic had been in the upper Mississippi excursion trade. Friday it took out morning and evening excursion parties from Alton, and the second party, numbering some 900, an outing organized by telephone girls, was landed at the Alton wharf at 11:30 p. m. The boat then started for Cape Girardeau, where it had an engagement for yesterday, and the intention was to stop and take coal at St. Louis.

Most of Crew Asleep.

After the departure from Alton, most of the crew went to bed in the staterooms along the Texas. Four licensed pilots were on board, but Withrow was alone in the pilot house, despite his unfamiliarity with the lower river.

The new intake tower is to be 200 yards east of the old tower, which is a river landmark. Work on the foundations began last summer and the work has reached a point where, in a low stage of the river, the top would be exposed. It is a solid concrete structure, as unyielding as any rock, and rivermen say a steel-hull steamer would have stood a collision with it no better than did the wooden hull of the Majestic.

The channel extends between the new and old towers, and for several hundred yards east of the new tower's foundations, to a point near the Illinois shore.

Lights Went Out.

The boat was proceeding downstream at about twelve miles an hour, when the right, or starboard, bow struck the concrete foundation. The hull scraped along the concrete, tearing a gash which extended nearly to a point beneath the pilot house. Then it slid off, and the concrete shattered the railing of the hurricane deck, amidships.

The men sleeping in the texas, and a few on the lower deck, were awakened by the shock, or by each other, and those below rushed to the top. The lights went out, a moment after the crash, as the electrical machinery and the boilers sank beneath the water.

The men groped for life preservers, which were hung about the staterooms. These appliances were of good quality, and a number of the men leaped overboard and swam away, without waiting for the lowering of lifeboats. Capt. Gill and Pilot Withrow stuck to the pilot house.

Two Swam Three Miles.

Roland Wisherd of Quincy, 17 years old, nephew of the owner, was one of those who went overboard with life preservers. With a deckhand, he held to a board, and the two reached an island three miles below the intake. A fisherman took them ashore. Four others, one of them Albert Gabel, a musician, were rescued by policemen from Mosentine Island, four miles south of the intake, and were taken ashore in a launch and cared for at the North Market Street Police Station. Most of the rescued men were in their night clothing, and as a cool breeze was blowing, their long stay in the water caused them to become chilled.

The first news of the accident was telephoned to the police by Claude Smaling, watchman for the construction company which is building the tower. He said the boat's searchlight awoke him, and that a moment later he heard the crash of the wreck and saw the lights go out.

Policemen and reporters went to the Chain of Rocks in automobiles, and a motorboat was obtained, in which a visit was made to the wrecked steamer. The rescues of various members of the crew were reported soon after.

Capt. Gill said there were 2200 life preservers on board, four lifeboats seating 18 each, seven rafts holding 26 each and 30 individual swimming boards. He said that, had the passengers been aboard there need not have been loss of life, as all could have found safety on the upper deck, well above the water.

$50,000 FIRE FOLLOWS EXPLOSION AT FLAT RIVER

Lighting Plant in Store Starts Blaze That Damages Entire Block.

RIVER MINES, Mo., June 20.—One-third of the business section of Flat River, Mo., 20 miles southeast of St. Louis, was damaged by fire, water and smoke tonight when a gasoline lighting plant in P. Sack's dry goods store exploded at 6:30, setting fire to the surrounding buildings, causing a damage estimated at $50,000.

Three buildings were a total loss, and virtually every structure in the block was damaged. Quick action by the volunteer fire department checked the progress of the flames. The street was filled with merchants' stocks hastily pulled out. Nearly all of this was damaged by water or smoke. No one was injured.

This is the second disastrous fire Flat River has had, the entire town having burned 10 years ago.

LELAND, Ill., June 20.—John Satter insisted on doing his marketing even though his family is suffering from smallpox and under quarantine. For that reason the 700 residents of the village were vaccinated today.

He was finally induced to remain at home but those who persuaded him became alarmed and Health Officer Crawford came from Springfield and proceeded to vaccinate the village.

Carranza Refuses Mediators' Request to Declare a Truce

that the question would have to be laid before Gen. Carranza. At midnight the revolutionary junta here advised Carranza by telegraph the United States had eliminated all others and was insisting on the selection of either Angeles or Vovarrubias. No reply has been received by the revolutionists here to this message.

Tonight the President and Secretary of State are confident mediation will succeed and that either Angeles or Covarrubias will be accepted by the Huerta delegates.

The President and Secretary of State would give no formal explanation of the basis of their hope, but they insisted there would be no immediate collapse of mediation. They indicated that joint deliberations between the mediators and representtives of Gen. Huerta and the United States would be resumed Monday.

In this view they were upheld by actual developments, Minister Naon's return to Niagara Falls having resulted in postponement of the next joint conference until Monday.

Developments in the ranks of the Constitutionalists, chiefly the break between Gen. Villa and Gen. Carranza over military operations against the Huerta Government in Mexico were reported here to have opened the way for a break in the mediation deadlock. President Wilson is declared to have explained thoroughly to Minister Naon why the United States insisted upon the selection of a man for Provisional President of Mexico who would be acceptable to the revolutionary element of the Southern republic. The chief reason for this insistence was reported to be that the revolt against the present form of government in Mexico never could be stemmed unless there was actual reform.

According to advices received this afternoon either Angeles or Covarrubias would be acceptable to Villa, but there is some doubt how Carranza would regard them.

MEDIATORS WOULD PROLONG SESSION

NIAGARA FALLS, Ontario, June 20.—Instead of adjourning abruptly as had been expected, the mediation proceedings will be prolonged for perhaps another week.

The change was brought about as a result of the visit of Minister Naon of Argentina to Washington, where he conferred with President Wilson and Secretary Bryan. Dr. Naon brought back a spirit of optimism and some new ideas which he imparted to Ambassador da Gama of Brazil and Minister Suarez of Chile. It was announced after their talk that there would be no conference until Monday.

The determination which seems to have been reached is to keep the mediation board from formal adjournment, though there may be a recess in a week or so, while the search is continued for persons eligible for provisional president according to the ideas set forth in the conferences.

Although no definite plans have been framed by the mediators, and the American and the Huerta delegates were unaware of the program except in a general way, all parties expressed a wish to prolong the negotiations and make renewed efforts to effect a compromise.

There is every reason to believe that the friction between Carranza and Villa and the report that Gen. Huerta intended to retire in favor of Pedro Lascurain before the proceedings reached a conclusion affected the mediators in their decision. The possibility of a new development on Mexican soil that might change the entire aspect of the problem here has been taken into consideration by the South American diplomats.

Dr. Naon's ideas, it is believed, have not crystallized into definite proposal. The impression gained is that his chief object in professing optimism is to prevent the deadlock between the Americans and Mexicans from precipitately ending the negotiations.

Dr. Naon predicted that the negotiations would be conducted for another two weeks.

VILLA ARMY ROUTS FOE AT ZACATECAS

5000 Federals Reported Beaten by Rebel Vanguard When Pursuing Natera.

TORREON, Coahuila, June 20.—According to official advices received today at headquarters of the division of the North, the Federals yesterday sustained a crushing defeat near Calera, a few miles north of Zacatecas. Five thousand Federals, pursuing the retreating forces of Gen. Natera, Constitutionalist commander, met the vanguard of Gen. Villa's troops, advancing to renew the attack on Zacatecas.

The ensuing engagement resulted in a complete rout of the Federals who were obliged to abandon equipment and provisions. The Federals were reported to have lost heavily.

It was learned from the many prisoners taken that the Federals did not know of the presence of the Villa troops and that it had been the plan of Gen. Medina Barron, commanding the Federals at Zacatecas to isolate and annihilate the forces of Gen. Natera.

The last of the organizations of the division of the North to be employed in the attack on Zacatecas left here early today. Gen. Villa and his staff will follow either late today or early tomorrow.

"In the attack on Zacatecas will be employed about 25,000 men," said Gen. Villa. "Of this number about 20,000 belong to the division of the North. We will be supported by 51 pieces of field artillery and 73 machine guns. There is enough ammunition for both as well as for the men.

"I would prefer that those Mexican patriots who engage in politics take a rifle and help fight Gen. Huerta," said Villa with a broad smile. "For myself I wish to say that I am out of politics and that bringing this campaign to successful conclusion is the only object I pursue."

Carranza's Agent Appeals to Rebel Factions to Support First Chief.

EL PASO, Tex., June 20.—"The only thing to do is to have everybody define his attitude and have all the chiefs reiterate their loyalty to Carranza."

This appeal came today from Luis Cabrera, adviser of Carranza and at present conferring with Washington officials. It was addressed to Roberto Pesquiera, constitutionalist confidential agent.

Cabrera's message came at a time when agents of both the Carranza and Villa elements admittedly were worried over the situation. The ejection by Carranza of Gen. Angeles as Secretary of War on the provisional cabinet was dispelled in part yesterday by predictions that the Carranza and Villa controversy had become a closed incident, and that the divorce of certain relations between Carranza and Villa would not interfere with the actual progress of the revolution.

Official efforts failed today to find out the exact condition of the Carranza officials forcefully ejected from their offices at Juarez. Efforts to learn the disposition of the 1,000,000 pesos in Constitutionalist currency confiscated by Villa's military officials from the national treasury offices at Juarez, also failed. Villa was reported as making all possible haste to move his troops to the attack of Zacatecas.

Gen. Angeles was one of 14 signers of a protest against Carranza when Villa tendered his resignation last Saturday. He was a General of the Federal army under the Madero regime, and was the only Federal officer of prominence and rank to remain loyal to Madero during Huerta's uprising at Mexico City. He escaped, joined Carranza's revolution and begged to be given a place in the Constitutionalist army.

Angeles and Raoul Madero, brother of the late President, both are with Villa. In the present division of the Carranza and Villa elements this is taken as significant, as it is believed to place the power of the Madero family on the side of Villa.

JESSE GRANT IS SUED FOR NONSUPPORT

Wife of Former President's Son Asks for Sum "Befitting Income of Husband."

NEW YORK, June 20.—Jesse R. Grant, son of former President U. S. Grant, today was named as defendant in a suit brought by his wife, Elisabeth Grant, to compel the United States Trust Co., as trustee under the will of Julia Dent Grant, his mother, to pay her a sum sufficient to support her "in a manner befitting the income and position of her husband."

The complaint states that from 1880 until 1902 the defendant and his wife lived at the home of his mother, who supported them. Mrs. Grant alleges that after the death of her mother-in-law her husband abandoned her. Mrs. Grant asserts her husband receives an income of approximately $8400 a year from the estate left by his mother, combined with his share of the income of the trust fund of $220,000 established by patriotic citizens for the benefit of the former President's family.

MAN TAKEN FROM RIVER, SAYS HE WAS THROWN IN

Declares He Was Tossed From Motor Boat by Strangers Who Demanded Money.

A man who said he was Michael Martin, 35 years old, of 3650 Olive street, was fished out of the river at St. George street, at 11:50 o'clock last night by policemen who heard his calls for help.

At the city hospital he said he had attended a moving picture show at Channing avenue and Olive street, and on leaving it was followed by two men. He next discovered himself in a motor boat on the river, where the two men were attempting to make him sign papers giving them everything he owned. When he refused, he said, they beat him over the head with an oar and pitched him into the water.

LABOR AGENTS DISAPPEAR

Lawyer Says Clients Paid but Never Got Positions.

Joseph Nicolaus, an attorney in the Holland Building, yesterday requested the police to investigate "The Fidelity Service Co.," operating as an employment agency at 816 Market street.

Nicolaus said several of his clients had paid as high as $10 for positions which never materialized. Investigation showed the place had been closed several days ago.

MAN TIED, HEAD INJURED, RESCUED FROM THE RIVER

Declares He Was Beaten, Tossed From Boat Into Shallow Water.

NOT EXPECTED TO LIVE

Michal Martin Says He Was Attacked on Street and Robbed of Mortgage.

William Gentry, engineer, and his fireman, William Huey, riding on a switch engine of the Manufacturers' Railway at the foot of St. George street, at 11:50 o'clock last night, heard cries for help. They followed the sound, and wading 10 feet into the river, found a man, tied hand and foot, they said, with a clothesline.

They dragged him out and blew the whistle of their engine until Policeman J. P. Landy arrived. He took the man to the city hospital, where physicians said the man seemed to have suffered a fracture at the base of the skull, and that he probably would die.

Half unconscious, the injured man said he was Michael Martin, 35 years old, fireman at the St. Louis Club.

He told a wierd story of having been at a moving picture show at Channing avenue and Olive street, and that when he walked away toward Jefferson avenue he was attacked by two men, whom he said he recognized and whose names he gave to the police.

He remembered nothing more, he said, until he found himself with the two men in a motorboat on the river. They were demanding a mortgage he held for $256 on property in Granite City, and also that he write a promissory note of some kind. One of the men, he said, took the mortgage from his pocket and tore it up. Then they tied his hands and feet, he continued, and pitched him into the river.

Police reports did not explain whether Martin was kneeling or sitting in the water near the shore, or how, with his injuries and his limbs tied, he was able to keep his head above water. Physicians at the hospital would not permit reporters to question Martin in detail.

Policeman Landy reported that when he reached Martin his pockets were turned inside out and his hands were tied with clothesline. Gentry and Huey told him they had removed a rope from his feet. Gentry lives at 2844 South Seventh street, and Huey at 2222 East Clarence avenue.

MILITANTS' MEN FRIENDS DUCKED BY CROWD

Minister Thrown in Lake When He Interrupts Chancellor Lloyd-George's Speech.

LONDON, June 20.—A nearby artificial lake gave a big crowd an opportunity today to vent their wrath on suffragist interrupters of David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who spoke at Denmark Hill, in the south of London, but chivalrous discrimination was employed as between the men and women disturbers, the women being chased off the grounds and the men being ducked in the lake.

The man who fared worst was a clergyman, said to be a member of Sylvia Pankhurst's East End army. Undeterred by the fate that had befallen other disturbers, he demanded in stentorian tones, to know why the Government had not given votes to women. His clerical garb seemed to produce the effect on the crowd that a red flag does on a mad bull. They rushed and carried him off his feet and pitched him headlong into the lake, from which, after frequent complete immersions, he was rescued in a half-drowned condition by a man in a boat.

ENVELOPE WITH $1400 IN IT TAKEN FROM POCKET

Mississippian Says Money Was Stolen From Inside of Coat After Visit to Saloon.

R. K. Dyke, 34 years old, a farmer of Macon, Miss., told the police he was robbed last night of an envelope containing $900 in currency and a draft for $500.

He said he went to a saloon at 2700 Olive street with three men he had met in East St. Louis and after a few drinks he took a Grand car, getting off at Henrietta street. It was then, he siad, he missed the envelope, which he had carried in an inside pocket of his coat.

LINCOLN TABLET ABROAD

English to Honor Ancestors of War President.

NEW YORK, June 20.—An organization called the Lincoln Memorial Committee has been formed to erect a tablet in Hingham, England, in honor of the ancestors of Abraham Lincoln.

Lincoln's ancestors came to this country from Hingham, and at least five generations can be traced previous to 1637, when Samuel Lincoln, the great-great-great-great-grandfather of Abraham Lincoln, came to this country. The tablet will be erected in the Hingham village church.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 20.—The Attorney-General today received checks from [illegible] railroad companies for $28,220.03, payable to the State.

This sum represents costs heretofore paid out by the State on account of the Federal injunction suits which were finally won by the State in the Supreme Court of the United States, and the costs assessed against the roads.

BIPLANE RAMS BALLOON IN AERIAL SHAM BATTLE; 9 DIE

By Associated Press.

VIENNA, June 20.—Nine burned and mutilated bodies, the splintered fragments of an aeroplane and the charred remnants of a dirigible balloon tonight are the relics of a collision in midair of the two craft, furnishing probably the most startling spectacle since man learned to fly.

The catastrophe which resulted in the death of all participants, followed a mimic attack by the aeroplane on the dirigible at a great height during the Austrian army maneuvers. Army officers said it was only a small example of the horrors that might attend aerial warfare.

The dirigible military balloon Koertling left Fischamand, 11 miles from Vienna, at 8 o'clock this morning. She was manned by Capt. Johann Hauswirth, Lieuts. Ernst Hofstetter and Brauer, Corporals Hadima and Weber, and Engineer Kammerer and Lieut. Haidinger.

Biplane Starts in Pursuit.

Half an hour later a military aeroplane of the biplane type, with Lieuts. Flatz and Hoosta aboard, started in pursuit.

It was the intention of Capt. Hauswirth to take photographs from the dirigible of the movements of the troops and then to join in the maneuvers. He was also to keep out of range of any craft which might seek to attack him.

The news had gone abroad that something in the nature of a sham aerial fight would take place, and at Koenigsberg, the scene of the engagement, a crowd had gathered. Quickly the smaller, but speedier aeroplane overtook the dirigible and then the spectators witnessed a thrilling sight.

The aeroplane circled several times around the balloon, now darting close to her and then away, always apparently steering off just in time to avoid an actual collision.

The balloon continued to rise until it was about 1300 feet from the ground. The aeroplane, at a still greater height, maneuvered until it appeared to be nearly over the airship. Then it swooped towards the dirigible.

Plane Rips Balloon Open.

It was the evident intention of the pilot of the aeroplane to take up a position directly above the gas-filled machine, within striking distance, but, because of air currents, or a fatal miscalculation of distance, or of speed, the nose of the biplane struck the gas envelope of the airship and ripped it wide open.

A tremendous explosion followed; the balloon burst into flames, which enveloped the biplane, and in a moment the wreckage began to drop and scorched men, crashing to the slope of a hill, just as Lieut. Hofstetter's bride of a month arrived in a motor car.

The bag of the balloon was still burning when it struck the ground. Lieut. Flatz, when extricated from the wreckage of the aeroplane, showed faint signs of life. He seemed to make an effort to rise, but almost immediately he expired. All the other aviators were killed immediately.

Archduke Hurries to Scene.

Military officers who saw the disaster said the maneuvers had been undertaken with instruction to carry as far as possible actual war conditions in which an aeroplane was attacking a dirigible, the latter trying to repel the assault. The occupants of both craft had been order to conduct themselves as they would in an actual aerial combat.

According to some experts, the catastrophe seemingly was caused by the aeroplane's being caught in the eddies from the balloon. They attribute the accident to a species of whirlwind caused by the airship's propeller, which affected the flight of the smaller machine.

Archduke Charles Francis and several officers of the ministry arrived shortly on the scene and an aid-de-camp of the Emperor's also proceeded there to seek information for His Majesty and express the Emperor's sympathy.

RECEIVER NAMED FOR WM. LORIMER'S CONSTRUCTION CO.

Debt of $6400 Owed by Southern Traction Co. Prompts Action.

The Lloyd Construction Co. of St. Louis, of which Hiram Lloyd is president, yesterday, at Danville, Ill., asked for a receiver for the Lorimer-Gallagher Construction Co., of which William Lorimer is a member. W. E. Trautmann, former United States District Attorney at Danville, was named as receiver.

The Lloyd Construction Co. requested a receivership because it built the office structure of the Southern Traction Co., at Twenty-second street and Trendley avenue, East St. Louis, and had not been paid any part of the $6400 agreed upon in the contract.

Lloyd said he agreed to the appointment of Trautmann as receiver because Trautmann's heavy investment in the Southern Traction Co. would make him more conservative than a disinterested receiver.

By accepting appointment as receiver for this company, and also for the Southern Traction Co., in lieu of Lorimer, whose resignation was accepted Friday by Federal Judge Wright, Trautman will be placed in the position of representing the creditor suing the Traction company, and also the debtor traction company.

The Southern Traction receivership was asked by the Lorimer-Gallagher Construction Co. and other creditors. The collapse of the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank in Chicago, of which Lorimer is president, disclosed $890,000 of the bank's funds were "loaned" toward financing the construction of Southern Traction lines, which was done by the Lorimer-Gallagher Co.

Hayne Expects Indictment of Lorimer Bank Official.

CHICAGO, June 20.—State's Attorney Hoyne says he has gained in less than a day more than enough evidence to indict at least one official of the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank.

He said he has "apparently a prima facie case against one officer of the bank," which means a case which can be submitted to a jury in a trial.

If two or three clear cases are found they probably will be presented to the present grand jury, which probably will disband next Saturday. Otherwise Hoyne plans to have a special grand jury for the bank tangle.

Other developments today were:

William C. Niblack gave bond as receiver for bank and assumed charge.

Hiram T. Gilbert was agreed upon as attorney for receiver.

W. A. McHie offered to pay receiver $50,000 and another borrower promised to pay $15,600 Monday.

Niblack made demand on all notes due. Time loans overdue on June 12 totaled more than $500,000. Demand loans are said to total $1,400,000.

SENATORS MODIFY LABOR CLAUSES IN TRUST BILL

Committee Would Bar Picketing and Changes Injunction Section of House Measure.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—After several hours' consideration, the Senate Judiciary Committee today decided to eliminate from the House anti-trust bill words which lawyers say would legalize the blacklist. Although less than half the committee attended today's session, and action was described as tentative, it was generally believed tonight that the entire committee will approve.

The portions of the bill acceptable to organized labor were only slightly modified and their principal contention, for the limiting of injunctions in labor disputes, was agreed to almost the same as written in the House bill. The committee expects to finish its work next week and report the bill to the Senate.

Senator Newlands today announced that the trade commission bill would be taken up Monday if the Senate agrees and will be disposed of before this broader measure is pressed for consideration.

The committee devoted all day to the section relating to the issuance of restraining orders and injunctions in labor disputes. The committee struck out language which would have banned injunctions against picketing and attendance near the homes or working places of any person "for the purpose of peacefully obtaining or communicating information."

In the section relating to contempt proceedings, it struck out the House provision limiting the punishment to a $1000 fine or six months' imprisonment. Sections relating to price discrimination, refusal to sell mining, oil, gas or hydro-electric products, exclusive sale agreements and that prohibiting combinations or holding companies which would lessen competition, were stricken from the bill entirely.

FIRE DESTROYS 5 WHEAT FIELDS; OTHERS DAMAGED

Sparks From Engine and From Camps Cause Loss on East Side.

Five wheat fields in the section between Granite City, Edwardsville and Belleville were destroyed and two others damaged by fires yesterday.

Sparks from a train set fire to the wheat field of William H. Bohm, west of Edwardsville, destroying about 2000 bushels of grain. It is believed sparks from the same train set fire to the field of Lemuel Southard, two miles further west of the Bohm farm, destroying a score of shocks.

At Stallings, near the shore of Long Lake, nine miles south of Edwardsville, ashes from a campers' fire were carried by wind to the stubble fields of Henry Harms and Henry Robbins, setting them afire. More than 200 shocks of wheat were destroyed. Nearly 1000 bushels of wheat on the farms of Joseph Franke and Joseph Schubert, on the Lebanon road, near Belleville, were destroyed by fire caused by sparks from a locomotive.

GAINS RECOGNITION OF SERVICE IN WAR WHEN HE WAS 14

House Passes Bill of Relief for St. Louisan and Senate Is Expected to Pass It.

IN BATTLE OF SHILOH

C. A. Coulson, After 28 Years Effort, About to Be Put on Roll of His Regiment.

Charles A. Coulson, 66 years old, of 1319 Bayard avenue, after 28 years' effort to establish his claim that he was a soldier in the Union army and, as a private, was in the battle of Shiloh, 52 years ago, is about to have his name placed on the rolls of Company H, Twenty-first Missouri Volunteers, through a special act of Congress.

Coulson, who is now on a summer outing at Peoria, Ill., has just received a letter from Congressman Igoe, advising him that a bill of relief introduced in his behalf has been passed by the House and is now pending in the Senate, where, according to Senator Stone, it will be put through without delay.

Joined the Army in 1862.

Official recognition, in his declining years, of service rendered his country when he was 14, has come to Coulson largely through the efforts of Congressman Igoe, who placed before the Committee on Military Affairs a number of affidavits and old documents as proof of Coulson's claim.

In his own affidavit, Coulson set forth he joined Company H in February, 1862, and that two months later, at Shiloh, he was wounded three times.

Coulson sets forth he was wounded first by a gunshot in the right leg, second by a saber cut in the left side, and third by a gunshot in the left leg. Disabled, he was taken prisoner and soon afterward was released with others for whom the Confederates were unable to provide food.

Old Records Are Used.

Affidavits by Capt. Frederick Lesser of Company H and several comrades who fought side by side with Coulson at Shiloh, also were presented, but the success of Coulson's claim, according to Igoe, is based on some old, faded Confederate records which show that a Charles Coulson was picked up from the Shiloh battlefield and held a prisoner of war until the release of all prisoners, except officers, became necessary.

When Coulson was leaving the prison a friend and fellow townsman gave him a letter to deliver to relatives, in which he named the bearer as "little Charlie Coulson," and expressed doubt as to whether Coulson, severely wounded, would live to deliver it. This letter was among the documentary evidence offered by Congressman Igoe.

Another claim said to have been substantiated by the record is that Coulson, after being released by the Confederates, was sent to the army hospital at Nashville, Tenn., later being transferred to the "Fairground" hospital in St. Louis, where he was discharged.

Not Paid for Service.

Coulson set forth in his affidavit he never had been paid for his services, as the paymaster had not visited the camp from the time Coulson joined until he was taken prisoner.

Late in the eighties Coulson learned the rolls of his company did not bear his name, and he at once petitioned Congress to order the Secretary of War to have his name placed on the rolls. For 28 years following, he constantly urged that his claim be recognized.

In a recent report, the Secretary of War pointed out that although the records showed Coulson had been captured by the enemy and was in two hospitals, classified as a member of Company H, he was powerless to have Coulson's name placed on the rolls except by order of Congress.

MRS. ALICE LONGWORTH DINES WITH MRS. ASTOR

Hostess Shuns Ascot Races Becaus "They Are Boresome."

LONDON, June 20.—Mrs. Nicholas Longworth was the guest of honor at a dinner party given by Mrs. John Astor at Grosvenor Square Thursday evening. Others present were Mrs. W. B. Leeds, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Burns, "Bogey" Harris and Count de Festetics.

Mrs. Astor explained she had not gone to the royal inclosure at the Ascot races as "it was such a boresome place." Mrs. Leeds said that she had not gone either, although she had tickets direct from the Lord Chamberlain. The reason she advanced was that she is in mourning.

When Mrs. Longworth was asked whether her father would again be a candidate for the presidency she said: "Really, I don't know, but we hope not, as it wouldn't be worth the strain on his health."

But, she added, what the family thought mattered nothing.

CAMPBELL'S NIECE THINKS RELATIVES DESERVED BEQUEST

Mrs. Harrison of Cincinnati Says Her Father Virtually Gave "Uncle Jim" Start.

HAS NO LEGAL CLAIM

From a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CINCINNATI, June 20.—Mrs. William H. Harrison, a society leader of Cincinnati, a niece, who has threatened to induce relatives of the late James Campbell of St. Louis to contest his will, which gives his millions, except for a life interest to his widow and daughter, to St. Louis University, this afternoon said she hoped Mrs. Campbell and Miss Lois, the daughter, could be induced to join such a suit.

She declared her own father, John P. Campbell, elder brother of James Campbell, had virtually given the capitalist his start. When James Campbell was a youth, out of employment and out of money, she said, her father came to his financial rescue several times, sending him all the money he could spare.

Action Not Decided Upon.

Moreover, she said her aunt, Mrs. Mary Richards, Campbell's sister, who died several years ago, often clothed the young man in his days of need, her husband being a tailor. But for the timely assistance of his brother and sister, Mrs. Harrison intimated, Campbell would have found himself handicapped at the outset of his business careeer.

She reiterated her determination to take counsel with other relatives to decide whether there should be a will contest, although she confessed herself somewhat nonplussed when informed that, under the Missouri law, all the property would go to the widow and daughter and none to the collateral heirs if the will were broken.

"It isn't so much that any of us want any of Uncle Jim's money," she said. "If he had left his estate to his widow and daughter, all of us would have been satisfied. But we don't understand why the University should get it. And the threat to cut Lois off with $1 if the mother contests seems to be entirely inequitable. I don't believe it will stand a test in court.

"It is too early to say definitely what we shall do. We shall have to talk the matter over with an attorney. But I think we will decide to safeguard our own interests, if we decide they are imperiled. In the event of a contest, it would be a long time before the end of litigation, and many things could happen between now and then."

Asked if she meant by this statement the possibility that Mrs. Campbell and Miss Lois should both die without direct heirs before the conclusion of litigation, leaving the inheritance to the collateral heirs, Mrs. Harrison said she had not given that idea much thought.

Business Head of Family.

Her husband, president of the Cincinnati Tent and Awning Co., intimated that there might be other family matters giving sufficient foundation for litigation. He said he preferred not to discuss these things now as it would be premature.

In response to a question, Mrs. Harrison admitted she had written to her sister, Mrs. Genevieve Baker of Albuquerque, N. M., urging her to investigate the way her property had been managed by Campbell. When her father died, Mrs. Harrison said, he made Campbell administrator of his estate. The sister was the only one of the heirs still a minor and Campbell became her guardian.

To the best of her belief, Mrs. Harrison said, Campbell had never made a final settlement of this trust. All the heirs considered he had the business brains of the family and never dreamed of asking him for a final settlement, she said. She expressed the conviction that the estate would be found in good shape, but thought her sister ought to have an accounting.

Mrs. Harrison gave a detailed history of her family connections with James Campbell. She showed pictures of Campbell and his wife in a family group with Mrs. Rose Curtis of St. Louis, sister of Campbell, her own father and two sisters who have since died.

James One of Six Children.

Her grandfather, the first James Campbell, she said, had six children, the eldest being her father, John P. Campbell; the next, Mrs. Curtis; then Mary, Mrs. Richardson; Ella, who became Mrs. Robinson; James, and the last, Anna, who became Mrs. Maass. All of them were born in Ireland, she said, except Anna, who was born in Wheeling, W. Va.

She was the eldest of her father's children, she said. Next to her came her sister, Mrs. Mamie C. Spargo, wife of an Albuquerque physician; then her brother Andrew, now living in the West; her brother, James, named for the late millionaire; and Genevieve, the present Mrs. Baker.

The Mrs. Richards who, she says, sent James Campbell clothes when he was in need, is survived by eight children, all of whom live in Wheeling. They are Misses Ida and Jessie Richards, Mrs. Georgia Richards Davidson, Mrs. C. L. Hill, Mrs. Minnie R. Riester, James Richards, Campbell Richards and another brother named either Alfred or Robert.

Mrs. Robinson has a son living in New York City and Mrs. Curtis has a daughter living in St. Louis. In her girlhood Mrs. Harrison said she had visited the Campbells in their St. Louis home, the last time being for a stay of about three months, a few years before her marriage to Harrison.

She declared Mrs. Campbell always seemed fond of her and kept her photograph upon her dresser. The last letter she received from Mrs. Campbell was one of condolence written 16 years ago when her father died. Since then she had called once at the Campbell home in St. Louis. That was when Mrs. Campbell and Lois met the Harrisons at the World's Fair and invited them to call, she said.

She invariably refers to Mrs. Campbell as her aunt and said she always thought Mrs. Campbell was very fond of her. She reiterated that she couldn't understand why Mrs. Campbel had repudiated relationship with her.

The repudiation referred to was the report from St. Louis that when a reporter telephoned the Campbell home a maid took the query as to whether Mrs. Campbell knew whether her husband had a niece in Cincinnati named Harrison and the maid's report that Mrs. Campbell said she knew of no such niece as Mrs. Harrison.

Mrs. Harrison is a tall, slender, gray-eyed woman of assured bearing. She speaks in a low, modulated voice. Frequently she smiled when referring to what she called "my aunt's absurd denial of me." At the same time, she made it perfectly plain that she had been nettled by it.

Interested in Missouri Law.

She seemed greatly interested in the Missouri laws of inheritance. When told that, if the will were broken, the widow would claim a child's share in the estate and could divide it equally with Miss Lois, she asked whether, in that case, St. Louis University would get any part of the property. When told it would not, she thought a moment, and said:

"But even that would be better than the present arrangement. I think my aunt and Lois ought to have the big part of it. I don't think Uncle Jim was at all kind to them. Why, he could have given a few thousands of dollars to some of his needy kinsmen who were entitled to it by all consideration of gratitude, left his wife and daughter plenty of money in their own right and still have endowed the university most richly."

The Harrisons have lived in Cincinnati many years. Mrs. Harrison is considered a member of the city's most exclusive social set.

Trust Company Officer Says Plan to Break Will Is Absurd.

Virgil M. Harris, trust officer of the Mercantile Trust Co., which is the executor of James Campbell's estate, last night said Mrs. William H. Harrison's plan to sue to break the Campbell will was absurd.

"This talk of a niece or a nephew trying to break Campbell's will is nonsense," Harris said. "A suit filed by a niece to break this will can have no more effect than a suit filed by an outsider. As Campbell is survived by a wife and daughter, his nieces and nephews are not entitled to inherit his estate. They occupy the positon of outsiders."

Such a suit, he said, would have no standing in a Missouri court. Under the Missouri law, in the absence of a will, he said, the wife and daughter would have inherited the entire estate. If the will were broken, as it cannot be by one not having a right to inherit if there were no will, the wife and daughter would inherit the estate in its entirety.

Mrs. Rose Virginia Curtis, 75 years old, of 2641 Nebraska avenue, a sister of Campbell, when seen yesterday, confirmed the relationship of Mrs. Harrison to Campbell. She declared she had no idea of contesting the Campbell will and said she believed Mrs. Harrison would not do so. She said such an attempt would be "ridiculous."

Solemn high mass of requiem for Campbell, who willed his fortune to go ultimately to St. Louis University for a medical school, will be held at St. Francis Xavier (College) Church at 9 a. m. tomorrow. The Very Rev. Bernard J. Otting, president of the University, will officiate as celebrant. The scholastic choir will sing the requiem.

GIRL DECIDES TO START ANEW AS MAN; ARRESTED

Miss Ruth Nicholson, 24 years old, of 605 South Broadway, whose attempt to end her life two weeks ago by jumping from a ferry boat was frustrated, decided to start life anew, as a man, she told East St. Louis police, yesterday, when arrested for being in masculine attire.

"I tried to kill myself and they saved me," she said. "I decided then that if I could not end my life, I would at least no longer live as a woman, and, Thursday, I dressed as a man. I shingled my hair and obtained a man's wig. Then I got an old coat and trousers and practiced smoking cigarettes."

In her masculine attire she walked into the police station at 5 p. m. and announced she wanted to be locked up.

"Why?" inquired the Desk Sergeant.

"Because, I'm crazy," she replied, lighting a cigarette.

Miss Lillian Willis, 208 Missouri avenue, East St. Louis, told the police earlier in the day that Miss Nicholson was dressed as a man.

Miss Willis said Miss Nicholson visited her Friday night. Detectives had been seeking her all day.

ASQUITH RECEIVES SIX SUFFRAGETTES AT HIS RESIDENCE

LONDON, June 20.— In accordance to his promise made to Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, after her recent temporary release from Holloway Jail, Premier Asquith today received a deputation of six suffragettes. The promise was made when Miss Pankhurst took her position on the steps of the House of Commons and declared she would carry out a hunger strike there unless the promise was given.

A party of six working women, members of Miss Pankhurst's East End Federation visited the Prime Minister at his official residence in Downing street.

The Premier welcomed the members of the deputation as representatives of "an association which dissociated itself from the criminal methods of those who have done so much damage and put back the cause of women."

Asquith argued that if every woman over 21 years of age possessed the vote they would still find legislative problems regarding women exceedingly difficult of solution in the same way as the men had found them. He agreed with the deputation that if the franchise were given to women it would be granted on the same terms as it was given to men.

In conclusion Asquith promised consideration of the women's representations and said he would present to Reginald McKenna, the Home Secretary, the deputation's request for the release of Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, unconditionally.

A big crowd gathered in anticipation of the usual fight between the police and the women, but the proceedings were orderly except for a little roughness on the part of some workmen, who had "come to see that their women got fair play."

Tomorrow is the last day to get this Player-Piano

With Bench, exactly as illustrated.

Terms $2.50 Weekly

As announced, when this offer was first presented, only twenty-five instruments were set aside for this sale, and of these but a very few now remain, so that the sale will positively close tomorrow evening. The terms on which these player-pianos are being offered and the especially attractive price makes this an opportunity which cannot be duplicated outside of Aeolian Hall.

This offer conclusively proves that Aeolian Hall is the most economical place to buy a musical instrument of any sort and all you need to do in order to secure one of these instruments is to accept this liberal offer of only $2.50 weekly—terms so low you will never feel the payment.

The instrument
A standard 88-note player-piano built by the Aeolian Company in their own great factories. It is beautifully cased in massive mahogany. The piano has a splendid touch and a beautiful, sweet, rich tone. Everything about the instrument is substantial and artistic. With each instrument we give a bench, exactly as illustrated, without extra charge.

The terms
The terms of only $2.50 a week make it possible for anyone to put this instrument in the home and pay for it easily. This offer is conclusive evidence that Aeolian Hall is the most economical place to buy a musical instrument of any sort, and these convenient terms bring the whole realm of music into your home—all obstacles are now effectually removed.

The guarantee
We guarantee this player-piano unequivocally to be absolutely the best player-piano that can be secured anywhere in this country for $395—in fact, outside of Aeolian Hall this same character of instrument would cost $600, but the great resources of the Aeolian Company make possible this greatly reduced price. The instrument, as you readily understand, may be played either by hand or by music roll.

CHARTER CAMPAIGN TO END WITH MASS MEETING IN PARK

BUSY WEEK IS PLANNED

Judge Caulfield Disposes of the Objection That the Charter Cannot Be Amended.

The campaign for the adoption of the proposed new city charter will be brought practically to a close with a great mass meeting in Forest Park next Sunday afternoon.

The charter election will be held the following Tuesday, June 30. A majority vote only is required for the adoption of the new charter.

There has been a widespread general impression that a two-thirds vote was necessary. Some voters, thinking this was true, have made it known that they did not think it worth while to vote because they were of the opinion that no proposition could be carried by a two-thirds vote in St. Louis.

The charter campaign will be particularly active this week. Many meetings will be held in public school houses and in the playgrounds of North and South St. Louis. Noonday meetings will be held in a vacant store room at Eighth and Locust streets. Literature will be distributed in every ward and precinct, and a personal canvass of the voters of many wards will be made.

The campaign is well organized and hundreds of men interested in the welfare of the city and wishing to see the new charter adopted, have volunteered their services for the campaign.

The leading spirits of the Citizens' New Charter Campaign Committee are confident the charter will be adopted by a big majority. The opposition to the charter is practically unorganized. The big work of the campaign committee, outside of the practical political phase of the campaign, is to meet and answer all of the false statements made against the proposed charter.

Mayor Kiel, chairman of the campaign committee, reiterated yesterday his opinion that the charter would be adopted by an overwhelming majority.

One of the arguments most strongly urged against the proposed charter is that it can be amended only by the initiative. Former Judge Henry S. Caulfield, who was counsel for the Board of Freeholders, has written an opinion stating that the proposed charter can be amended under the provisions of the Missouri Constitution, exactly as the old charter has been amended.

How Amendments Can Be Made.

All that would have to be done would be to have the amendment submitted to the voters by the Board of Aldermen, just as it is done by the Municipal Assembly. But in addition, the proposed charter provides that it may be amended through the initiative. The amendatory ordinance may be proposed on a 10 per cent petition for a general election and 15 per cent at a special election.

The Tenth Ward Improvement Association will hold a meeting at 3 p. m. today to indorse the proposed city charter. The meeting will be held at Fountain Hall, Broadway and Chippewa street.

The Executive Committee of the association already has indorsed the charter and will urge the 800 members to campaign for it among their friends and neighbors.

The Fountain Park Improvement and Protective Association Friday night indorsed the new charter. Members pledged themselves personally to work for the charter. Many of the improvement, civic and business organizations of the city have pledged their members to do practical political work at the special election June 30. This work will consist of getting all voters known to be favorable to the charter to the polls. Preliminary canvasses will be made to find out what voters favor the charter.

Charter Meeting in Church Tonight, Tomorrow's Calendar.

The proposed charter will be discussed by Hugh Fullerton at the Markham Memorial Church, 1624 Menard street, at 7:30 tonight. Other meetings at which the new charter will be discussed tomorrow, beginning at 8 p. m., are as follows:

All persons engaged in the optical business—Planter's Hotel; speaker, Louis P. Aloe.

Eighteenth Ward Citizens' Club—Blair School, Twenty-second and Montgomery streets; speakers, Mayor Henry W. Kiel and G. H. Daves.

Bethel Church Men's League, Garrison and Blair avenues; speaker, John H. Gundlach.

Citizens' mass meeting, Sixteenth Ward—Reis Hall, 3400 Park avenue; speakers, Mayor Kiel, Dr. William Preston Hill and E. A. Vogt.

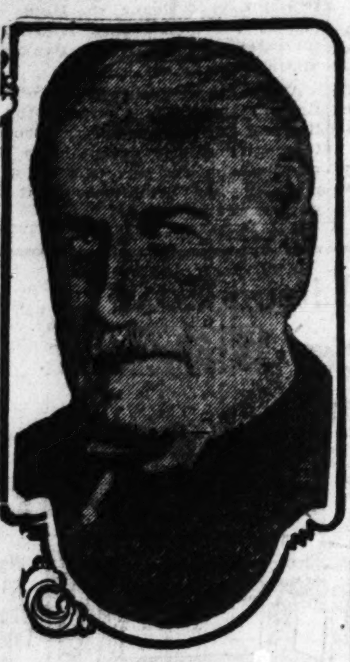
Judson Answers Charter Critics

Says Code Would Reduce Taxes

Efficiency and Simplicity Required in Government; Hence the Code, He Says.

Frederick N. Judson, member of the Board of Freeholders and an expert of national reputation on the subject of taxation, herewith shows how St. Louis taxpayers will get a far better return for their taxes under the proposed new charter than they now get under the old charter. He answers many other objections that have been made to the proposed charter.



F. N. JUDSON.

By Frederick N. Judson.

THE reasons for the adoption of a new Charter in St. Louis are not far to seek. The present Charter, adopted in 1876, after a legal contest, represented the best political thought at that time. It was based on the checks and balances theory of government. While these are sometimes effective in preventing bad or incompetent officials from doing wrong, the cumbersome and complicated system is equally effective oftentimes in preventing good and efficient officials from accomplishing good.

Since that time the problems of municipal government have been enormously increased; city life has been revolutionized. Then, in 1876, we had 86 miles of horse cars. Now we have over 350 miles of electric street cars.

Efficiency, Simplicity Required.

There has been a distinct revolution in modern political thought as to the proper basis of municipal government. We now require efficiency and simplicity, and hence, the so-called commission form of government. We have come to realize that we cannot obtain the best results of city government without efficient machinery. The so-called bicameral system, framed on the model of the Federal and state governments, has been all but universally discarded in cities of the United States because it lacks simplicity and directness. No one would dream of having a double house system in any private business corporation, whatever its magnitude.

The new charter has been framed on the distinct theory of including the widest range of municipal powers which the State Constitution permits. One of the objections to the new charter is that the thirty-five separate clauses contained in Article 1, defining municipal powers, are a needless amplification. In such a matter, however, it was better to use too many words than too few. Furthermore, these objectors overlook the fact that we are confronted with the ruling of the courts, that there is no presumption favoring a liberal construction of municipal charters. We had an impressive example of this in St. Louis when it was sought to issue bonds under direct constitutional authority for the World's Fair, and we found it necessary to amend the city charter to confer the specific charter authority which had been granted by the Constitution, and we were compelled to make this amendment in order to make our bonds marketable. We could not afford, therefore, to spare words, and leave the extent of the city powers in doubt.

Provisions Look to the Future.

It is objected that we made certain provisions, such as ward representation, preferential voting, and the like, subject to future legislative action. This was obviously proper, as it will enable the city to take advantage of such action without the necessity of a charter amendment. This principle is recognized in the present charter in its reference to the police system established by the State.

Another objection which I have seen made is to section 9 of Article XXV "general and miscellaneous," where provision is made for the classification of certain property of merchants and manufacturers; but this does nothing more than recognize the State law on this subject, which has been in force for the last 30 years; and makes no change whatever.

Again objection has been made to the provision for license taxation, Art. XX, but this was made necessary by the statute, which requires that no occupation shall be taxed for city purposes unless it is specifically named in the city charter as subject to such taxation. The enumeration does not mean that the city must tax all or any of these occupations named, but only that it may tax; and it could not tax any of them without naming them in such enumeration.

It is also objected that the referendum cannot be invoked to defeat the exercise of the taxing power. The only limitation of the referendum is where an emergency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, or health, or safety, is in question, and an ordinance making an appropriation for the payment of the public debt, or for the current expenses of the city government, or fixing the tax rate, is defined to be an emergency measure. The strongest advocate of the referendum does not propose their application to emergency measures of this character.

The Initiative Provisions.

The criticism of the provisions for the initiative, referendum and recall are from entirely opposite sources. One side objects to these provisions in toto, while the other objects to the restrictions which are aimed to prevent their abuse. The board felt that these provisions should be workable and efficient, and there can be no doubt that as affording a direct popular restraint upon officials they have a distinct place in municipal government, not as a substitute for representative government, but as a corrective of its abuses. The very fact of their existence will tend to prevent the necessity of their exercise. As was well illustrated by Dr. William Preston Hill, they are fairly analogous to the bottles of family medicine which it is convenient to have in the house, but are not at all suited for general diet.

The least tenable of all the objections is that the new charter will increase the burdens of the taxpayers. Efficient government means necessarily that the public monies will be wisely expended; the stoppage of waste and efficiency means that the citizen and taxpayer will receive a far better return for his taxes than he does now. More than all, the substitution of efficiency for the existing spoils system in the public service means the stoppage of the most fruitful sources of waste in municipal government.

The question is not whether this or that provision in the new charter is the best possible. All human government is based on a compromise of conflicting opinions. The new charter is based upon broad and liberal lines, and its adoption would mean that St. Louis is a progressive city in the true sense of that term.

English Aviator Who Will Attempt to Fly Across the Atlantic Ocean.

Copyright. (All rights in the United States and Canada reserved.)

HAMMONDSPORT, June 20.—At the suggestion of Rodman Wanamaker, the transatlantic flier which his support made possible, will be named the America. I look for an omen of good fortune in the name. May it be another link between the two countries, since the American, American made, is to be be driven by a British naval man, Irish born.

The boat stands complete tonight. Tomorrow it will be carried down to the trial field and reassembled, as it was necessary to take it apart in the shops to get it through the doors.

On Monday morning it will be launched and christened. I am told Miss Masson or Miss Champlin of this city is to act as sponsor for the craft. The young lady selected will break a bottle of native champagne over the bows and send the boat into the water with the good wishes of all who have been concerned in the building since last February.

By Monday afternoon I feel quite certain we will have her up in the air. The only question troubling her constructor, Glenn Curtiss, and myself, will be her lifting power as regards her weight. The boat will weigh around 5000 pounds, but to handle this tonnage she will have a surface of something like 800 square feet.

Eager Crowds to See Craft.

All day long visitors have been arriving in Hammondsport eager to see the craft that is to attempt the hitherto untried task of crossing the Atlantic. And I am told that the day of the fligh will see hundreds of strangers here, interested in the advancement of aviation.

They will see a big red-colored craft that for lack of a better description, I may say, looks like a whale as to the body. It has a blunt nose and sharp tail. Midway in the body the wings sprout, so if one can imagine a red whale with wings, one has a pretty fair idea of what the America looks like.

There is one matter of importance to which little or no attention has been paid. It will impress those who are really interested in the success of my present effort seriously. That is that the Curtiss people are now working on a duplicate of the America and the second boat is almost as far advanced in completion as is the original. The purpose of building the second craft is to have one to fly should an untoward accident prevent us from using the first. The second will be given its trial flight later. She will be packed for shipment to St. Johns, New Foundland, and will be on the job if needed.

Gasoline Ready at Stations.

I am informed that ample preparations have been made to take care of the visitors who are coming here for the trials, and that good railroad connections can be made through Bath. I am frank to say that strangers will not be sorry to have made the trip, for they will find a pretty little village nearly in the vineyard hills. This section is a great wine producer and there are many wine cellars about.

I have heard from London to the effect that the difficulty encountered in getting gasoline to the Azores and to Vigo, Spain, has been overcome, and that my assistants will be on hand at those two points to give me what supplies I need.

With that point cleared up there is little or nothing left for me to worry about until after my trial flight, when we shall be able to see how well our theories have fitted in with actualities. We expect certain alterations, but do not think there will be reconstruction of any serious extent. The boat as it stands today will be the boat in which I hope I shall fly the Atlantic.

Food Selected With Care.

The matter of food for myself and my assistant, Mr. Hallett, during the 24 hours' flight from St. Johns to the Azores is a serious one. We must be careful to select that which will give us sustenance without being too bulky or heavy. I am a great believer in hot coffee, so it is safe to say that I shall have several thermos bottles with that drink in them. We shall take bread, meat, extracts and calf's foot jelly, which is accounted among athletes who have been called upon to show continuous effort for long stretches at a time as being of great worth. Neither Hallett nor I smoke, so we shall not have to guard against the always present danger of matches near the gas tanks.

I have not had a drink of any intoxicants for several months, having gone into training so that my nerves shall be true. I shall not take a drink until after the flight. Should I succeed, it is within the realms of possibility that I might be induced to take a wee drappie.

I have been questioned as to the clothing I shall wear. I fear my rig will scarcely meet the idealized picture some of the enthusiasts have drawn mentally, in which every appointment of an up-to-date story book aviator is included.

I shall wear an ordinary suit of winter thickness. Over my clothes I'll wear a suit of flying overalls. A thick light sweater will give all the protection I need from the cold, for it must be borne in mind that I shall fly in an inclosed cabin. As the windows will frequently be open, I shall wear a pair of goggles, for otherwise the wind would soon wear out my eyes.

Special Compasses Made.

When Capt. Craig Osborne of the British navy arrives in Newfoundland he will have with him special compasses designed to meet the conditions encountered in aerial navigation. I count upon his help in making the needed adjustment and the allowances for the steel is used in the construction of my craft. I take pleasure in acknowledging the debt I feel to the Weather Bureau in Washington for the help they have been to me. Through them and through the co-operation of the British Admiralty, I am enabled to familiarize myself with the probabilities as to the weather I shall meet on my flight.

WILD AUTO INJURES GIRL ON SIDEWALK

Driver Loses Control and Machine Hits Irene Mulqueeny, 8, Breaking Leg.

Irene Cecelia Mulqueeny, 8 years old, daughter of Patrick Mulqueeny, 749 North Seventh street, East St. Louis, was seriously injured at 5 p. m. yesterday, when an automobile driven by Hurshel Allen, 1808 North Seventeenth street, East St. Louis, became unmanageable and dashed across the sidewalk, pinning her to a stone foundation, at St. Clair avenue and Seventh street.

Allen was driving west on St. Clair avenue, and tried to turn north on Seventh street. The steering gear jammed and the machine crashed into the corner of an apartment house at the southwest corner. The girl was running past the corner in quest of her 4-year-old brother.

Witnesses said the machine rebounded four feet after striking the stone foundation. Martin Flynn, a plumber at 700 St. Clair avenue, who saw the accident, carried the girl to her home a half-block away. She had a fractured left leg, a deep cut above the left eye and many bruises on her body.

Mulqueeny formerly was a policeman.

HEAT KILLS 1; MANY PROSTRATED IN FIELDS

Twenty-Five Harvest Hands Leave Kansas Despite Offers of More Money.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 20.—The heat wave sweeping over Kansas and this section of Missouri, continued today. Several record temperatures were recorded and prostrations in the harvest fields were numerous.

At Salina, Kan., George E. Mulvane, a tailor of Detroit, Mich., collapsed in a field and died from heat prostration. Warren Sheldon of Flora, Ill., who was working near Pawnee Rock, Kan., suffered violent convulsions and was taken to a hospital. Immediately 25 men working in the vicinity, left the State on the first train. Offers of more wages failed to tempt them.

Ten prostrations are reported from Atchison, where a temperature of 98 degrees was reached Clay Center had a temperature of 104 while at Abilene the thermometer reached 100. At Sedalia, Mo., George Wolfe of Indianapolis, Ind., fell unconscious in the street. In Kansas City the mercury stood at 94. Ten prostrations were reported.

Fighting the Deadly Fly

THE fly kills more people than all the armies in the world.

"Kill the fly or the fly will kill you."

"A fly trap placed beside every garbage can will kill every fly in St. Louis," states Dr. Max C. Starkloff, Health Commissioner of the City of St. Louis.

• • • •

Dr. Starkloff calls on every citizen to aid in killing the deadly fly. Because it carries contagion from every dead animal, from filthy refuse, spreading INFANTILE PARALYSIS and many other diseases that threaten us from every side.

• • • •

The West End Business Men's Association has taken the matter up. A resolution it passed asks every member to co-operate with Dr. Starkloff in the Fly Fight.

The Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Company responds with an educative campaign in its display windows, on its fifth floor and through the newspapers.

It announces in the Post-Dispatch today a special sale of the fly trap which the Board of Health has adopted—the

which is sweeping the country—100,000 sold in Chicago—50,000 in Cincinnati—adopted by Swift & Co., Armour & Co., Polar Wave Ice Co., Colonial Laundry, Union Market, Bethesda Hospital, etc., etc.,

and distributed through the St. Louis streets by the Board of Health so you can see it catching flies by the thousand.

Rescuers at Alberta Colliery Find Dead Workmen Pinned Erect to Walls.

LETHBRIDGE, Alberta, June 20.—Bodies of 94 of the 197 miners entombed when an explosion wrecked the inner workings of Mine No. 20 of the Hill Crest (Alberta) Collieries, Ltd., yesterday, had been removed to the surface tonight. All hope of rescuing alive any of the remaining 103 members of the crew that entered the mine yesterday had been abandoned.

Under the direction of Government mine experts, the work of rescue went rapidly forward today and at nightfall the explorers had reached several hundred feet into the mine.

Many of the bodies removed today were dug from the debris, tons of which blocked all passages. Other bodies were standing erect, pinned to the wall by timbers.

That the explosion was due to the forming of gas in the lower levels of the mine has been generally accepted.

Among the bodies recovered were those of James Quigley, superintendent of the mine, and Thomas Taylor, fire boss. Mine experts believe that most of the bodies remaining entombed are located about 1200 feet from the mouth of the pit.

HURT IN FALL IN SHAFT

Walter Dawson, 18 years old, of 2700 Cass avenue, an employe of the Merchants' Ice and Coal Co., fell 14 feet down an elevator shaft at the ice plant at 3850 Garfield avenue, yesterday. His spine was injured and he was hurt internally.

Dawson wished to descend from the first floor to the basement and stepped into the shaft, thinking the cage was at the first floor landing.

PEOPLE WRITE TO PRESIDENT, UPHOLD HIS TRUST POLICY

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—From several sections of the country President Wilson has received letters recently tending to show that some of the business depression was as the President said, "a state of mind, psychological." Some of the writers frankly say they had cried hard times, but find they were in haste. The following excerpts were taken from letters received by the President:

"Will you kindly allow a 'small business man' to congratulate you on your position regarding trust legislation. In contradition to 'Big Business,' I believe the sentiment among small business is that this question ought to be definitely settled as soon as possible. If it is side-tracked I believe that a few years more will see the country facing the same problems."

This from Missouri: "I am heartily glad that you have refused to be diverted from your proposed trust legislation by manufactured sentiment. This last move of 'Big Business' is even more flagrant, if posible, than that so ably exposed by Senator La Follette. The country is prosperous."

Small Men Being Misled.

From Fort Wayne, Ind.: "Your statement that 'Big Business' is manufacturing business depression is true in my opinion, and your policy in giving publicity to the condition is good statesmanship. This policy should have encouragement from the great mass of men engaged in competitive business, who are today being used by the very small percentage of men engaged in monopolistic business to pull their chestnuts out of the fire. As a manufacturer of the opposite political faith from you, I am in sympathy with the administration policies and accomplishments up to date along the line of trust legislation."

From St. Paul, Minn.: "It is quite manifest that the cause of the present hard times is almost wholly due to a united action on the part of the large corporations of the country, after deliberate conference, to chastise your administration. No doubt the corporations have mutually agreed to put on the brakes and slow up business in every way possible. This is the way they have of intimidating the people and its administration. There should be a law that would imprison such conspirators and confiscate their business."

From Kentucky: "The circular letters you exposed are a part of a concerted action by 'Big Business' to defeat the President's trust program. Small business and the common people want the President to finish what he has started. Business is not dull here and is better than it has been in years."

From the Latin-American Chamber of Commerce of New York: "We have no sympathy with the purposes of the circular letters being sent through the country, seeking to stop trust legislation."

Encouragement From St. Louis.

From a large St. Louis house: "Keep up your courage and keep Congress in session until it passes the trust bills. Honest business is not being hurt."

From Iowa: "If the people will only stand by you as they stood by Jackson, then only those who labor isidiously and unceasingly to further selfish interests need have any fear."

From Tennessee: "We were requested by a large corporation to wire our Senators and Representatives asking for an adjournment of Congress without trust laws. Instead we wire you that we have full confidence in your administration and its purposes."

From Salem, Mo.: "The merchants here pay no attention to the request in that circular letter. We know that you are being hampered in every way on matters of legislation. The people of the country have confidence in you and desire anti-trust legislation at this session of Congress."

Telegrams from Portland, Ore.: "We congratulate you on your determination to protect consuming people as far as is possible to do it through congressional legislation against the machinations of business, capitalistic combinations and trusts in the interest of social parasites and professional freebooters who grab and thrive only through burdening the workers and producers. It is evident that all such are combining against your administration."

PROSPERITY HELD UP BY FINANCIERS, OWEN DECLARES

Senator Says Three Groups in New York Are Responsible for Any Depression.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Critics and friends of the administration joined in a sharp ten-minute prosperity debate in the Senate today. Senator Smoot held the tariff responsible for alarming conditions while Senator Owen blamed three groups of financiers in New York for whatever business depression exists.

Senator Smoot stirred Democratic leaders by predicting, on the basis of the Treasury's statement of foreign trade during the day that, if the present trend of business conditions did not change within the next few months, there would be "disastrous results."

He said the report showed that imports during May increased $29,900,000 and exports decreased $33,000,000 over May, 1913. He read newspaper clippings of the recent large gold shipments to Europe.

American Stocks Turned Back.

Senator Hollis, making the first reply for the Democrats, said foreign distrust of American stocks, arising from the collapse of the New Haven and of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroads, had resulted in American stocks being turned back on this country and the necessity of the sending of gold to Europe in return.

Senator Thomas suggested European laborers were crowding every ship to America to escape the prosperity abroad which the Utah Senator was picturing.

Senator Owen advanced the statement that three groups of men with headquarters in New York were responsible for present conditions. He said these men controlled $22,000,000,000 or nearly all the railroads and every big industry in the country.

Power of Financiers.

"These men can forbid the railways to buy rails or buy steel cars or buy frogs and switches or buy lumber or buy cross ties. These men can put out of employment thousands upon thousands of men; these men can constrict credits in every district where a representative is to be elected this fall and in every state where a Senator is to be elected. These men have it in their hands to send down to defeat any candidate, be he Democrat, Progressive or Republican, who does not sympathize with them."

Senator Smoot insisted that this had nothing to do with the decrease of exports or the increase of imports.

The debate was cut off by a roll for the regular business of the day.

Change in Sentiment.

Th Judiciary Committee expects to report the anti-trust bill next week. Senator Simmons has taken a poll of the Senate to ascertain sentiment for anti-trust measures at the present session. "The result has been so satisfactory that I do not now think that a party caucus is necessary," he said.

"I have never felt that we would be able to adjourn in July, but there has been such a change of sentiment among the Democratic Senators that I believe we would be able to pass the trust measures without prolonged debate. Just how long the debate will last depends upon the attitude of the Republicans. In any event it will not consume the time taken up by the discussion of the tariff or the currency bill.

Purpose of Depression Talk.

"There is a purpose in the outcry against the enactment of the anti-trust bills. If the Democrats were to leave their program uncompleted, the interests that opposed the passage of the present tariff law and are now opposing the trust bills would use their money and influence to defeat Democrats in doubtful Congressional districts in November.

"I am firm in my belief that the calamity howlers will subside as soon as they realize that the Democrats in the Senate are in earnest. The purpose of the organized movement to create the impression that there is a business depression is to influence the action of Congress on pending legislation."

STOCKHOLDERS OF CLOSED BANK TO PAY DEPOSITORS

Assets of State National of Little Rock Will Cover 90 Per Cent of Deposits.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 20.—Officials of the Little Rock Clearing House after going over the affairs of the State National Bank, which failed to open today, declared its assets will cover about 90 per cent of the deposits.

Stockholders will be assessed for the remainder, it was stated.

Proceedings for the appointment of a receiver will be started after the arrival here of a representative of the Comptroller of the Treasury, who is expected tomorrow.

The bank was capitalized for $500,000, of which $50,000 is owned by the Bankers' Trust Co. of St. Louis.

The institution carried deposits of $1,719,873. According to President W. H. Gasuanfio, the bank was forced to close because these deposits have been steadily withdrawn within the last three months.

PRESIDENT PUTS UNQUALIFIED O K UPON T. D. JONES

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Reports of opposition among members of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee to some of President Wilson's nominations for the Federal Reserve Board today resulted in members of that committee receiving copies of a letter from the President to Chairman Owen particularly commending Thomas D. Jones of Chicago, one of the nominees.

The President's letter, sent to members of the committee today reads:

"My dear Senator:

"I am afraid that Mr. Thomas D. Jones is the man about whom the committee will have the least information and I venture to write you this letter to tell you what I know, and, fortunately, I can say that I do really know it.

"I have been associated with Mr Jones in various ways for more than 15 years and have seen him tried by fire in causes which were like the very causes we are fighting now. He has always stood for the rights of the people against the rights of privilege, and he has won a place of esteem and confidence by his quiet power and unquestionable integrity in the city of Chicago, which I think is enviable indeed.

"His connection with the Harvester company is this: He owns one share, and only one share, of stock in the company, which he purchased to qualify as a director. He went into the board of the Harvester company for the purpose of assisting to withdraw it from the control which had led it into the acts and practices which have brought it under the criticism of the law officers of the Government and has been very effective in that capacity. His connection with it was a public service, not a private interest, and he has won additional credit and admiration for his courage in that matter.

He is of Welsh extraction, possibly of Welsh birth, though I am not certain on that point, and is a man whom I can absolutely guarantee in every respect to the committee. He is the one man of the whole number who was in a peculiar sense my personal choice.

"WOODROW WILSON."

PART FOUR.

ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 21, 1914.

BOSTON'S PITCHER VAINLY TRIES TO GIVE CARDS GAME

Four of Hug's Men Draw Passes in Ninth, but Only One Run Counts.

TIMELY HIT WANTING

Had One Sound Safety Been Landed Braves Would Have Lost the Contest.

By Walter Hapgood,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Mass., June 20.—The St. Louis Cardinals, aided by Pitched James' unstinted generosity, a generosity that caused the home bleacherites a lot of worry, for the time being, had all kinds of chances to tie up, if not to actually win in the ninth inning of today's baseball game with the Braves. But the timely tap, the hit that meant a run or two, failed to materialize and Miller Huggins and his men treked back to their fashionable hotel in the Copley Square district, defeated by a score of 3 to 2.

The visitors' chances all came in the ninth, a stage of the game that has many times spelled defeat for the Braves, for Stallings' men, more than any other club in the National League, have been nosed out and beaten in the ninth inning this season.

The Cardinals went into the ninth inning two runs behind. Diminutive Miller Huggins was walked for a starter and, after Magee had flied to center field, Cather was passed. Manager Stallings moved about nervously upon the home bench and sent Hub Perdue out to warm up, fearing there was going to be an ascension with James in the aeronautic role. However, Miller flied to Mann, just as Magee had done. Stallings and the fans, and James, for that matter, all breathed easier.

Walks Fill the Bases.

There were then two down and two on bases, a hit would have meant a run; but Pitcher James showed no disposition to play favorites and passed Wilson, as he had Huggins and Cather. The bases were full. The fans hated to think what would happen if Wingo, who was sent in to bat for Butler, should come across with a two-base hit, or even a single. But Wingo was given free transportation to first, James' fourth pass of the inning. Huggins being forced across the plate with one of the two runs the Cardinals needed so badly.

Snyder was next up. Anything in the way of a hit from him meant the tying up of the game at least. Snyder hit a grounder to Deal at third, who easily stopped the ball, stepped upon third base, forcing Wilson. Pitcher James was relieved from any further embarrassment and the game was over.

Baiting Umpires Taboo.

The Cardinals and the Braves this afternoon fairly tore through their game, playing it in considerably less than two hours. The riot act had apparently been read to the players on both clubs by somebody in authority, for there wasn't a word of criticism on either side against the umpiring, although some of the decisions were so bad that they made the spectators groan, one side faring about as badly as the other.

Aside from his bad ninth inning, and that inning didn't result as disastrously as it might, James pitched superb baseball for the Braves. Three scattered singles were all the visitors could make off his delivery, although he did, in addition to handing out the free passes, hit Butler twice with a pitched ball and, upon another occasion sent one into Huggins' ribs, to the keen delight of the bleacher element.

Perritt Was Effective.

Perritt was the Cardinals' selection and he was quite as effective. In five of the eight innings the Braves went to bat only three batsmen faced Perritt and after the third inning the only safe hit off his delivery was Otto Hess' lucky home run drive over the right field fence with two down and none on in the sixth. The aged pretzel maker is, just at the present time, because of Schmidt's injury, filling in at first base and he played a capital game there this afternoon.

The Cardinals will spend Sunday in Boston, winding up their series here on Monday afternoon. Manager Huggins said this evening that, since coming into the East, he had not met a scrappier, harder club to beat than the Braves.

"I quite concur with Fred Clarke of the Pirates, who said' I would rather see my club playing any team in the league than those Braves.' "

Homer by Hanes Lets Yale Take Harvard Series

Elis Pound Four Crimson Pitchers and Run Bases Wildly, Winning by a 13—8 Score.

BOSTON, June 20.—Harvard had no Charley Brickley today in the play-off with Yale at Fenway Park, and Yale as a result added baseball to the other sports, track and crew, in which it has beaten the Crimson this year. The score was 13 to 8, and though Harvard outbatted Yale by a big margin, the four pitchers the Cambridge lads used were ineffective in pinches, while Way and Gile of Yale managed to keep their heads up in the tightest pinches.

Neither team played a clean game in the field, but Yale had more success than Harvard on the bases and Yale's errors rarely came at the real critical moments.

Jack Hanes, Yale's right fielder, was the Eli hope who broke John Harvard's back. In the seventh, with the bases filled and Yale only two runs ahead of Harvard, Hanes smashed one of Hitchcock's offerings to the far right center for a home run. In the sixth Yale scored three runs on the meager basis of two singles. The Eli's bunted "Hitch" all over the diamond and the Harvard infield apparently did not know where to throw the ball. Yale men running wild. Harvard started out in the first inning like a sure winner. The Cantab's banged "Pie" Way for five straight hits, one a double, scoring four runs.

Yale came back with two in its half, but the break of the game in favor of Yale came in the third when Eddie Mahan, the young Harvard pitcher, who downed Yale Wednesday, was sent from the game by Captain and Coach Dana Wingate, after giving a pass to Blossom that filled the bases. He was replaced by Whitney, a comparatively green and untried pitcher, who proved easy for the Eli's, lasting less than one inning, yielding three runs and allowing Swihard a home run and Falsey a triple.

Hitchcock succeeded this youngster but he, too, went bad and "Minnie" Frye finished up for Harvard. Gile, who succeeded Way in the fourth, pitched effectively in pinches, though freely hit.

MARSANS STARS, BUT LOCAL FEDS LOSE BY ONE RUN

ZINN'S HITTING HELPS

With Score Tied in Eighth, His Single Shoves in Winning Marker for Terrapins.

By W. J. O'Connor.

Doc Crandall was called in yesterday to treat the local Federal League club, which is a very sick patient at Grand and Laclede avenues; but after toiling for almost two hours, Doc issued a bulletin that there was little hope of "life" and withdrew from the case.

Doc says his reputation as baseball life-saver has been seriously injured because of his inability to successfully diagnose this particular case and he recommends that the patient try a change of climate. He says the patient is suffering from inanition, melancholia with symptoms of neurasthenia, whatever that is. Doc ought to know. He's a graduate of the Johns-McGraw school.

The eminent Doctor's reputation was damaged to the extent of a 3—2 rebuke at the hands of Baltimore, which is a revised edition of the Phillies, bound in leather with gold edging. All the enemy's runners were hammered home by solid slams.

Wasn't It a Zinn?

In the first inning, Duncan doubled, but was out going to third on Mayer's slam at Boucher. Meyer galloped home on Zinn's zipping zing to right for two bases. Zinn singed the plate on Swacina's single to center.

Crandall's double and Marsans' single netted one for the Terriers in the third while Marsans' pass, his steal and Tobin's single knotted the score in the fifth.

The deadlock was smashed in the eighth when Duncan dropped his second double in right and scored on Zinn's single.

Fancy playing by Marsans featured the game, the Cuban ripping off a single and swiping a base at the proper time. He drove in one run and scored the other, which is all one can expect from an alien who is being sued in the Federal courts.

Four St. Louis Women to Play in K. C. Meet

St. Louis will have four entrants in the annual Central West Tennis championships, which opens at the Ivanhoe Country Club, Kansas City, Monday, Misses Leslie La Baume and Mimi Garesche departing last night, while Misses Alice and Susanne Prendergast, accompanied by Miss Isabelle Hull, will leave tonight. Miss Katherine Voorhies of Chicago will make the journey with the local contingent.

Miss Gwendolin Reis of Dallas, Tex., the present title holder, will not participate and Miss Hull is sanguine that some of the local colony will make a highly creditable showing as they played excellent tennis in the recent Missouri State tourney. As Miss Garesche is the lone member of the party who has had out of town tournament experience, nervousness is liable to throw some of the younger element off their stride. The hours for play will be from 8 to 10 a. m. and from 4 to 6 p. m., thus avoiding the heat of the middle day.

STUART G. STICKNEY.

Stuart G. Stickney Turns in Low Score in Golf Tourney

By Ralph Bryan.

STUART G. STICKNEY of the St. Louis Country Club, former Trans-Mississippi champion, led a field of 190 golfers in the qualifying round of the thirteenth annual tournament of the St. Louis Golf Association on the Glen Echo Country Club links yesterday. He completed the 18 holes of the course in 72 strokes, requiring 36 for each half. Stickney's score is six under bogey for the course. His closest rival for qualifying honors was Sterling E. Edmunds, also a Country Club player, whose card read 76.

Of the 190 stickers who completed the course, 112 held cards of 94 strokes or under, admitting them to one of the 5 classes in which match play begins tomorrow. This is a remarkable record in itself. The scores under the qualifying mark were distributed as follows: 83 or under admitting to the Championship Class, 83 to 87 to Class A; 88 to 90 to Classes B and C, and 90 to 94 to the Special St. Louis Golf Association Class.

Good Scores Turned In.

There were very few surprises as far as the 32 men who qualified for the Championship Class goes, practically every one of the local stars being included in this frame. There were, however, a number of low scores turned in, all of which points to some keen competition in this week's match play.

Jesse Carleton and Ralph McKittrick came close behind Stickney and Edmunds with 77 each, while Walter Michener, Arthur Stickney and A. H. McCreery were tied with scores of 78, equaling bogey. McCreery's card came as a surprise to the followers of the game, as he had not been looked upon to rank among the 32 low men.

Harry Potter, present holder of the city title, while qualifying easily in the high class, did not make quite the low score that his followers were counting upon him to hand in, 79 being his best. The ever jovial Chris Kenney, runner-up in last season's city tourney, qualified with a score of 81 strokes. Kenney is the present holder of the amateur record of 68 strokes over the Glen Echo course.

Keen Matches Promised.

Some mighty good matches are scheduled early this week, as a result of the pairings in the Championship Class. A notable one is that between Jesse Carleton and Stuart Stickney which is almost certain of being played in the second frame and which will put one or another of those militant contenders out of the competition.

Injunction Applied For Against Pitcher Schulz; No Service on Yankee

CHICAGO, June 20.—Application for an injunction to restrain Albert Schulz, the pitcher who left the New York Americans for the Buffalo Federals, from playing with other than the New York Club, was filed today.

Judge Foell in the Superior Court refused to issue an injunction immediately, instructing counsel first to obtain service. Deputy Sheriffs were unable to find the pitcher. It was reported Schulz had been sent to Buffalo.

The application says that Schulz is under contract with the New York Club for 1914 at a salary of $2400 and that he went to the Buffalo organization June 15. It is alleged he has played one game with that club in Indianapolis and was believed to be in Chicago prepared to play with Buffalo today.

The court set the hearing for Monday. This is the third suit of the kind to come before Judge Foell. He ruled that "Chief" George H. Johnson, who jumped from the Cincinnati Nationals to the Kansas City Federals, could play only with the former club. The case of Fred Blanding who left the Cleveland Americans for the Kansas City Federal League club and then returned to Cleveland is still pending.

Donald Struble, the 16-year-old entrant of the Missouri Cycling Club, with a four-minute handicap, won the 26-mile Forest Park bicycle road race yesterday afternoon. Struble, riding in his first long-distance race, covered the course in 1 hour 15 minutes and 4 seconds, taking first place from a field of 40 cyclers, among them the pick of the country. H. DeVries, unattached, finished second, crossing the line one-fifth of a second after Struble. F. Pollnow of the St. Louis Cycling Club was third. DeVries received a four-minute handicap, while Pollnow was given but two minutes.

Although the local cycle followers were jubilant following Struble's victory, the real surprise of the day was Jerry Freeman's victory over Carl Schutte, the Kansas City entrant, in the struggle for time honors. Schutte was a United States representative in the Olympic games in Stockholm and is considered one of the best riders in America. Until yesterday he had never competed in a race in which he had not taken first place or the time prize.

It's Freeman's First Victory.

Freeman, who represents the St. Louis Cycling Club, has been a rival of Schutte's for years, but yesterday was the first time he was successful in defeating Schutte. Freeman's time was 1 hour 11 minutes and 28 seconds. Schutte crossed the tape two seconds later. Louis Keuhl of the Chicago Cycling Club followed a fraction of a second later. These three riders started from scratch mark and rode a beautiful close race from start to finish.

Three other well-known men lined up at the firing mark, but not one of the trio finished in the trophy list. Edward Kays of Newark, N. J., could not stand the dogged grind of the Nigger Hill climb and dropped out on the fifth lap. Ralph Schepens of the Chicago Cycling Club got a cinder in his eye and was unable to compete after the fourth round. Peter Himshoot, a teammate of Schepens, rode the entire route but was unable to finish better than twenty-seventh.

The event was a success from every standpoint. The course, which was three and a quarter miles through the Forest Park hills, was in excellent shape and was lined with onlookers. Eight laps of the course constituted the entire distance. The race, which was the first since the reorganization of the Forest Park Road Race Association, will from now on be an annual affair.

Country Club to Send Polo Team to Kansas City

Davis Boys, G. W. Simmons and A. T. Primm Will Play in Western Circuit Tourney.

St. Louis will be represented in the sixth annual tournament of the Western Circuit National Polo Association, which begins at Kansas City, Monday, when the Kansas City Blues oppose the Denver Yellowhammers in the opening setto.

The Country Club of this city will send its crack four to the meet and play their important game Thursday against the four from the Onwentsia Club, Chicago.

Four entrants are nominated, St. Louis, Denver, Chicago and Kansas City being represented.

The St. Louis home squad consists of S. Davis, G. W. Simmons, F. Davis and A. T. Primm Jr.

The St. Louisans have always acquitted themselves creditably in this strenuous pastime. St. Louis was the first Western city to foster the game. The Country Club maintained a polo team as early as 1892.

Tuesday and Friday are open dates in the Western tournament schedule, but Round Robins are on the cards, free to all teams. Wednesday the winning aggregation of Monday's inaugural mixes with the Denver Prairie Dogs. The finals occur Saturday with the losers of Monday's and Thursday's contest battling for supremacy and the winners of Wednesday's and Thursday's events opposed.

In addition to the decisions in the intercity tourney the Consolation Cup and Western Polo Association Cup finals will be staged.

MACKMEN FALL ON HAMILTON IN EIGHTH AND WIN

By Clarence F. Lloyd.

AFTER Derrill Pratt's home run with a man on base had seemingly put Earl Hamilton on the easy side of a 2—1 score, the champion Athletics of Philadelphia fell on the youthful southpaw for a quartet of hits and as many runs in the waning portion of the matinee, turning apparent defeat into a 5—2 victory. Despite the defeat the Browns tarry in third place.

From the very beginning the Mackmen clouted Hamilton hard, but for seven rounds his mates came to his aid in excellent fashion. Time after time drives that were labeled base hits were turned into putouts and the the third successive defeat in as many days seemed on the way for the Athletics.

Hamilton, however, who was pitching the game after only two days' rest following his brilliant victory over the Red Sox Tuesday tired in the eighth and was clubbed hard. With the score 2—1 against his side, "Rube" Oldring opened the inning with a single to center. He advanced while Leary and Hamilton were retiring Collins, J. Franklin Baker, who had gone hitless all afternoon, then came through with a scratchy double to right field and Oldring crossed with the marker that tied it at 2 all.

Two Successive Home Runs.

It remained evened up only until "Stuffy" McInnis clouted the ball over Bert Shotton's head for a clean home run. That put the Mackmen two counts to the good, but Amos Strunk kept up the hitting by lifting the ball into the right field bleacher seats for the second home run and the fourth tally of the inning.

Manager Mack finally picked the proper pitcher in Bob Shawkey, a young right-hander. The Browns nicked him for eight blows, but Pratt's home run drive into the right field seats in the third with Sam Agnew on base proved the only time that Shawkey permitted a Brownie to become acquainted with the plate.

Here's a Pitcher Who Hits.

Pitcher Shawkey dented Hamilton oftenest, getting three hits during the afternoon, two of these being off the left-hander and one off Roy Mitchell, who pitched the ninth. It was a double by Shawkey that scored the first Athletic run. This came in the fifth when, with two gone, Schang and his battery mate bunched two-baggers, producing a marker.

Even after the Athletics had assumed the lead, the Browns did not give up the ship, but staged a little rally in their half of the eighth. It failed to produce any runs only because Strunk backed to deep center for a sensational catch of a tremendous drive from Gus Williams' bat. Two were on at the time and had Strunk not held onto the ball, the drive surely would have gone for a home run, which with the two men on base would have tied it up. But Amos was there in the pinch and the Browns drew the black mark.

Browns Give 3 Thrills in Opener; Williams Turns a Sparkling Catch

THE game was far more interesting and exciting than the 5—2 score would indicate. Probably it was one of the best fielding games, the work of both teams considered, of the season. The clubbing of Hamilton started early, but Agnew, Wares and Walker threw thrills in the 15,000 fans in the very first inning by making plays that netted the Mackmen a blank. This sort of work continued all afternoon.

Starting the game, Murphy hit a single to center, but a beautiful throw by Agnew to Pratt cut him down when he tried to steal. Then Oldring started a grounder to right that had all the earmarks of a bona fide single when Pratt dashed over towards first base, scooped up the ball with one hand and made the throw to first. On the next play, Collins hit a drive to the left field corner of the lot and was well on his way to third when Walker picked the ball up against the fence. He made a sensational long throw to Howard and Collins was nipped as he slid into third. These three plays were beauties.

Shawkey got in wrong at the start of the third when Collins, after picking up Agnew's roller, threw low to McInnis and Sam was safe. He advanced to second on Hamilton's sacrifice. Shotton followed with a drive to right, but Murphy leaped in the air and pulled down the ball. Pratt, however, lifted the ball into the right field seats and scored behind Agnew.

Gus Williams probably drew as much noise from the big crowd as any other performer when in the fifth inning he ran to the right field wall, leaned against the boards, and grabbed a liner from Strunk's bat. Gus doesn't believe in dropping them any more.

Leary went hitless although Jack was deprived of a double when Oldring made a circus catch at his expense. Jack's blow was a low liner to short left. The "Rube" came tearing in and just did manage to grab the bulb at his shoetops. After making the catch, he fell and rolled over a couple of times but held onto the ball.

Shotton hit the very first ball that Shawkey pitched at the start of the game to right field for a double. He moved to third on Pratt's sacrifice but Williams and Walker permitted him to perish there, Gus on a roller to McInnis and Clarence on a lift to Strunk.

There still seemed hope in the Browns' eighth when with one gone, Ernie Walker, batting for Hamilton, walked and Shotton singled. Pratt's effort was a lift to Oldring while Strunk's sensational running catch of Williams' drive prevented the score being tied.

Mitchell started off poorly, permitting Shawkey and Murphy to nick singles for a beginning in the ninth. Oldring, however, hit into a double play. He rolled to Howard, who stepped on third, forcing Shawkey, and then threw in time to Leary to double the batter. Agnew and Howard nipped Murphy when he tried to pilfer third.

Even after the Mackmen had assumed the lead in their half of the eighth, few of the 15,000 fans left the park. The Browns lost, not because of poor work, but because Hamilton was hit hard. The fans don't mind those defeats so much.

The Browns and Athletics meet in the fourth game of their series of five at Sportsman's Park this afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock. For the Browns Sunday Manager Jim Austin will make his pitching selection from Mitchell, Taylor, Baumgardner and James. Plank or Bender will hurl for the Athletics.

HUG'S HIGH-GEARED CARDINALS CLIMB BECAUSE OF SPEED

Lee Magee's Improvement Also a Big Factor in Keeping Team in Third Place.

By W. J. O'Connor.

Anybody who thinks baserunning isn't a potential factor in the makeup of a winning ball club should quit eating meat and take a long, quiet rest. "Speed" is the cry of every manager who is dissatisfied with a second division berth and Miller Huggins has been crying louder than anybody we know hereabouts.

Hug went so far as to bench Teddy Cather, a .275 hitter, a few weeks ago, and inject Cozy Dolan, a .197 bird, in the outfield, simply to gear his machine higher for the N. L. sweepstakes. And it is important to notice this fair morning that the Cardinals are third in baserunning and third in the National League.

The leading teams in the parent body occupy the same relative position in the baserunning column that they do in the pennant race. Another important and true statement.

Magee Vastly Improved.

But it is the allround improvement of Lee Magee, the most-pictured prima donna on Hug's chorus, that almost exactly explains the present position of the Cardinals. Lee is whaling the "old pill" for .293, while he has stolen 17 bases and is third to Herzog, 21, and G. Burns, 18, in the whole League. Jack Miller also has picked up with the stick and now has an average of .279, representing a heap of pinch hits, while Ed Koney, who is one of the best three-cushion players on first base in the National League, is scraping along with .270. We realize that comparisons are odious, but oh you Jack Miller!

If there are those among us, my dear friends, who think the Cardinals are cheating, it would be well to note that Artie Butler, now hitting .197, is normally a .280 hitter, and should begin to attain his proper strata almost anytime. Figuring that Butler will soon hit his stride, not to mention the ball, there is no reason not to believe that the Cardinals are up where they belong.

To sum up, gentlemen of the jury, let us state that the latest National League figures prove conclusively the following facts:

Charley Miller, a Card sub, is hitting .364.

Ivey Wingo has dropped back to .302.

Ted Cather is doing .294 while Magee has come from nowhere to .293.

Jack Miller, Chief Wilson, Cozy Dolan and Artie Butler have swiped 33 bases against 13 for Mowrey and Koney.

The Cards have struck out more times and made more hits than any other club in the league.

Hans Wagner isn't hitting .300, only .292.

Browns' Hitters Help.

In Branch Rickey's league there are only nine .300 hitters and two of those are Brownies—the Walker twins. Clarence has fallen into evil ways and is now associated with Tyrus Cobb in a combine to lead the league. Clarence is hitting .347 while Tyrus has exactly the same mark. Sometimes everything goes wrong for Walker.

E. Walker, a despised sub, is hitting .303, just a trifle better than that $50,000 section of the C. Mack's infield—Collins and McInnis, who are tied at .300. The A. L. pitching is so good that Shotton now has an average of .286.

Of the nine .300 hitters, three are Tigers, a like number are Mackmen, two are students of Rickey while the lone interloper is Jackson, Napa, .323.

In the dear old Federal League, Mr. Kauff of Indianapolis has passed the high-powered Mr. Campbell with a mark of .402. All Campbell can do now is .394. Kauff leads the league with 26 stolen bases while Campbell has 10. Steve Evans, the Julius Tannen, of the Outlaws, is hitting .393 and is a bang-up third. Ward Miller with .351 tops the locals.

POLO TO GET PLACE IN OLYMPIC GAMES

PARIS, June 20.—A discussion as to the rifles to be used in international shooting contests took up the greater part of today's session of the International Olympic Congress. Over the objections of the American delegates, the congress decided that the country where the meet was held should select the arms.

Six horse riding events were today placed on the Olympic program. They are composed of military maneuvers, single jumping, team jumping, elimination high jumping, cross-country riding and a competition for the best individual form in horsemanship.

Polo is to be included in the Olympic games, but no credit is to be given for it on the national scores.

The congress took the view of the subcommittee on boxing that the number of events to be contested at the games be referred to the International Boxing Federation to be formed in London in July.

Johnson Still Fast Enough to Retain Title, Saturday

Moran Is Outclassed

Little Chance That American White Hope Will Be Able to Defeat Colored Champion, Now a Citizen of France—Colored Man in Fair Condition.

By John E. Wray,
Sporting Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ONCE more, friends, it's a black outlook confronting the "white hope." The dark dynasty, headed by John Arthur Johnson, the 36-year-old ring champion of the world, still has a fine chance of obscuring the horizon, after next Saturday, June 27, when Frank Moran of Pittsburg will take up the white man's burden at Paris, France.

John Artha' has already tipped off his friends as to what will happen when he opposes Moran. Reduced to capsules, here's the Johnson view of the coming fight:

Moran will last four rounds, perhaps.

Neither Moran nor any other white man will ever beat me.

As a possible champion Moran is not worth discussing.

I'm 36 years old and twice as good as Fitzsimmons was at 37, when he was still champion.

On Moran's record, I don't think he'll be able to put a glove anywhere that I don't want him to.

I weighed 216 pounds in training. By fight time I'll be still less. Doesn't sound much like dissipation, does it?

All this and more like it, seem to indicate that Jack estimates Frank's chances in the coming bout as about the same as those of the pugnacious ant that started to 'roust the elephant.

No Chance of "Frame-Up."

SERIOUSLY, there are only two angles to the affair from which Pittsburg Moran might glean the faintest hopes. They are:

Is Johnson a physical wreck?

Is the coming bout a frame-up?

As the last is the most easily and certainly answered, we'll pitch that one out, first: There's no reason why Johnson should let Moran win. If he beats his opponent he has another fight in sight with Sam Langford, dated September, FOR WHICH $30,000 IN GOLD SOVEREIGNS HAS ALREADY BEEN POSTED as Johnson's share, win, lose or draw.

With that plum looming on the horizon Jack is not going to toss the title and $30,000 besides into any man's lap. THE FINANCIAL INTEREST IS TOO GREAT TO PRESUME THAT JOHNSON WOULD FRAME-UP TO LOSE.

As to whether Johnson is broken in body, do your own guessing. As has been pointed out before in these columns, Johnson must be half dead for Moran to have a good chance. Mere age doesn't disqualify Johnson. As he himself hints Fitzsimmons was champion at 37 and fought some rattling bouts thereafter. And FITZSIMMONS' CARCASS WAS A MERE SHELL COMPARED TO THE WONDERFUL PHYSIQUE OF THE BIG SMOKE.

Moran Has Shown No Class.

UNTIL Johnson is beaten there's no way to figure him out down so far by Father Time that he can't beat a man of Moran's stripe. While Moran is a good, clean fellow, and has plenty of gameness, they say, he simply doesn't figure to be in the same planetary system with the champion, as a boxing star. He has been licked four or five times and by men of no standing, like Jack Geyer and Tony Ross. Men as obscure as Al Kubiac have fought draws with him. Luther McCarty easily beat him, and Luther was no champion of the world.

Everything points to the fight lasting JUST AS LONG AS JOHNSON CARES TO LET IT GO. Science, skill, size, experience and all the qualities that help make a winner are with the black.

Under other circumstances one would have to distrust the champion's chances; but in this case the discrepancy in ability is so great and the title holder's impaired (?) condition so much a matter of guesswork that it's impossible to give the championship aspirant much consideration. Not even real youth is in his favor, for Moran himself is 27 years old, and that's only one season less than Sam Langford, whom they are already describing as "all in."

Has Fought Too Little.

The chief argument against Johnson is that he has not fought much since winning the title from Tommy Burns, six years ago. Not one battle worth the name has he taken part in, unless we include his affair with Jim Jeffries, a hulk coming back after five years' idleness, or that with Jim Flynn, who never classed in weight, skill or in any particular with the second-rate men of the time. Al Kufman, Stanley Ketchel and Jim Johnson are his only other opponents in six years.

Johnson, nevertheless, has been doing some sort of training a considerable part of the time. He must not be rated as in the same fix with Jeffries, who tried to "come back" without fighting a soul after a complete retirement for several years; or with John L. Sullivan, who was hog fat and beaten by John Barleycorn, when he lost to James J. Corbett.

Johnson's is a special case and is not to be waved aside with the usual remark, "They never come back."

Johnson, as a champion, has never left.

Illinois A. C. Team Is First in Track Meet; Richards Is Protested

CHICAGO, June 20.—With a score of 48 points, the Illinois Athletic Club today won an easy victory in its first annual handicap track meet. I. A. C. athletes won first place in six of the thirteen events and five of these first places were taken by two of the club's stars—Alvah Richards, formerly of Brigham Young University, and Joey Ray. The Chicago Athletic Association was second, scoring 38 points.

The C. A. A. entered a protest against Richards on the ground that he is not a resident of the Central A. A. U. district. The latter club protested on technical grounds the participation of Marchal, C. A. A. winner of the half-mile run.

Outside Ball.

I WOULD not give a tinker's dam
  For all the "inside" ball extant;
Give us the batter who can slam
  The ball outside the bloomin' plant.

A pitchers' battle has no thrill,
  There's nothing to a no-hit game;
Give us the guy that slams the pill
  And spoils the contour of the same.

'Tis flat, unprofitable, stale,
  And has no music for the ear,
To see a guy go up and whale
  The nonresisting atmosphere.

But oh, the luscious, tuneful smack,
  When someone hits it on the nose
And drives it with a ringing crack
  To where the uncut timber grows.

The music hath not yet been writ
  Whose dulcet tones delight the ears
As one resounding home-run hit
  That clears the fence and disappears.

JOE WOOD IS HIT HARD; CADY AND SPEAKER HURT

CHICAGO, June 20.—Joe Wood had one bad inning today when Chicago connected with his delivery in batting bee fashion, amassing six hits, which included a home run, a triple, a double and three singles, and scored four runs, giving the locals the third game of the series from Boston, 5 to 2.

Russell was hit harder than the visiting twirler, but the sensational fielding of Blackburne, Weaver, Breton and Chase spoiled the chances of the visitors scoring.

Cady was spiked in the leg by Schalk when the latter slid into the plate in the fourth inning. Speaker wrenched his ankle in the eighth inning when he rounded first base after singling and had to be assisted from the field. It may be several days before he will be able to play. Score:

CHAPMAN'S ERRORS GIVE NEW YORK EASY GAME

CLEVELAND, June 20.—Chapman's errors in the fifth inning gave New York an easy victory over Cleveland today, 7 to 1. Two were down when Chapman missed a chance to retire the side. Two more errors by Chapman, four bases on balls by Bowman, a triple by Peckinpaugh and a single by Cook gave New York six runs in the inning. Lajoie, out of the game for two weeks, hit for James and drove in the only Nap run.

Veach's single in the tenth inning yesterday brought in the winning run for Detroit. His single today came in the seventh, immediately after Crawford had driven the ball to the score-board for three bases.

JUNIOR ATHLETES SET FOUR NEW RECORDS

NEW YORK, June 20.—Four new junior championship track and field records were made during the amateur athletic union metropolitan junior championship meet at Travers Island today.

William Kyronen of Finland, who competed for the Kaleva Athletic Club, Brooklyn, won the three-mile run in 15m 3-5s, a new junior record. C. E. Gear of the N. Y. A. C. sent it out 45 feet 4½ inches, beating the old record of 45 feet.

A boy of 17 years, B. C. S. Elliott, from the Bryant High School of Long Island City, competing for the N. Y. A. C., threw the javelin 167 feet 1 inch, beating the former record by 3½ inches. The point trophy was won by the New York A. C., with 54 points.

NEW BIG LEAGUE FORMED TO FIGHT FEDERAL RIVALS

It Will Be Made Up of International and American Association Clubs.

NEW YORK, June 20.—The National Commission, the Supreme Court of Baseball, looks with favor on the proposal to establish a "third" major league.

This was the announcement made by President Barrow of the International League who, with other members of that league, conferred with the commission in session here today.

According to Barrow, the project was fathered by Ban Johnson, president of the American League, and is aimed to check the invasion of the Federal League. Though tentative as yet, Barrow said the plan, as discussed, called for a league embracing eight clubs, four in the East and four in the West. Baltimore would be among them.

Draft Rule May Go.

Barrow said further that the commission looked with favor on knocking out the draft rule from the Class AA leagues as another method of checkmating the Federals.

When the commission meeting adjourned Ban Johnson confirmed what Barrow had said and added:

"The deal is as good as consummated. Some definite announcement will probably be made within a week or ten days."

Clubs from the International League in the East and the American Association in the West will make up the new circuit if the proposal is carried out. Baltimore, Buffalo, Toronto and Newark will make up the Eastern four.

With today's session the baseball magnates concluded their meeting here.

SOMERS DOUBTS REPORT OF NEW THIRD LEAGUE

CLEVELAND, June 20.—"I do not believe that there is anything in the report from New York that a third major league is to be formed," said C. W. Somers, vice-president of the American League and owner of the Cleveland American League and the Cleveland American Association baseball clubs.

"I have heard nothing of the formation of such a league and as I would be considerably interested, I believe I would have heard of it if such a thing was to be done. That story is only talk."

MOTOR INTERESTS PREPARE MEASURE AGAINST CUT-OUT

Councilman Hallers Bill Includes Too Many Abuses, They Claim.

Council bill 102, introduced by Councilman Haller, does not meet the approval of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association, according to T. L. Hausmann, chairman of its Legislative Committee. Mr. Hausmann says the bill is indefinite and does not correct the evils it sets out to remedy. It proposes to legislate against lights on an automobile, as well as to cover excessive smoke, muffler cut-outs, signal devices, etc. It is the opinion of the Legislative Committee that one section of the ordinance would defeat the purpose of the others.

The dealers' association, collaborating with the Automobile Club, has been investigating all the situations covered in this ordinance, as well as many others, for some time, and the committee, of which Mr. Hausmann is the chairman, with the assistance of their legal counsel, has found, contrary to the general opinion, it requires considerably more preparation than the simple drawing up of an ordinance, which, in the mind of one individual, might cover the evils and abuses under discussion.

The association is having duplicates of the ordinances and statutes of other states and cities made, in an endeavor to draw up bills, which will as nearly as possible, approach ideal conditions, and while it may appear that this is very simple, the quantity of data already obtained would surprise most people with the complexities and technicalities of which the situation is full.

"We believe that better results can be obtained, and the co-operation of the different interests, as well as the City Council, assured," said Hausmann, "by introducing separate ordinances, which cover only one condition at a time, allowing each one to rest on its own merits, and eliminating the possibility of one bad ordinance carrying to defeat several good ones.

"We now have an ordinance all ready to introduce, covering the muffler cut-out situation, and as this is the result of long and careful compilation, we feel sure it will meet with success."

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

ACCESSORY MEN PICK NORRIS FOR PRESIDENT

The annual meeting of the Motor Accessory Trade Association of St. Louis has been called for Wednesday night, next, at the American Hotel Annex, Sixth and Market streets. The principal business of the meeting will be the election of officers for the ensuing year. A nominating committee has selected a ticket, more for the purpose of convenience than otherwise, as other nominations will be called for at the meeting.

The nominations are W. K. Norris of the McQuay Norris Mfg. Co., for president; L. E. Allmon of the Missouri Auto Specialty Co., for vice-president; A. C. Bauer of the A. C. Bauer Oil Co., for treasurer, Robert E. Lee for secretary. The other directors nominated are Allan H. Clark of the Vehicle Top and Supply Co., H. H. Hubbard of the United States Tire Co., Louis Moller of Rapp & Moller Carriage Co., John F. Shuford of the Phoenix Auto Supply Co. and A. N. Stanley of the Fisk Rubber Co.

Norris has been treasurer for three years. Allmon has not before been an officer. Bauer has served once as director, Lee has been secretary since the organization of the association, Clark has been a director. Moller has not, Shuford is the present president and Stanley has been president twice and at all other times a director and chairman of the Credit Bureau.

WOULD TAX ALL VEHICLES FOR ROADS

"Sooner or later all vehicles, both horse and motor driven, must be taxed for road maintenance," says Howard E. Coffin, vice-president of the Hudson Motor Car Co., who recognizes neglect of the highways as a serious offset to the large outlays for new roads that are constantly being made throughout the country. "Appropriations for road building are being made generally," he added, "but little attention is being paid to financing a proper road maintenance year after year."

"This subject is pertinent at the present time because of the general awakening in every corner of the country to the great value of good roads to every kind of community. It is obviously unfair to burden motor vehicles with a maintenance tax without subjecting horse-drawn vehicles to their just share of the wheel tax as well," he went on to say, referring to the universal custom of deriving funds for highway upkeep from automobile licenses.

"This general taxation of all highway users for road maintenance must come sooner or later," he added emphatically. "The sooner we arrive at this point the more nearly will we have solved the road maintenance problem in this country."

NEW MANAGER FOR LOCAL COLE AGENCY

Possibly the most interesting piece of news on St. Louis Auto Row the past week was the announcement that E. W. Arbogast had been appointed vice-president and manager of the Cole Motor Co. of Missouri, to take charge at once.

The new manager is new to St. Louis, but of long experience in the automobile business. More recently he was manager of the commercial car department of the Studebaker branch in Chicago, but he comes directly here from the Cole factory.

Arbogast occupies a unique position in the St. Louis automobile field, for he is a full-fledged automobile engineer, and a member of the American Society of Automobile Engineers. Seldom are there engineers who are salesmen. When they get their degree they generally turn to the pursuit in which they have theoretical knowledge, with an idea of putting it to practical use.

Arbogast is an exception. He first had a great deal of experience in the manufacturing end of the automobile, having been connected with the Cleveland Motor Car Co., the Tincher Motor Car Co., and Badger Motor Car Co., before going to Chicago in the commercial car business and later to the Cole factory. One of the connections which will help him materially in his new position was his service with the Northway Motor Manufacturing Co. While there he assisted in designing the famous Northway unit power plant, which is today being driven in thousands of cars.

"One of the most talked-about improvements on the 1915 cars," says Arbogast, is the new vacuum gravity gasoline system on the new Coles, and it is really a gasoline saver. By using this system the builders are still able to carry the gasoline tank in the rear, which gives the space under the front seat for storage room, and deeper cushions, while at the same time it eliminates the hand-pressure pump on the dash, the mechanical pump on the motor, beside the gasoline and air lines from the tank to the dash which have always been troublesome because of air leaks.

"By the use of this new system the motor at all times is given automatically the correct mixture and amount of gasoline, the principal being suction the same as the feed from the carburetor to the motor.

"We have a beautiful and wonderful line this year in our new four and the light and big sixes, and at the price range we are able to give the purchaser the car he wants and usually at the price he wants to pay. In taking charge here I placed Donald Shelton, an expert mechanic from the factory, in charge of the service department, and he is able to take care of all the troubles so often experienced by motorists, in addition to being a Delco expert. He was brought up with the standardized Cole, and I think that he will help me materially to increase the efficiency of this department. Fred Berkley will be retail sales manager."

Models of the entire 1915 Cole line are now on the floors and several deliveries have already been made.

TWO WINNERS AGAIN IN THE RACE GAME

The Delage car in which Rene Thomas picked the plums at Indianapolis will be driven by Billy Knipper, veteran of many speed events in the coming race at Sioux City, Io., July 4. The Sioux City race will be a 300-mile grind on a two-mile track. In this race, Billy expects to displace the atmosphere at a rate that will make race fans prop their eyes wide open.

So many tire changes were chalked up against the foreign tires at Indianapolis, that the first thing Knipper did was to fit his newly acquired car with Firestone tires. Billy says he now has the fastest car as well as the most durable tires that he can procure.

Barney Oldfield, who needs no introduction to race fans, will also drive in the Sioux City race. Barney piloted the first American car across the line at Indianapolis with only three tire changes. This remarkable record, together with past speedway records for Firestones, is what influenced Billy Knipper in their favor. Barney will also use Firestones, which have served him so faithfully in the past.

MEET OF A. A. A. IN WHITE MOUNTAINS EARLY IN JULY

Governors and Good Road Enthusiasts to Gather at Annual Motorists' Powow.

Gov. Felker of New Hampshire will head the list of noted speakers who will address the good roads session of the midsummer meeting of the American Automobile Association, to be held at the Hotel Maplewood, Bethlehem, N. H., on the afternoon of July 6. White Mountains visitors generally are invited to attend the highways gathering which will be in charge of Chairman George C. Diehl of the A. A. A. National Good Roads Board.

State Highway Commissioners S. Percy Hooker of New Hampshire, Lyman H. Nelson of Maine and Charles W. Gates of Vermont will tell of roads development in their respective states. An address which will have some reference to Federal aid will be delivered by Paul D. Sargent, the State Highway Engineer of Maine, who was formerly acting director of the United States Office of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture. Col. W. D. Sohier, chairman of the Massachusetts Highway Commission, also expects to arrange his plans to be present.

Chairman Lewis R. Speare of the A. A. A. Midsummer Meeting Committee calls upon those participants who intend to make the journey by way of Boston to notify him at the earliest possible moment of such intention, in order that he can provide for hotel accommodations and supply special route information which gives varied itineraries to Bethlehem from various New England points. His address is Cambridge C., Boston, Mass.

DEPRESSION IN TRADE HAS BEEN OVERCOME

That the recent financial depression has been completely dissipated and that the 1915 season will see wonderful results attained in the automobile industry, is the assertion of Fred W. Warner, general sales manager of the Oakland Motor Car Company.

Warner is in a position to speak authoritatively on the subject, for, having just returned from a tour of the South west, he has completed the last of a series of trips covering the entire United States. In addition to the Southwest, he has visited the Eastern States, the Central and Middle West, and the Pacific Coast. His purpose was to learn, first hand, conditions throughout the country and to become personally acquainted with the members of his organization.

"Our own records proved to us that there was no truth in the reports that the automobile industry was about to 'break,'" said Warner, "and we were convinced that the condition was only temporary. Our 1914 sales record shows that we were not mistaken and, moreover, there are also many other automobile manufacturers who have met with success. This is true not only of the motor car industry, for I have found that business throughout the entire country is on a safe and sound basis."

A ROADSTER YEAR

"One of the most notable features of the season's automobile buying has been the unprecedented demand for roadsters," says Cecil E. Gibson, general manager of the Empire Automobile Co. of Indianapolis.

"This year we made the percentage for the Empire even higher than the general practice, for upon investigation I found that the buyers' demand for roadsters was general this spring. This popularity of roadster types found us well prepared, for at the shows last winter we exhibited a new Empire roadster that met with approval from all who inspected it, both on account of its mechanical and artistic features, the car being built on our standard chassis. A big feature was the fact that it was made a real touring roadster, providing sufficient carrying space on the rear deck to accommodate three suit cases in a dust-proof compartment.

"So popular has this model become that we have been forced to change our production schedule several times to meet the demand for this type of car, both at home and abroad."

CLAIMS GASOLINE RECORD

T. V. Murphy, general manager of the Jeffery Motor Sales Co., claims he established a record for gasoline consumption on Illinois roads. He recently made a trip to Panama, Hillsboro, Nokomis, Litchfield, Mount Olive, Edwardsville and Collinsville, Ill., in a Jeffery six and in the 200 miles covered the gasoline averaged better than 15 miles to the gallon, which he says is mighty good for a 50 horsepower six cylinder car. The tour was on his monthly visit to his Jeffery agents and according to prospects in this section this season is bound to be a record-breaker for automobile sales.

FOUR DAYS OF RACING ON GALVESTON BEACH

Seventeen events have been carded for the Galveston (Tex.) beach races, to be held on July 30-31 and Aug. 1 and 2. The program has been submitted to the American Automobile Association Contest Board, which will issue the sanction for the races upon approving the program.

The first day's racing includes the first leg of a 150-mile race, which is to be run in three legs, 50 miles on each day, with a limit of one hour placed upon the first two installments. For this event $1500 will be awarded as first prize, $750 for second, $300 for third, $200 for fourth, and in addition to these, $100 will be awarded each car finishing first in its class, making a total of $3250 purse for this one race.

There will also be a mile trial free-for-all flying start in an attempt to lower the beach record of 31.11, held by Louis Disbrow in a Jay-Eye-See. A 15-mile, 301-450 cubic inch class race, and a 10-mile, 231 and under, will complete the first day's program.

The second day will see a 10-mile race open to local dealers, cars of 231-300 cubic inch class, and another event for dealers of the same distance, cars of 301-450 cubic inches. There will be a 10-mile amateur open event for the Galveston Beach cup, also a novelty "slow" race for amateurs.

On Aug. 1 a 10-mile, 161-300 cubic inch class; 20-mile, 450 and under; 10-mile, 230 and under; the second leg of the 150-mile feature, and mile trials will be run. Getaway day will see, in addition to the final of the 150-mile sweepstakes, a 10-mile handicap and consolation race for nonwinners.

Many of the starters who will be seen at Sioux City on July 4, have announced their intention of going south for the Galveston meet.

A Higher Price Does Not Insure a Higher Value

ONE of the most misleading and most misunderstood things about automobiles is their prices. Because one car is priced at from 30% to 40% higher than another car it does not follow that the former car is worth more money. A higher price is no sign or explanation of superiority. In fact the unfortunate experience of thousands has proved that in most cases just the reverse is true.

Other cars cost more, because other manufacturers do not build 50,000 cars in a single season and therefore cannot produce as economically as we can.

For that reason we urge you to be guided not alone by the bare price of a car, but rather by its reputation, performance and specifications.

In no other car but the Overland do you get all of these costly features—unless you pay a much higher price

—a powerful and economical 35 horsepower motor.

—a long wheelbase of 114 inches.

—33 inch x 4 inch tires.

—large, positive and powerful brakes.

—a big, roomy and comfortable tonneau.

—genuine hand-buffed leather and tufted upholstery.

—complete equipment of the very highest grade.

—a gracefully fashioned and magnificiently finished Brewster green body—snappy and modish lines.

—a chassis, the parts of which are made of the finest special formulae steels, and are as accurate, precise and as lasting, both in measurement and performance, as the corresponding parts of the highest priced cars.

Yet this represents but a very meagre portion of the greater Overland value. But it is such value that has enabled us to sell more cars of this type than any other manufacturer in the world.

Why should you pay a higher price for some other car when the other car gives you no more, and in a great many respects, not as much value as you get in the Overland?

Why should you?

THE $900 EMPIRE IS today the dominant factor in the $1,000 Car Class." And the reason is not far to seek.

SOME AUTOMOBILES are made to sell—to meet price competition. Such cars must of necessity be flimsily made.

OTHER AUTOMOBILES are made to meet competition on points, "talking points," as salesmen say. Such cars are good in spots. If you are an expert you may be able to detect those "spots"—and the other spots.

STILL OTHERS ARE MADE to meet the needs and the preferences of discriminating buyers, and price is based, not on competitive conditions, but on the actual value of the car. The Empire is one of these latter.

SOMETIMES WE'VE WONDERED if the Empire policy was right. Speaking, of course, from a purely commercial standpoint.

BUT ONLY MOMENTARILY. The evidence is overwhelmingly in the affirmative. In the long run the Empire policy is the best policy. This has been proven.

BRIEFLY, LET US RECOUNT the history of the Empire car. It will please you, because it is a story of a triumph based on merit alone.

THE FIRST EMPIRE was built to order for a very wealthy Indianapolis man.

HE OWNED SEVERAL CARS—was a connoisseur on automobiles. Knew precisely what he wanted—was willing to pay for it.

LIKE MOST RICH AMERICANS, he was democratic in his ideas. Liked, on occasion, to dispense with the presence of the chauffeur and to drive the car himself. For that purpose he wanted a somewhat smaller, but none the less capable, car. A car of full five-passenger capacity—but without waste room or unnecessary weight.

THAT CAR, WHEN BUILT as he had directed, proved to be an almost perfect automobile. He still drives it—after five years.

THEN A PRACTICAL MAN—one of the most successful automobile dealers in this country—saw the car. It appealed to him as the nearest approach to his ideal of any he had ever seen.

THE KIND OF CAR for the kind of buyer who wants a car of medium size, but of superlative quality. Who insists on quality, and who yet has placed his limit—whether from necessity or from sound sense doesn't matter—at "$1,000 or less."

HE HAD SOLD CARS—this dealer—ever since they were. All kinds of cars—$500 cars and $5,000 cars—and cars of lesser and of higher prices.

HE HAD APOLOGIZED, mentally, for the absence of things he knew ought to be in those cars at the same time that he extolled, audibly, the things that were.

STRANGELY ENOUGH, TOO, he had found it necessary to apologize as often for deficiencies in the $5,000 car as in the cheaper ones.

IN NONE—AT ANY PRICE—did he find the perfect car. And yet, in many cases, the omissions, the slighting of details, had been done, not to save cost, but because the maker either did not know or did not consider those details important.

THAT FIRST EMPIRE more nearly approached his ideal than any other. Yet it was not perfect.

SO HE WROTE DOWN A LIST of fifty things—fifty changes, trifling in themselves, yet all vital to the ultimate user.

AND THEN, INSPIRED by his own enthusiasm—his ambition to make a car he and other dealers could sell without a mental reservation or a mechanical come-back—he proceeded to incorporate a company and took charge of the business to be sure his ideas were carried out to the letter.

IT WILL INTEREST YOU to know that most of those refinements not only did not involve greater cost, but that, on the contrary, they actually resulted in reducing the cost of production.

THAT LAST FACT CONFIRMS what you yourself have said many times—doesn't it?

TO SIMPLIFY IS TO PERFECT. All improvements over the orginal in any mechanical invention or device is in the direction of simplification. As you eliminate parts or processes you enhance the value of the machine.

LOOK AT THE CHASSIS of the Empire. Did you ever see a more clean-cut, simple, yet sturdy, foundation for an automobile? Not one superfluous part—yet complete to the last essential detail.

THAT IS WHAT MAKES IT POSSIBLE to produce a car of this size and power and quality at the price—$900. That, and the low selling cost—for Satisfied Owners draw neither salaries nor traveling expenses.

AND THE SALES they make "stick." Nine out of every ten Empire cars are sold on the recommendation of enthusiastic owners.

THAT HAS BEEN THE STORY of the Empire. A quality car from the first, the quantities have increased steadily and surely. The first six months of this year we sold 300 per cent more Empires than last year—and last year showed a like increase over the former one.

EVERY STEP GAINED has been held. Every advance has proven a permanent one.

WE'D LIKE TO ENUMERATE all the features of the Empire of which we are proud. But space forbids. We would have to describe every part—for none is slighted. None is considered unimportant. Nothing is "good enough" for the Empire if a better is to be had.

AND QUALITY IS MORE a matter of knowing what constitutes quality than of cost. That applies to your own business as well as to ours—so you will recognize the truth in the statement.

EISEMANN MAGNETO—just to mention one or two Empire features. You will find this high priced magneto in no other American car selling for less than $1,750!

NICKEL STEEL SHAFTS and other parts—it isn't possible to obtain better, no matter what you pay.

POWER? AN ELUSIVE TERM and correctly expressed only in cubic inches of piston displacement. Empire is 199 inches—you will find only one other car at less than $1,350 with the same power.

EFFICIENCY?—LOOK at the performance of "The Little Aristocrat" in the strenuous Indiana to Pacific Coast Tour, when it emulated the best and biggest and put to shame some cars of twice the power.

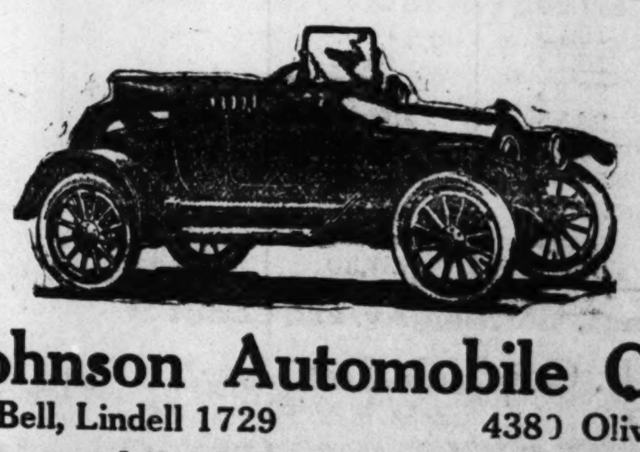
NOR IS IT A SMALL CAR. We like to call it "The Little Aristocrat," but the term is relative only. It is small only when compared with cars of twice its price and more. The touring car is a full five-passenger equipage—and the roadster is the classiest, nattiest, sturdiest roadster you ever drove.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING and starting—optional at $1,025—is the reliable Remy system, every part of which, including batteries, is guaranteed by the Remy Company.

WE KNOW OF NO OTHER car in which the entire electrical equipment, batteries included, is guaranteed by the maker of the starter. We insisted on this.

BUT IT'S USELESS TO TRY to describe all or even the more important features of the Empire. You will have to see and to study that clean-cut chassis and motor and the sturdy underpinning of the car.

TAKE A RIDE in "The Little Aristocrat." Drive it. Note the facility of control. The certainty and yet the softness of the brakes. The riding qualities of the springs.



THE SILENCE that spells quality; the power that is efficient; the fashionable streamline body and the faultless finish.

YOUR VERDICT will be that there is no other American car of the capacity, the capability and the quality obtainable at anywhere near the price of the Empire—$900.

LITTLE METZ HAS NEW STREAMLINE BODY

The Metz "22," winner of last year's Glidden tour from Minneapolis to Glacier National Park, Montana, is out in an entirely new body design. It is of the pure streamline type, with wide foredoors and a big, roomy, double seat, luxuriously upholstered, the whole presenting an appearance of grace and beauty that is not excelled by any other car in the roadster class.

Another very attractive feature that has been added to the Metz in its new form is a plate glass rain-vision windshield, constructed in two sections, each adjustable for rain and ventilation. When it is desired to inclose the car, the extension top fits down over the wind-shield frame, making a tight joint, and there are curtains that afford protection at the sides and rear.

The gasoline tank is now carried in the cowl instead of behind the seat, as formerly, and the new equipment includes a Prest-O-Lite tank to feed the headlights.

The Metz is handled in St. Louis by the De Luxe Automobile Co.

MOTOR TRUCKS WILL LEAD TO CHEAPER FOOD

Because high food prices are mainly responsible for labor agitation, the problem of increasing home supplies of food will engage the attention of the British Government, said the president of the National Chamber of Trade in England in his address at his sixteenth annual conference in Blackpool recently. He referred to the growth of motor traction as promising cheaper food. Much more use might be made of motor vehicles for hauling by road, he said, and the State should take up at once the matter of prividing and maintaining suitable roads for this traffic.

While the cost of haulage by road has been reduced from one-third to one-half by the development of the motor vehicle as shown by the American National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, and can be reduced further by the building of good, durable roads, the cost of transportation by rail has nearly doubled in the last fifteen years. An investigation by the Lehigh Valley Railroad shows that freight cars and locomotives cost more than twice as much now as in 1890, and that the cost of haiuling freight was 46-100ths of a cent per car-mile 15 years ago, as compared with 88-100ths at the present time.

Motor trucks can deliver directly from farm to hotel, restaurant or retailer the same day or the morning after farm produce is gathered without any rehandling or delay, and therefore in better condition than under present systems, and can save to the consumer a large part of the commission men's charges and cartage costs, which often add 100 per cent to the cost.

YOUTHFUL SPEED BUGS BUILD RACING CARS

It is a recognized fact that the average boy of 12 to 15 years nowadays is of a decidedly technical turn of mind, at least so far as automobiles are concerned. Following the recent Vanderbilt and Grand Prize races at Santa Monica, Cal., the youthful motor car enthusiasm reached a climax, and chief among the juvenile sports in California just now, is the building of baby racing cars—not pushmobiles, but real engine snorting, castor oil smelling, "speed demons," with speed possibilities up to 60 miles an hour.

So great was the interest in the races at Santa Monica last February, the boys arranged for a junior Vanderbilt and Grand Prize, and this was staged a short time ago. In these races, no less than five cars constituted the baby Mercer team. These cars are patterned after the large Mercer racers which were run to such good advantage in the big races. The young Mercer drivers are Mott Haines, Harold Lamb, William Whentoff, Percy McFadden and Harry Hartz.

Haine's car which carried a large No. 4 and in many ways resembled Pullen's Grand Prize winning Mercer, led the field by a good margin for twenty laps, and was compelled to retire only when he was forced into the fence with a broken wheel. Prior to the accident, he was looked upon as a sure winner. Following the junior Vanderbilt and Grand Prize, the boys held a series of races at Ascot Park, Los Angeles, May 30, including a junior Indianapolis sweepstakes.

In the 15-mile event for 2-cylinder models the little Mercers made a clean up. Haines was first in his No. 4, and time for the distance was 18m 34 3-5s. This represents an average speed of approximately 48½ miles an hour. In the big race, which was for a distance of 40 miles, Haines was proclaimed the winner, but it finally developed that Hartz was the victor, the judges having been somewhat confused at the finish.

Hupmobile
The car of The American Family

$1050
Completely Equipped

You Buy Excess Value

The Hup is excess value in the quality of its engineering and its materials.
Excess value in its low running cost—its long gas and oil and tire mileages.
Excess value in its continuous service.
In its almost total freedom from repair costs through defective or broken parts.
In the smartness of its low-hung, streamline design.
In its reputation, from one end of the country to the other, as a car of extraordinary excellence.

You Sell Excess Value

As a second-hand car the Hup stands higher than any other.
It brings a better price in any market, at any season.
Because it's a good car after one or two or three seasons of use.
Its steels are better, last longer and wear less.
So it runs as well as when new; it is full-powered and full of "go"; it picks up and gets away as quickly as it ever did.
In other words, Hup depreciation is less per thousand miles.
These are things you want in your car—low running cost, practically no repair cost, high selling value.
You get them in greater proportion in the Hup because of the way it's built.
Ask any Hupmobilist, and go see the Hup dealer.

The Jeffery Car Is the Car You'd Build

If you had all the money you need. If you had a big motor car plant—and you knew how. If you had the knowledge and experience of all the best engineers in the world, and you built a motor car, what would it be like?

First, it would be drawn by a light, high speed, high efficiency motor. The bulky, slow speed motor is a thing of the past. Europe has proved that economy and highest efficiency are secured through the light high speed motor. The trade papers are full of editorials and articles by the best known engineers endorsing the idea.

Then you would build your springs, axles and drive shafts of vanadium steel. All the highest priced cars use it. It costs 17½ cents a pound as against 8 cents for the ordinary steel, but you are building a car to go at least 50,000 miles.

Imported annular ball bearings would claim your choice because like Swiss watches, and scientific instruments, bearings are built better abroad.

You would buy the best and therefore the highest priced starting and lighting system.

A four speed transmission would be used, Bosch Duplex ignition, the best type of some highest grade carburetor like the Rayfield, Spicer universals, full floating rear axles, Daimler leather couplings and Warner speedometer.

Then your equipment would be the best you could buy.

Now we say you would incorporate these units in the car you built because the best engineers and the most experienced and successful builders are incorporating some or all of them in the highest priced cars on the market.

It is no mere coincidence that the Jeffery is built from these high-grade materials.

Jeffery brought the light high speed, high efficiency motor idea as an accepted and proven principle from Europe last Fall. That made possible America's first car of economy and quality at a moderate price.

Then he spent a million dollars for quality alone (which he might have saved had he been satisfied to build an ordinary car) in putting that super-quality into the car which we have said you would put into the car you built.

So Jeffery has built for you the very car that you would build yourself had you the facilities. In finish and style it delights the eye.

The man who buys a Jeffery now will have the satisfaction of being thoroughly up to date next season.

The early announcements of all the big manufacturers show that the light, high speed economical type of car will be the dominant car next season.

The nearest Jeffery dealer will show you the car that you would have built yourself. A car of quality. A beautiful car of exclusive design. An economical car.

JOHNSON IN NEW HOME

"For the past few years we have been greatly handicapped for room due to our enormous increase in business," said W. L. Johnson of the Johnson Automobile Co., now located at 4380-84 Olive.

"We have previously been compelled to lease other buildings for storage purposes, but now feel that this problem has been solved.

"Decoration now under headway at our new home, 3667-69 Olive, will be completed within the next two weeks, which will give us ample time to be promptly settled by July 1, after which date we will be in a much better position to take care of our many Ford and Empire owners."

The new place is the former home of the Ford Motor Co.

The Extra Millions Spent on Goodyear Tires

Let No Man Charge You Higher Prices For Tires Not Made Like These

For many years we have had scores of experts working to better No-Rim-Cut tires. They are in our Department of Research and Experiment.

Their efforts have cost us, in your behalf, $100,000 yearly.

Every No-Rim-Cut tire gets our extra "On-Air" cure. This is done to save the countless blowouts due to wrinkled fabric. It is done by no other tire maker.

This single extra process costs us $450,000 per year.

We create in each tire, during vulcanization, hundreds of large rubber rivets. This is done to combat tread separation—to reduce the risk 60 per cent.

The simple rights to this method cost us $50,000.

Another costly, exclusive feature makes rim-cutting impossible. No other satisfactory way is known.

And these tires alone have our All-Weather tread. That's a tough, double-thick anti-skid. It rides as smooth as a plain tread, yet it grasps wet roads with countless deep and sharp-edged grips.

These efforts and features have cost us millions of dollars. They have saved tire users tens of millions, perhaps. And not one of these four—the greatest features in tire making—is found in any other tire.

Note the Result

Goodyear tires have come to outsell any other tire in the world. And this year—after millions of these tires have been tested—our tire sales jump 55 per cent. Never before have so many men discarded other tires for Goodyears.

Sold at Prices Others Cannot Meet

But these costly tires are this year selling below 16 other makes. Many tires cost one-fourth to one-half more.

Not an extra-price tire excels the Goodyear in any way whatever. Not one embodies any of our four exclusive features. Not one has attained, in the test of time, such prestige and such sale.

Our lower prices are due to mammoth output. They are due to efficiency, to modern equipment. They are due to low profit. Our last year's profit averaged 6½ per cent.

Every dollar of higher price means extra cost per mile.

Don't pay it. You will get in Goodyears all the value that anyone can give you. And any dealer will supply them if you say you want Goodyear tires.

TOURING ABROAD IS LIKE DRIVING ON CITY STREETS

American Tells of Fine Roads, Price of "Essence" and Queer Customs Across the Water.

Mr. Wallace Nutting, who has a nation-wide reputation as an artist of considerable note, and who is especially well known in the New England States, writes very interestingly of motor conditions relative to a tour on the Continent, where he and his party have been touring in a Stevens-Duryea for several months past.

He emphasizes the fact that the tourist of the present time does not need to encounter the difficulties and annoying experiences that a few years ago seemed almost inevitable. Arrangements can be made to place your car in the hands of a high-class customs broker at Boston or New York, who will attend to all matters such as procuring membership in the Touring Club of France and the Auto Association of Great Britain, and will see your car shipped and through the customs at each end, doing all these additional services very promptly and without extra charge.

Many things have been done in the past few years to aid the tourist in securing desirable accommodations. Carefully prepared maps with descriptive matter relative to points of interest can be secured by the traveler at his port of debarkation. The distances from point to point are correctly shown and the points of interest so marked that it is almost impossible to make an error by carefully following out the directions as given.

As commonly known, the roads on the continent are generally in good repair. Especially in France one does not need to consult a map concerning their grade and character, because both are always good. Many points marked "steep descent" on the maps are gentle grades which we should scarcely mention in America. There is, however, one important exception relative to good roads; those running into Paris are notorious for rough pavements, though the pavement in the city is good.

A serious annoyance to the tourist is the fact that the famous City of Paris stops every motor coming into the city, measures the cubic size of the "essence" tank, measures the depth of the "essence," then asks you how much you have, disputes you and after delaying and haggling while one might go 20 miles, finally assesses a heavy duty (20 centimes a liter, or about 20 cents a gallon) on what they think you have aboard. The above tax at Paris is about the same one has to pay in town over what he would pay out of town on "essence." Consequently, on leaving the city one generally buys just outside the line. Many cities, including Lyons, have been modern enough to abolish this tax, but a great number stop one to ask if there is any food aboard.

Tourists in France should be warned not to blow the Klaxon or light the head lamps in Paris. To do either is almost certain to cause arrest, but no one is ever arrested for speeding in or out of Paris, and the pedestrian who is run over has actually often been fined for being in the way. Owing to the great speed of so many motor cars it is necessary to drive very cautiously.

Formerly it was no uncommon thing for a tourist to be obliged to remain for a considerable length of time at one place, in order that repairs might be made upon his car, but the high development of the best in motor cars today has almost eliminated this objectionable feature. In this connection Mr. Nutting writes at the close of a recent letter: "You will be interested to know that we have not spent a cent on our Stevens-Duryea since leaving America. We have toured Italy and France, so far making 4500 miles, and after careful examination of the mechanism can find nothing to do, as it is running like silk, and not a nut or a screw loose."

MAXWELL OUTPUT MAY GO TO 75,000 CARS

The recent fine showing in the Indianapolis 500-mile race of the Maxwell entry has led to a heavy increase in interest in that car, according to W. C. Shields, general manager of the Colonial Motor Car Co. of St. Louis, local distributors over a wide territory of the Maxwell. "It must be remembered," said he, "that the Maxwell cars in the race were designed and built on ninety days notice.

"I would like to say that the home office's original plans of producing 60,000 of the '25' cars for next season has been revised to 75,000, and it is my opinion that another revision upward on quantity will be necessary, judging from the wonderful demand for this remarkable automobile value. In addition to the American demand, growing by leaps and bounds, foreigners are becoming aroused over the showing made by the car, and I understand our foreign sales department at Detroit is puzzling some very goor brains in an effort to supply a sufficient number to dealers in England, France, Germany, Russia, Australia, New Zealand, South America, South Africa and other enlightened points.

"I have nothing in view of a startling nature for St. Louis just now, but you can depend on the Colonial Motor Car Co. playing the game and pulling off some worth-while stunts in the near future."

AUTO CLUB'S ROSTER SHOWS 2250 NAMES

The membership of the Automobile Club of St. Louis is increasing daily. Sixty-five members have been elected since the first of June, making the club roster include more than 2250 names. The Year Book of the club, which has just been published and sent to each member in good standing, is in great demand, since it contains all necessary information regarding the State motor vehicle law, city ordinances and other valuable information for every owner and operator of an automobile.

Members of the club have made use of the touring information which they have at their disposal at the club headquarters, and from present indications this season will see more touring than ever before.

NEW OVERLAND SIX SOON TO BE READY

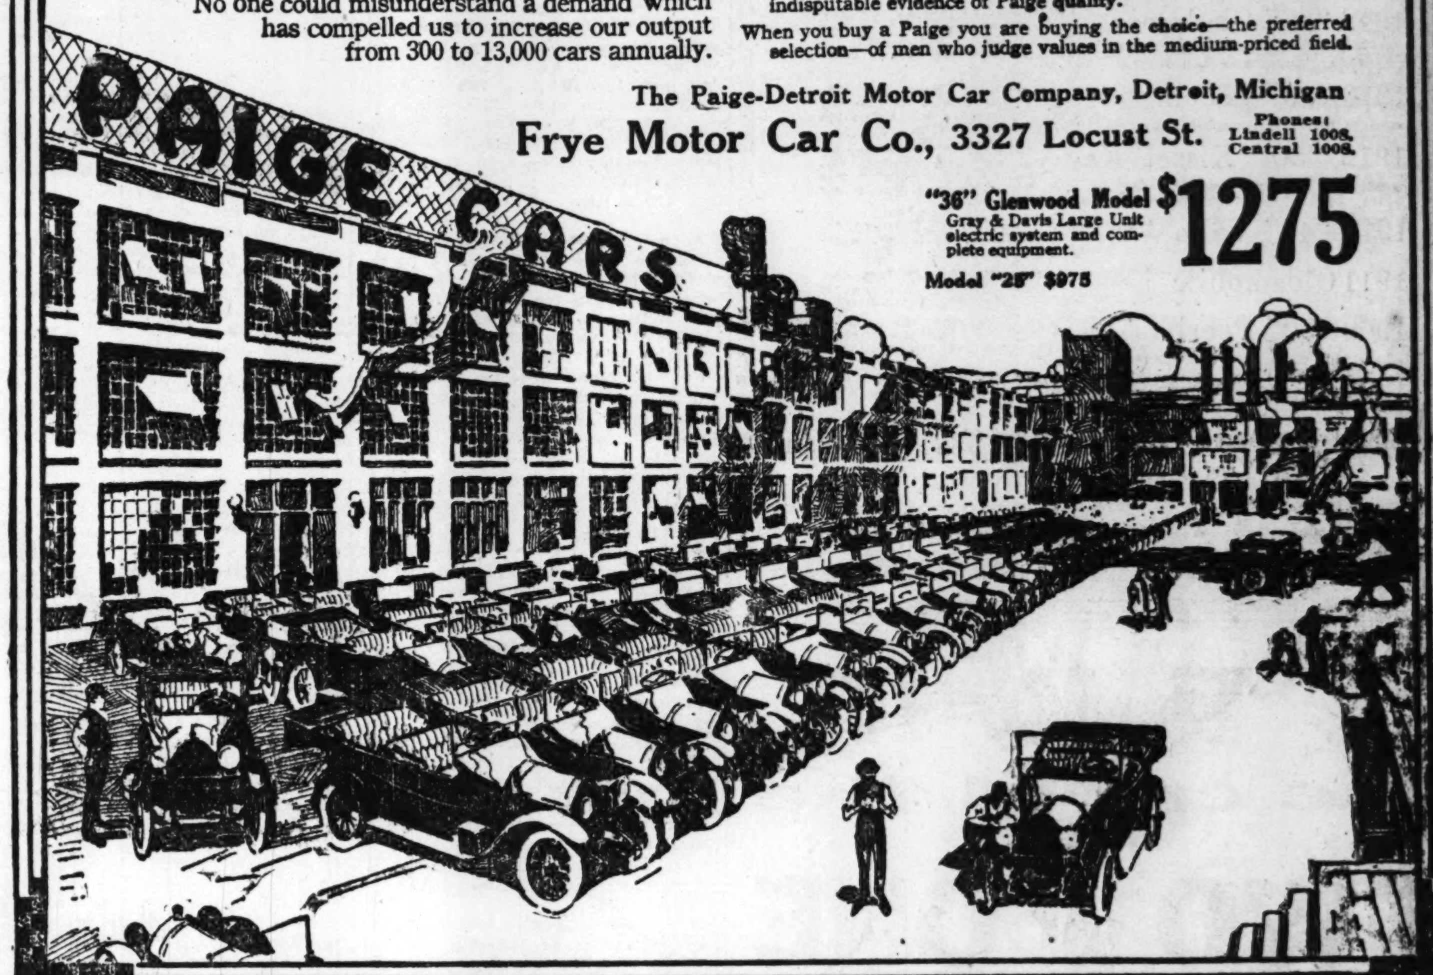
An announcement of more than usual interest to the general automobile trade and the public, but more particularly to the many dealers who handle Overland cars, has just come from J. N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Company.

So quietly that even the intimates have had no inkling of Mr. Willy's plans, Overland engineers have for the past season been developing and testing a new 7-passenger Overland which in points of value, equipment and price bids fair to outclass anything that has been offered heretofore or will be offered in such surpassing measure for some time to come.

As announced some time ago, Mr. Willys will materially increase his production of four-cylinder models for 1915, while the new six-cylinder Overland, whose preparation has been so carefully guarded, will, for one thing, serve the purpose of giving Overland dealers a line of cars complete and inclusive.

The six-cylinder addition to the Overland line will retail at $1475, at which figure it has all the appearance of a record-breaking value that is unattainable to any but an old and well-equipped, quantity-producing manufacturer like J. N. Willys.

The long stroke motor is rated at 45-50 horsepower, the handsome streamline body seems to indicate fleetness and power. Tires are 35x4½, on demountable rims, and every modern automobile convenience, such as self-starter, electric lights, etc., have been incorporated in the liberal specifications.



PAIGE

The shipping "yard" reflects Paige popularity

In the Paige shipping yard and on the loading platform—that's where you will find the proof of Paige popularity.

Hour after hour—day after day—Paige cars are started on their way to every state of the Union in response to a persistently increasing demand from the public.

Argue as you will there is no greater object lesson than this—no greater proof of Paige supremacy in the motor car field.

Here at the factory, we know what the public thinks of the Paige. There is only one way that we can interpret the tidal wave of demand that surges back to us from Paige dealers all over the country.

No one could misunderstand a demand that has increased Paige sales from $44,000 to $1,250,000 a month. No one could misunderstand a demand that has moved us bodily from a small two-story plant into the present mammoth Paige factory.

No one could misunderstand a demand which has compelled us to increase our output from 300 to 13,000 cars annually.

In the face of such figures—in the face of such staggering evidence, there is only one possible answer. Paige cars are PREFERRED cars with the motor buying public. Paige cars are leading the medium-priced field.

Turn these figures over in your mind—look at the matter from all angles—and you must inevitably return to the same conclusion. Then remember that Paige cars would not be the most popular cars unless they had won that reputation through actual, demonstrated merit. Overwhelming public preference is not a matter of mere "chance" these motor-wise days. Paige demand is indisputable evidence of Paige quality.

When you buy a Paige you are buying the choice—the preferred selection—of men who judge values in the medium-priced field.

How to Banish Wrinkles Quickly

If your face is disfigured with wrinkles, no matter what the cause, you can quickly dispel every line, even the most obstinate, by using a simple, home-made wash lotion. Merely dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel—inexpensive ingredients found in any drug store. Bathe the face in this, and—presto!—you scarcely believe your own eyes when you look into your mirror and behold the marvelous transformation!

The remarkable astringent action of the saxolite so tightens the skin, wrinkles are literally pressed out. Best of all, this result is not purely temporary, for the lotion also has a healthful tonic action, which tends to strengthen and tone up the weakened tissue, and added benefit may be expected with continued use. Use this once a day for awhile; it cannot injure the most delicate skin, the treatment itself leaves no trace—no one guesses the secret of your increasing youthful appearance.—ADV.

WHEN you pay 10c a line for advertisements in the Post-Dispatch Poultry and Bird column, your advertisement is printed in more than 300,000 copies. The big Sunday Post-Dispatch reaches more than one million and a half readers. No other St. Louis newspaper can guarantee you half as much.

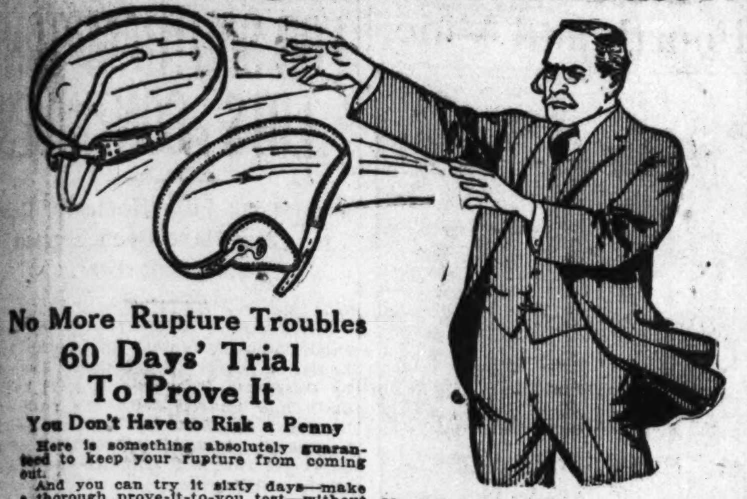
An End To The Curse Of Wearing Worthless Trusses



No More Rupture Troubles
60 Days' Trial To Prove It

You Don't Have to Risk a Penny

Here is something absolutely guaranteed to keep your rupture from coming out.

And you can try it sixty days—make a thorough prove-it-to-you test—without having to risk a penny.

If it doesn't hold—if it doesn't keep your rupture from bothering you in any way—then it won't cost you a single cent.

The Only Thing Good Enough To Stand Such a Test

You know as well as we that you can't tell anything about a truss or anything else for rupture merely by trying it on. That's the worst of going to a drug store or local truss fitter's.

A truss or so-called "appliance" may seem alright when you first put it on, and afterwards prove utterly worthless.

The only way in the world you can make sure of exactly what you're getting is by a 60 days' trial—a thorough day-after-day test.

And our guaranteed rupture holder—the famous Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss—is the only thing of any kind whatever for rupture that you can get on sixty days' trial, the only thing good enough to stand such a long and thorough test.

Something Nothing Else Does

The Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss is so utterly different from anything else for rupture that it has received eighteen separate patents.

It provides the only way ever discovered for overcoming the weakness which is the real cause of rupture.

Will Save You From Operation

The Cluthe Truss has so thoroughly proved its merits that physicians in all parts of the world and surgeons in the U. S. Army and Navy now recommend it instead of advising operation. It has brought complete recovery in hundreds of cases after operation has proved a failure.

No Belt or Leg Straps to Annoy You

That's why people who try this truss say it is as comfortable as their clothing. It is waterproof—will hold in the bath. Easily kept clean.

Get World's Greatest Rupture Book

Don't send any money—just write for our free book and find out everything you want to know.

Full of facts never before put in print. Cloth-bound—96 pages—20 separate articles and 23 photographic illustrations. Will save you from being fooled and save you from wasting money.

Explains why elastic and spring trusses are a wicked crime—why they are the ruptured man's worst enemy—why the law should stop their sale.

Exposes the humbug "appliances," "methods," "plasters," etc.

Shows why operation is often a needless gamble with death, and why, if a man manages to get well from the operation he often has to keep on wearing a truss.

And it tells all about the Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss and how you can try it sixty days and how little it costs if you keep it.

Gives endorsements of over 5000 people.

Better write for the book today—it tells things you could never find out by going to doctors or drug stores. Simply use the coupon or say in a letter or postal, "Send me the book."

CHILDREN OF THE LEAGUE STRIVING TO SAVE BABIES

CONTRIBUTIONS.

Previously acknowledged	$760 50
Aline Reavis and Veva McGehee, lemonade stand	3 37
"Goody Two Shoes," play presented by children of 1300 and 1400 blocks, Goodfellow avenue	8 00

Two little girls, Aline Reavis of 5112 Cabanne avenue and Veva McGehee of 5102 Cabanne avenue, conducted a lemonade stand at 5100 Cabanne avenue two afternoons this past week and earned $3.37 with which to help the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund save the tenement babies.

They were very happy when they brought the money down to the Post-Dispatch yesterday. And they were very proud, too, when they received the Pure Milk League buttons with the pretty picture of the Post-Dispatch weather bird in colors, also the league membership cards testifying that they have helped to save the life of a baby of the tenements and that their names duly are enrolled as league members for the summer of 1914.

Four little girls, Martha and Eleanor McTavio and Margaret and Betsey Sherwood, of 1330 and 1334 Semple avenue, held a bazar for the benefit of the Pure Milk Fund and earned $2.88 for the rescuing of the tenement tots. They presented a pretty little play and sold root beer, candy, popcorn and other refreshments.

"They are taking great delight in being able to help the babies," writes Mr. F. P. Sherwood, enclosing check for the amount earned by these four little girls. And the Post-Dispatch Weather Bird on the League buttons took great delight in flying to the homes of these two pairs of little sisters.

Margaret Luebbers and Estella Jewson, two little girls who have attained the great age of 11 years, gave a minstrel show in the back yard of Margaret's home, 1810 North Jefferson avenue, and earned $2.11 for the Pure Milk Fund that saves the little ones of the poor from death due to impure milk in the hot summer time. They presented a pleasing program that was much enjoyed by their audience and they are quite properly proud of their success.

A juvenile company presented a play entitled "Goody Two Shoes" and earned $8 for the Pure Milk Fund to save the babies. Those taking part were: Elsie Dale, 1424 Goodfellow avenue; Grace Darby, 1406 Goodfellow; Ethel and Violet Riddle, 1429A Goodfellow; May Bauer, 1434 Goodfellow; Irma Marks, 1393 Goodfellow; Ruth and Lucille Duggan, 1391A Goodfellow, and Enid Holbert, 1426A Goodfellow avenue.

The performance was directed by Miss Anna Bauer of 1434 Goodfellow avenue. Five boys did great work in assisting to make the entertainment a success Their names are Carroll Sarles, 5812 Ridge avenue; Clarence Gadsey, 5824 Romaine place; Burgen Wilkie Temple and Wells and Charles Duggan, 1391A Goodfellow avenue.

Little Ruth Crawley, 5 years old, of 3822 Ashland avenue, and Mildred Bischoff, 10, and Henry A. Bischoff Jr., 6, of 3841 Ashland avenue, conducted a lemonade and cherry phosphate stand and earned 84 cents with which to help the Pure Milk Fund save the tenement babies.

The Bischoff children, who attend the Farragut School, conducted the stand in the afternoon, earning 44 cents, and little Ruth Crawley, who is too young to attend school, conducted it in the forenoon, earning 40 cents.

They now are three very proud members of the Pure Milk League and are decorated with the League button, the badge of honor worn by all the Children of the League this summer.

Allen and Quentin Gould of 5615 Minerva avenue; Donald Calhoun, 1319 Clara; Edgar and Walter Walsh, 1337 Clara, and David Taylor, 5609 Page, earned $3.65 for the Pure Milk Fund by giving an entertainment including plays and moving pictures, at which, also, refreshments were served.

Two other helpful boys, Homer Fitzpatrick of 1398 Blackstone avenue and Benton Helmick, 1388 Blackstone, will give a picture show on the lawn of the Fitzpatrick residence Monday and Tuesday evenings of this week. They hope to score a good success in behalf of the tenement babies.

A number of children who attend the Patrick Henry School will present an interesting historical play entitled "Witchcraft in Salem," also a musical program, at the Jewish Alliance Hall, 901 Carr street, on Tuesday evening, June 30.

This little company is under the management of Ben Halperin of 1314 Biddle street, who is cast as Gov. Bradford in the play, and others who will take part are Walter Wawzenik, Spiro Tsenes, Yetta Blufston, Goldie Phidulsky, Rose Markewitz, Lillie Londe, Eva Coskie, Sabina Vogel, Charles Cottler, Joe Rakliff, Dora Freedman, Rosa Hirshenhorn, Goldie Furfine, Edward Scrocky and Helen Richard.

HIS ASHES IN 6 COFFINS

Man's Remains in Burned House Swept Up to Be Buried.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 20.—A strange funeral will be held in Westport next week when six coffins filled yith ashes will be interred in the local cemetery. They are supposed to contain the earthly remains of Edward Spring, who was last seen in his home at Southport late Saturday night before the house burned to the ground.

Search failing to reveal more than a few pieces of bones relatives ordered an undertaker to sweep up all the ashes of the house and inter the mass in coffins.

Inside Facts of Standardization

How it enables Cole to produce cars on one-third the normal investment and to sell them at two-thirds less than the usual profit margin.

Come on the inside with us. Let us show you how and why, dollar for dollar and car for car, you never before bought the equal of the three new Coles. Let us give you the simple two-and-two-are-four facts which make it possible for you to buy the new Cole Ten Four at $1665, the new Cole Little Six at $1865 and the new Cole Big Six at $2465. Here is why we can build cars at a lower cost and sell them at two-thirds less the usual margin of profit.

Cole buys units from the specialists for less than they could be made in the Cole factory.

And Cole gets with those units the best ideas of the biggest and best unit-specialists, all of whom in turn have the benefit of the counsel and co-operation of the Cole staff of automobile engineers.

Cole engineering adds all these units to the dominant Cole idea, securing for you the combined saving of cost and the combined betterment of product.

The unit-specialist makes a legitimate profit and produces a perfect unit. Cole makes a legitimate profit, which does not have to be huge, because Cole eliminates the burden of carrying a vast investment.

Thus Cole can give the motorist every modern improvement instantly, because Cole draws upon every resource of the specialists who have proven themselves best in their lines.

Today the greatest Cole triumph is the ability to build three sizes of cars and have them all of the same class, selling them at prices which represent simply the difference in the cost of building.

Standardization means simplification, systematization and centralization. Aside from Cole's purchasing power it necessarily enables Cole to build at a lower cost.

To build up the Cole units in one factory for Cole exclusively would require millions of investment and tie those millions up.

Standardization permits the turning of $1,000,000 ten times in a year, where non-standardization would need $3,000,000—which could be turned but three times in the same volume of business.

Because Cole capital can be turned three times to non-standardization's once, it is plain that Cole can build cars with but 33⅓% the average investment, and consequently can sell them at 66⅔% less the usual profit margin, and still be "even."

Dollar for dollar and car for car, you never bought the like of these three new Coles—and you have just read the dollar-and-cents reason for this.

Now let the Cole itself tell you the rest of its story—the story of perfect service provided for you by Cole standardization. We will gladly demonstrate the cars.

"Why thc Standardized Car?"

Call us today for our new booklet, "Why the Standardized Car?"—which tells you in everyday language why Cole standardization produces a better car at a lower price.

The Doctor's Advice
by Dr. Lewis Baker

Miss O. M. asks: "I have pimples, oily skin, and suffer from constipation, headache, and never feel strong and well, please prescribe for me."

Answer: You should overcame constipation and cleanse the system of accumulated poisons by taking three grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur) for several weeks or more. These tablets are very beneficial, especially in hot weather, as they have a tendency to cool the blood and improve its quality.

"Poorly" writes: "Being past middle age and observing that my nervous system is in bad shape, I write for a prescription. I do not gain strength from my food, am weak, listless, forgetful, sleepless at times, tired, and unable to act the part of a strong man of health, such as I was at one time."

Answer: Get from a well-stocked pharmacy a sealed tube of 3-grain cadomene tablets, which are especially made for those needing a strong, harmless, rejuvenating tonic. Astonishing and pleasing results follow and life and hope are renewed.

"A Fat Woman" asks: "Would you please prescribe a safe reducing remedy for too much fat?"

Answer: At this season many fat people suffer greatly from the heat as you do, and to all I recommend that they reduce with 5-grain arbolene tablets, the most successful and convenient prescription I know of. Druggists supply in sealed tubes with full directions.

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood sta., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

Miss C. W. R. asks: "I have tried for two years to diet so as to increase my weight and improve the quality of my blood, but in vain. Please prescribe for me?"

Answer: Thin, scrawny bloodless people need assistance in absorbing nutrition from the food eaten, and for this particular purpose I always prescribe three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets, a most effective preparation if regularly and persistently used, as it seems to increase the red and white corpuscles of the blood thus affording health, strength and increased weight.

M. J. B. asks: "My hair is too oily and my scalp itches with dandruff and of late is combing out too much. What is a good treatment?"

Answer: Obtain plain yellow minyol from your druggist in 4 oz. jars and apply as per directions. This cleans, purifies, cools and invigorates the hair and scalp, thus stopping the death of the hair. Dandruff and itching are at once relieved. Men and women all over the country now use it regularly.

"Essex" writes: "What should I do to relieve a severe case of kidney and bladder disease? Have fever, chills, pains like rheumatism, and soreness in region of bladder."

Answer: For such symptoms as you describe, I prescribe my favorite formula under the name of balmwort tablets. This is a splendidly efficacious remedy for such abnormal conditions. Begin their use at once as per directions on each sealed tube. —ADVERTISEMENT.

Good Time Now For Blood Health

Take Full Advantage of This

When you perspire freely see that your blood is assisted by S. S. S. the famous blood purifier.

The action of S. S. S. in its rush to the surface of the body causes the process of nutrition to so prepare all these impurities in the blood that they are easily expelled. And as fast as they are removed new materials from a purified blood stream are supplied to make a clear, smooth, outer skin of fine texture.

It is in the summer time, by the aid of S. S. S. that you naturally and quickly get rid of those harmful irritants that gather to cause rheumatism, catarrh, blood risings, eczema, boils and other forms of impure blood.

In a splendidly illustrated book, "What the Mirror Tells" you will learn about the wonders of the skin and what is required to keep it healthy. But first get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store and then write for the book to The Swift Specific Co., 104 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Beware of any attempt to sell you something in place of S. S. S.

RAILROAD STATION LATEST PROJECT FOR 12TH STREET

Realty Man Suggests Building Additional Terminal Facilities on Site Near Where Adolphus Busch Memorial Hotel Will Be Erected.

TUNNEL COULD BE CUT UNDER STREET

Pennsylvania Railroad Is Only Road That Does Not Favor This Plan—President of Real Estate Exchange Approves Busch Hotel Plans.

Ideas galore are being advanced for the development of the Twelfth street block opposite the city hall and extending from Market to Walnut street, since plans were disclosed for the erection on the half block embracing the northwest and southwest corners of Twelfth and Market and Chestnut streets, of a 20-story hotel building as a memorial to Adolphus Busch at a cost of $2,500,000.

With depot plans as a feature, the proposals run the gamut of realty and building projects. August F. Herrmann, president of the John P. Herrmann Real Estate Co., in a letter to the Downtown Improvement Association, suggests the block as a site for a combination station and office or hotel building, for the Eastern railways.

The proposed station, Herrmann declares, not only would be a ten-strike for downtown St. Louis, but also would materially relieve the congestion at Union Station.

New Station Suggested.

The letter is as follows:

"The Downtown Improvement Association, Gentlemen:

"In Chicago I understand about four railroads will erect a $65,000,000 passenger station.

"Last year we tried to induce the Pennsylvania R. R. to purchase the Peper estate properties on Market, Walnut, Eleventh and Twelfth streets, on the theory that some day St. Louis, in order to hold its place as the fourth city would have to recognize the fact that it is essential to have more than one passenger station, and that when that time came, it would be the best location in the city for that purpose.

"We called their attention to the facts, that this site was but a short distance from the Mill Creek tracks, that nowhere could they hope to tunnel to the heart of the city at a lower cost, due to the fact that if they could not tunnel under Twelfth street itself, there was no good reason why they could not put their tunnel through the west side of the street, the larger portion of which is city property without any buildings that would have to be undermined.

"Again, we pointed out to them that the cost at which this property might be had was such that the improvements now on same would pay a fair return for some years to come, and again because it was one of the very few large blocks that could be acquired from one family of owners.

Near Heart of City.

"We called their attention to the fact that a combination station and office or hotel building at this point would place their passengers within easy walking distance of the heart of the city and the principal hotels, theaters, shopping and wholesale districts, and that for neighbors they would have the city hall and park, Municipal Courts, and with every indication of substantial improvements directly opposite on the old city hall site; and now we could add, the new "Adolphus."

"Unfortunately, the Pennsylvania Railroad could not see its way clear to take up the matter, and we write to you with the hope that you can see the future possibilities of this location becoming a railway station and recognize the wisdom of inducing some of the railroads now here to do what they are about to do in Chicago, i. e., spend millions, build up the city and give our home people employment.

"We consider it absolutely essential that some decided effort be made to induce the traveling public to leave the present station long enough to take a walk or ride and get at least a glimpse of the heart of the fourth city if we hope to retain that position in the nation.

"We have demonstrated to the world our ability to successfully stage a play on a stupendous scale, much to our credit. Now let us show that we can work and accomplish that which every large city throughout the country is doing to keep pace with the times.

"Respectfully submitted by
"Very truly yours,
"A. F. HERRMANN,
"President John F. Herrmann Real Estate Co., 1011 Market street."

Busch to Begin Work Soon.

Notwithstanding John H. Gundlach's declaration that the erection of the proposed hotel or memorial at this point would upset the plaza project, August A. Busch, president of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association, announced before departing for Europe Monday, that construction would begin as soon as possible after his return to St. Louis. Busch, who will be on the Continent three months, will be on the qui vive for ideas for the Twelfth street project.

While he admits that Gundlach's ideas are commendable, E. A. Bokern, president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, adhering to the proverb that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush, is an ardent supporter of the hotel project. The plaza, according to the exchange president, is a remote possibility, while the hotel improvement is virtually assured.

The architectural treatment, Bokern suggests, could be such that the hotel or memorial would embellish rather than mar the plaza.

Busch Pleased With Comment.

Bokern received the following letter in reply to one congratulating Busch on the selection of the site for the hotel:

"St. Louis, Mo., June 18, 1914.—Mr. E. A. Bokern, 1015 Chestnut street, City. Dear Sir: Replying to your letter of the 13th, addressed to Mr. August A. Busch, wish to state that Mr. Busch has left for Europe, but it gave him pleasure, before his departure from here to read your favorable comments on his recent acquisition of the Twelfth and Market street site, and to know that his opinion of the location is shared by others. Very truly yours,

"ANHEUSER-BUSCH BREWING ASSOCIATION."

Incidentally the Real Estate Bulletin is boosting the block bounded by Twelfth, Market and Eleventh streets, which is opposite the site of the proposed hotel, as a site for a grand opera house. The east half of the block is occupied by the old city hall.

The identity of the purchasers of the northwest corner of Twelfth and Chestnut streets, which was recently sold by Cornet & Zeibig, representing the Turner estate, will be made public Monday or Tuesday. The Busch interests, according to Zeibig, are not interested in this purchase, which was made, he says, as a speculation or investment.

New Lindell Theater Is Nearly Completed

The finishing touches are being given to the new Lindell Theater, which has been erected at the northwest corner of Grand avenue and Hebert street, at a cost of $100,000.

The building is of ornate design and occupies a frontage on Grand avenue of 85 feet, by a depth on Hebert street of 150 feet. An up-to-date feature is a ventilating and cooling system, which insures comfort to its patrons during the summer.

The interior is beautifully furnished and decorated. The seating capacity of the theater is 2400.

The prizes offered for the most appropriate name for the theater were won by Mrs. Walter A. Sheehan and James Clauser Jr., the awards being made by a committee of which John J. Dowling, formerly secretary of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, was chairman.

The site is in Lindell place, one of the most attractive residence parks in North St. Louis.

The building was promoted by the Ebbling-Hannibal Real Estate Co., in conjunction with Hagerman-Fitzsimmons Real Estate Co., which has erected some of the finest theaters in St. Louis, including the Park, at Hamilton and Delmar, and the Shenandoah, at Grand and Shenandoah avenues.

ST. LOUISANS TO HELP OPEN NEW ILLINOIS TOWN

Roger Sullivan to Be Among Speakers at "Coalectric City."

St. Louisans who go on the excursion to Kincaid, Ill., next Saturday, will take part in the opening of that community, known as the "Coalectric City," for business. A. H. Frederick, a former president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, is in charge of arrangements. Refreshments will be provided, and the Illinois Watch Co. band will play. The speakers will include Rodger Sullivan, representatives of labor organizations, and officials of the Middle West Utilities Co., and of the Peabody Coal Co., the two chief corporations thus far interested in Kincaid. A. R. Schollmeyer, formerly president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, will act as auctioneer.

Kincaid, "The Coalectric City," so called from its location where coal and electricity combine to make unusually favorable conditions for the creation of an important industrial center, is situated in the heart of the rich agricultural and coal mining district of Central Illinois, about 25 miles from Springfield, the State capital, and seven miles from Taylorville, the county seat of Christian County.

Far-sighted business men have realized the opportunity for profitable investment and with ample capital are developing here what promises to be one of the most important industrial centers of Central Illinois. The natural advantages of location have been availed of to the fullest extent and the best talent in town planning and development of modern industrial communities has been employed in the planning and construction of an up-to-date city with all modern improvements.

Books describing Kincaid are being distributed by Frederick.

Six Modern Bungalows Built Near Shaw's Garden

Six bunglows at 4961 to 4965 Columbia avenue are features of this section of the city. The bungalows, four of which have been sold, were erected by Sam Koplar, one of the best known and most resourceful builders in the city.

Each building comprises six rooms and reception hall and has hardwood floors. A hot water heating apparatus, copper gutters and spouts and marble sinks and sills are among the advantages. All four walls are of stock brick.

M. A. A. HAS CHOICE OF 3 DOWNTOWN BUILDING SITES

Franklin Bank Offers to Put Up Structure on Site of Old Boatman's Bank.

The St. Louis realty market is distinguished by larger transactions in the business as well as in the quasi-business districts of the city. Developments are of a charater that foreshadow a stronger movement in both centers, according to operators.

Building plans being submitted for the Missouri Athletic Association are monopolizing the attention of downtown property holders. There are now proposals contemplating the erection for the association of large structures at the northwest corner of Fourth street and Washington avenue, the northeast corner of Twelfth and Locust street and the southeast corner of Eighth and Pine streets.

The association is considering plans for an eight or nine story building at the northwest corner of Fourth street and Washington avenue, the site of the Boatmen's Bank Building, which was destroyed by fire. The Franklin Bank, according to this deal, is to occupy half of the ground floor of the building.

Large amounts, including $100,000 by A. L. Shapleigh and others, have been pledged for this project, which has at its command, it is understood, the resources of the Downtown Improvement Association.

The Franklin Bank, of which George T. Riddle is president, and which has had plans for a new building for a long time, offered the Boatmen's Bank, the owner of the site, for 50 feet of the corner, $180,000. President Riddle preferred, however, not to divide the site, which embraces a quarter of a block, and which is considered one of the most eligible sites in the business district for a large caliber investment.

The site, which is held at $300,000, is to be taken under a 99-year lease at this valuation on a 4 per cent basis if the deal goes through.

As the Boatmen's Bank has already signed a lease for quarters in the new Monward Building, at the northeast corner of Broadway and Olive street, the chances of its occupying space in the proposed building are negligible unless another tenant is discovered for the former.

Offers $200,000 Toward Building.

So eager is W. K. Bixby to land the M. A. A. at the northeast corner of Twelfth and Locust street, of which he is the owner, he has offered to advance $200,000 towards the erection of a building conforming with his ideas, according to realty circles. This site includes a quarter of a block, which is opposite the Shubert Theater and the Jefferson Hotel, and at the gates of the Washington avenue and Locust street wholesale district.

W. J. Holbrook, president of the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Co., is working might and main to corral the organization for this site.

A strong contingent of the membership of the M. A. A. is attracted by Bixby's offer and site, including Tom Grace and Tom Watts, both virile members of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange.

The deal contemplating the anchoring of the M. A. A. project at the southeast corner of Eighth and Pine streets is being promoted by Isaac T. Cook, who promoted the Frisco Building in St. Louis and skyscrapers in Seattle and in Portland.

The association members, however, are still discussing the proposition of Thomas Wright, vice-president of the Third National Bank, which contemplates the consolidation of the Missouri Athletic Association, Mercantile Club and the Business Men's League and the erection on the site of the Mercantile Club Building, corner of Seventh and Locust streets, of a 20-story building.

The Mutual Stores Co. has completed negotiations through Ben Altheimer Jr. by which it will occupy the southwest corner of Broadway and Franklin avenue, owned by the Knox estate, a client of Cornet & Zeibig's, for a term of 20 years. A five-story structure, having a frontage of 185 feet by a depth of 130 feet, occupies this corner, which was formerly the home of Schaper Bros.

The Mutual Stores Co. conducts a general department store, leasing space to tenants who will operate independently under the management of the company.

Transactions in the St. Louis realty market were of substantial proportions during the week, swelling the volume of operations in several sections of the city.

Building Sells for $110,000.

An uptown feature was the sale by the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. of the Olivia Building, at the northwest corner of Grand avenue and Windsor place, to Nathan Frank, for $110,000. The grantor in the sale was Henry L. Brinson. The building, which is a four-story office structure, occupying 46x308 feet, is opposite the Odeon. Frank, it is understood, represents wealthy clients, who are investing large sums in the rapidly developing centers of St. Louis.

A leading sale in the West End was that of 70 feet on the south side of Kingsbury place, west of DeBaliviere, to the Wagner Construction Co., represented by J. I. Epstein, which will erect a three-story apartment building of six suites of four and five rooms. The sale was made by the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Co., on behalf of the Shurtleff College of Alton, which recently acquired a large tract in this locality. The apartments will be high-class, with sun parlors as features. Many of the handsomest apartment buildings in this section have been built by J. I. Epstein, who has been a factor in the upbuilding of Washington Heights.

Monroe Construction Co. to Build Houses at Berthold Avenue and Hereford Street.

The Monroe Construction Co. soon will begin the construction of 16 five-room bungalows at the southwest corner of Berthold avenue and Hereford street, in the Boulevard and Park subdivision.

The subdivision, which is situated at the southwest corner of Forsythe boulevard and Pennsylvania avenue, formerly was known as Washington University Place. The Meckel Realty & Investment Co., its owner, recently tried to dispose of it by a night auction sale at Delmar Garden.

The bungalows will occupy 16 lots. 30x120 feet, which have been acquired through the Goodnow Real Estate & Investment Co. at a cost of $22 a front foot.

The specifications include all the accessories of the type of construction. Each bungalow will be equipped for steam heat. The interiors will be finished in hardwood throughout, while a porch around the front and sides of the buildings and a sun parlar will be features.

One of the bungalows has been sold by the Goodnow company to Joseph L. Chewning for $3500.

Options for other places have been taken by several prospective purchasers, the attention claimed by the projects being unprecedented, according to the Goodnow Realty & Investment Co.

The subdivision, which is situated diagonally opposite the Washington University, is surrounded by some of the most attractive residential parks adjoining the city, including Brentmoor, Forest Ridge, Forsyth Place and Maryland Terrace. The demand for the lots insures its quick disposition.

John S. Hemphill is president of the Monroe company.

The deal, whereby the building is to be erected, was arranged by John H. Bogue, real estate agent and promoter.

RUSH OF BUYERS FOR SOUTHAMPTON LOTS CONTINUES

More Than Fifty Homes of Better Class Have Been Erected There This Year.

Southampton is the feature of the subdivision movement in South St. Louis. A corps of salesmen, headed by Roscoe C. Buchener, is kept busy daily and Sunday with the rush of buyers. As fast as lots are sold houses are started, most of them of a character that will enhance the value of the subdivision.

More than 100 homes of the better kind were erected in the subdivision last year, while half that number has gone up this year.

While Southampton has all the surface and municipal improvements of the high-priced subdivisions, its lots are being disposed of at popular prices and on the installment plan. It is owned by a wealthy syndicate, which has instructed the Mercantile Trust Co. to convert it into cash.

The property, which is located on South King's highway, is reached by the Southampton cars.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

STOCK MARKET IGNORES ALL BAD NEWS AND SEEKS HIGHER RANGE OF VALUES

LONDON LIST IS QUIET

Best Opinion Is That Gold Exports From America Are About Over.

NEW YORK, June 20.

So far as transactions are concerned, the stock market continues neglected. Nevertheless the general tone exhibits a healthy tendency. Prices have now undergone a very slow and gradual advance of about 3 to 4 points, which naturally induces some realizing by timid holders; but apart from desultory selling of this sort there is practically no offering of stocks. The market appears to be thoroughly sold out. Liquidation has been prolonged and thorough; so that weak spots have been practically eliminated.

Psychologically, to use an overworked expression, the situation is improving. There is less apprehension and more confidence than a month ago. The Clayton anti-trust bill, is likely to pass, but in a materially modified form before it emerges from the Senate. Then uncertainty growing out of law making will disappear and business will have a chance to adjust itself to known conditions. Congress, after a phenomenally long period of activity, is beginning to be really anxious for adjournment.

Hot weather and the vacation period are fast approaching. The past two summers have been exceedingly strenuous ones in Washington; and the administration, having accomplished far more than was expected in the direction of tariff, banking and anti-trust reforms, can afford to rest, satisfied on its record of fulfilled promises.

Reports are current that the Interstate Commission will shortly render its decision, and that the roads will be allowed some concessions. The recent Supreme Court decisions were also of a satisfactory nature; the most important being that which asserts the supremacy of national control of interstate commerce rates as against state control.

Money Market Is Easy.

Another element which has aided confidence is the prevailing ease in money. No better business tonic can be found than an abundance of cheap money available to those having good credit. It is possible, however, that the period of abnormally cheap money is nearing an end.

Europe has already taken over $50,000,000 of gold from this country since January, and the outward movement has not yet ended. Apparently foreign demands are still unsatisfied, and low money rates here facilitate withdrawals. Moreover, our merchandise imports continue to increase while exports diminish; and since Europe shows no present disposition to buy our securities, the balance against us thus created can only be settled by gold shipment.

Fortunately we have an ample supply of the precious metal, which is always being augmented by home production, and the outward movement as a whole has by no means been injurious and should cause no uneasiness; especially as it will materially help the situation abroad. Furthermore, the early opening of the reserve banks will facilitate credit operations and make us less dependent upon our gold supply.

Very shortly crop demands will begin to assert themselves, and should the volume of business increase, as seems not unlikely, the demand for money will expand and rates may somewhat harden. No stringency, however, is in sight, and for the time being nothing further is anticipated than a check upon exceptional ease.

Business Outlook Brighter.

The general business outlook is more promising. Supplies of merchandise of nearly all kinds are unquestionably light. With the recovery of confidence and with the promise of a good harvest, increased activity is only a matter of a few weeks. It must be remembered that industrial production has been abnormally restrained for several months.

The steel trade, for instance, has been running for weeks on 60 per cent of capacity; largely because of enforced railroad retrenchment which cannot be indefinitely prolonged. The railroads will soon be compelled to enter the market more freely, and with the assurance of good crops and better rates will undoubtedly place some liberal equipment orders.

In the textile trades there is also a better feeling. Both cotton goods and woolens are comparatively scarce and exceedingly strong. Interior distributers report a good demand for nearly all classes of fabrics.

Importations of foreign goods are coming in more freely; but the percentage of these compared with the nation's product as a whole, is not large enough to have any serious effect.

The crop outlook continues most gratifying. There was a slight drop during May in the condition of wheat, but the Government report still indicates a yield of about 900,000,000 bushels, which is much the largest yield ever recorded. Early threshing reports of winter wheat show an unusually large yield per acre. Making liberal allowances for probable deterioration in spring wheat, the wheat harvest is as certain as can be to prove large and a most important stimulating influence.

Reports concerning the cotton crop are not entirely satisfactory, but the outlook for corn is favorable and nearly all the important fruit crops show a condition above the average.

RISE IN CONSOLS A FEATURE IN LONDON

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, June 20.—"Your market's very large gold exports of the fortnight past have been rapidly cancelling your obligations on international exchange, and to this is now added the probability that Europe will be a heavy purchaser of your new wheat as it comes to market. A correspondent of the London Times, estimates that before the year is over, you may import gold in as large a sum as 30,000,000 pounds sterling, but this is discredited as premature. At any rate, it ignores the possible influence of your new bank system in keeping the American money market easy, and releasing a large part of the cash now held under legal requirement in your bank reserves.

"It is, however, admitted that the much lower foreign exchange rates, fixed by this week's decline at New York, make gold shipments now no longer profitable. If further moderate exports are made, they will represent merely unfulfilled contracts of the exporting bankers with the Bank of France, and for this the impending flotation of the large French Government loan is probably the chief immediate occasion.

"As that matter stands the plan is for a total issue of 72,000,000 pounds sterling, but authority has as yet been granted by the legislative body for only $2,000,000 pounds sterling. This is to be issued immediately at a 4 per cent rate and within a term of 25 years. French financial authorities are convinced that it will succeed in drawing out the hoarded gold from French stockings, and that over subscriptions to the loan will replenish the French money market and begin the process of restoring normal conditions at Paris.

"If this turns out to be true; if the Brazilian loan is satisfactorily arranged, and if present hopes regarding Ulster are fulfilled, it is probable that July and August will be favorable months on the Stock Exchange—though activity will still be restrained by the numerous impending capital issues. It will be noticed that this spirit of optimism is mainly based on numerous 'ifs.'

"This week's recovery on our Stock Exchange, notably in consols, is due to belief in continued easy money, based on your recent gold exports to London, as well as Paris, on the 3,200,000 pounds sterling increase in the Bank of England's reserve in the fortnight past, on Continental Europe's large accumulation of gold, and on the relaxing demands of trade; also on renewed hopes of favorable developments in Ulster, on the coming flotation of the French loan, and on the conclusion of negotiations regarding Brazil's affairs.

"As yet, however, the shrewdest quarters only partially indorse these hopeful expectations, even regarding money rates; for Russia has already resumed its purchases of gold. As for your markets, their oversold condition is recognized, but it occasions only hesitating optimism, because of the numerous political problems which still surround the American situation."

COTTON IN FIELD GAINS STRENGTH IN THE SUNSHINE

Texas and Oklahoma Plants Are Much Improved and Eastern States Are Prospering.

Rains have fallen over a large portion of Texas during the week and unless continued too long, the moisture will be of benefit to cotton because it will correct, to some extent, the baking of the surface of the earth and the choking of the plant. Splendid progress has been made in farm work and the fields are beginning to show marked improvement, but it is very necessary for the plant to have timely showers along with intervals of sunshine and constant cultivation.

The axiom that a dry May makes a healthy cotton plant is not ill-founded, for in that period just following "chopping out" too much rain and surface moisture induces lateral roots and the tap root does not develop. When there is not a lengthy tap root, the drouth that almost invariably comes in August finds all roots near the surface and the plant unable to resist heat and drouth.

The condition in Texas now is such that a relapse may come; the invalid plants have begun to gather strength but are not out of danger. The plants are ill-nourished. The weather, just at the moment, is very favorable. Oklahoma is enjoying good weather, too, and is making rapid gain. Arkansas, although some rains have fallen, needs much more moisture, and the plant is suffering and going backward. Louisiana has received much-needed rain.

Eastern States Prospering.

Mississippi, Alabama and the Carolinas, all report that beneficial and timely rains have fallen and relieved to a great extent the dry conditions amounting to drouth in some localities. Some complaint is made the rains are not general enough, but in the main they have been sufficient. In all of these states conditions are far ahead of those ruling west of the Mississippi. Cultivation has been very thorough and the early planted cotton is making rapid strides. The late planting is not up to good stands but is making fair headway since the rains.

In Texas and Oklahoma, a reduction of acreage by reason of abandoned fields seems inevitable. It surely would be more economical for the farmer to concentrate his efforts on his best cotton and abandon the poorer fields rather than to attempt cultivation of full acreage at this late date. The Government weekly weather report speaks of some replanting being done. It would be surprising if this late planted cotton should mature.

Prices seem to wait on new developments in the fields and from the consumers' end. Estimates of the consumption of cotton made at the beginning of the current season were not extreme, and it seems certain that the consumption of American cotton will reach 15,000,000 bales. Except for a shortage in the supply, there is no reason to expect a smaller consumption next season. In a big way the consumption of cotton will increase as a natural result of the increase of population.

Dry Goods Export Trade Dead.

In the dry goods markets the reports indicate that the export trade is dead, but there are no accumulated stocks of dry goods in this country, and our domestic mills have gone on turning out goods at a great rate all season long. For this reason it seems fair to assume that they may expect domestic trade to take their output without difficulty. The New York Commercial says:

"The Western merchant has been busily engaged in studying crop conditions in his section of the country, and is now making up his mind that crops are going to be large. This means that the buying power of the Western sections of the country will be strong, and no amount of talk on the part of political faction can wipe out the buying power of the farming element. Merchants are also aware of the fact that overconservatism in covering forward needs will be just as much to their disadvantage as lack of conservatism."

The lack of export business seems to be mainly due to our mills running into a competition with cheap and inferior European made goods. These are made from low grades, and, from the cotton producer's standpoint, and from the standpoint of price, these low grade cottons might as well be taken by European as domestic mills. Price making is a curious thing, and at times independent of real conditions.

At present the markets for spot cotton are changing quotation very little, in most markets, not at all. Some decline has occurred in the future markets, and there are many signs of manipulation, straddling, etc., the relative differences between months changing materially every day.

The week-end figures show world's spinners' takings of all kinds nearly 60,000 bales more than for the same week last year, but takings of American some 7000 bales less than for the same week last year. Takings of American last week were 54,000 bales less than for last week. The intosight movement continues comparatively large, and at the present rate the total movement this year will be well above the 14,750,000 mark.

Good rains during the latter part of the previous week, checking the drouth and bettering pastures, caused a big slump in cattle receipts, or rather caused them to assume more normal proportions, as the record run of the previous week was clearly abnormal. The aggregate of steers was moderate at all times, but carried a good proportion of choice to prime grades, thereby proving that a good many of the medium cattle were forced out the previous week. Prices were on the upturn and it was the consensus of opinion that fully as large an advance was scored the past week as there was a decline the preceding period. Choice beeves closed 15@25c higher and medium grades 25@35c higher. Heavy steers topped for the week at $9.20.

Supply of butcher cattle was moderate at all stages of the week and during the latter part of the period carried a good many prime grades. Outside buying support and the strength from this source was the feature of the week. Prices advanced rapidly and buyers scrambled over one another in an endeavor to get what they needed before the small offering gave out. Strictly prime heifers closed 10@15c higher, good to choice kinds 25@35c higher and medium grades 35@50c higher. Several loads of heifers sold for $9.

Cows Advance Sharply.

Cows were in moderate supply at all times and with a strong demand market was active and prices almost back at the high time a week ago. Bulk of the cows were 35@50c higher.

Bulls also scored a nice advance, prices in most cases looking 25@35c higher than the close of the previous week.

Vealers opened strong and advanced a quarter, but later on lost the gain and closed steady. Top was $10.50 early, but later only $10.25.

Stockers and feeders found a much better demand and supply was more suitable to the demand. Most of the stock and feeding cattle sold 25@35c higher and were strong at the advance. Improvement in pasturage conditions and a better demand from the country were mainly responsible for the gains.

Receipts in the quarantine division were exceptionally moderate and practically all from Texas. There was a keen demand for the steers each day. Order buyers offered a good competition with packers, and market was very much benefited and improved. Most of the Texas steers closed a flat quarter higher than last week. Fed steers sold for $8@8.35 and most of the grassers went at $6.90@7.65. No change was evident in the trade in canners, as almost a nominal supply of them was received. There was a good demand for everything along this line that was offered.

Hogs Up, Then Down.

Only a moderate supply of hogs was received but there was a good lot of them that were strictly good hogs of the right weight—that is they weighed 180 to 240 pounds and there was also some good heavier hogs on sale. Pigs and lights run much the same as usual, there being a good many that were not extra good. They came from the southern part of Missouri.

The market was on the advance the fore part of the week, but backed up a little the middle and latter part. The advance amounted to around 15c to 20c, but most of it got away before the end of the week. The top of the market ranged between $8.25 and $8.47½ all week, while the bulk of the hogs sold at $8.15 @8.35, which shows that prices did not vary a great deal.

Most of the shipping and butcher hogs sold at $8.20 and up, while the mixed and packers went at $8@8.35; rough packers, $7.65@7.90; best grade of lights under 65 pounds, $8@8.25; fair, $7.50@8.00; best pigs weighing less than 125 pounds, $7.50 @8.00; fair grades, $7@7.50 and the poor kinds, $6.25@6.90. It was a pretty dull trade for the common kind of pigs and lights.

Good Lambs Stronger.

Sheep did not show any material change during the entire week from the close of the previous week with the exception that the good lambs were on a slightly higher basis the middle and latter part of the week, and a demand developed for good breeding ewes. Tennessee furnished a good number of lambs, but Kentucky, Illinois and Missouri also sent in good liberal numbers.

Best fat lambs sold at $9.25@9.55, those at the top of the market coming from Tennessee, but lambs from Illinois and Kentucky sold as high as $9.50 and from Missouri as high as $9.40. A good medium class of lambs sold at $8.50@9.15, fair kinds $8@8.40, and the culls and others that were not very good went at $6.50 @7.75. Clipped lambs were pretty scarce and from now on but few will be received.

Best handy weight sheep went to the slaughterers at $4.75@5, big heavy ewes $4@4.40, good breeding ewes sold at $5@5.25, good stockers and choppers $3.50@4.25, fair stockers $2.50@3.25 and bucks $3.50.

Horses Irregular, Mules Dull.

The trade in horses was carried on on much the same basis as the previous week. There was a good active trade in Eastern classes, but Southern types were slow sellers. Eastern purchasers took liberal supplies at steady figures, but the Southern buyers were a bit slow, and the animals that generally went to this section did not find outlet, and the situation was on a dull, draggy basis. Chunks and drafters were the kinds that Eastern buyers were on the market for, and these sold well, and values were in proportion to the quality of the offering.

The mule trade suffered about the same adverse conditions, and a very poor trade was established on all kinds. The best sellers were the good quality kinds of miners and big mules, and these found fair sales, but not as high as they might have sold.

Wheat broke sharply in the week-end session and closed the trading at the lowest level touched on the crop. All the professional operators were on the bear side.

The selling was based entirely on reports from the winter wheat harvest section, which indicate that the harvest has matured under the favorable crop conditions recently estimated by the Government, and which suggest, including the spring wheat yield, a total crop of 900,000,000 bu, a record-breaker on top of a record crop last year.

Aside from the winter wheat outlook, the official reports on spring wheat were highly favorable, and there is every promise that the Northwest will raise a crop many millions of bushels above last year. Canada also reports highly favorable weather conditions, and if the Dominion crop goes through the ultimate yield will be one that will temporarily stagger crop statisticians.

From the standpoint of supplies the outlook is not so bearish. Official reports indicate that France will need to import 96,000,000 bu, and most of this inquiry should come from the United States, as prices have been driven to an export basis, and all that is needed to start the outside buying is something that suggests to foreigners that the bottom of the decline has been reached. At the moment this feature is being lost sight of by the trade, but the export situation will give the bears many an anxious day before December rolls around.

The European wheat visible this week amounts to 69,728,000 bu, against 73,704,000 last week, showing a decrease of 3,976,000 for the week. Last week there was an increase of 3,204,000 bu, and last year a decrease of 1,900,000, when the total amounted to 87,700,000 bu.

Broomhall's foreign crop summary said: "United Kingdom—The weather is fine and warm. Wheat is backward, but spring wheat has improved with recent rains.

"France—The outlook for wheat is distinctly unfavorable; oats good.

"Germany—The outlook for wheat on the whole is good, and prospects point to a medium yield of rye. Foreign demand less active.

"Russia—Supplies in the South are smaller, but arrivals at Baltic ports continue liberal.

"Roumania—There has been some improvement in crop prospects, mainly for corn.

"Hungary—An official report states that wheat has improved, while unofficial reports say that the improvement, if any, has been very small.

"Italy—Crop accounts are less favorable; many reports are coming to hand as to lodging.

"Australia—Crop advices are being confirmed by our agent that wheat will show a yield under that of last year.

"India—Offers are being pressed for sale."

Bradstreet's detailed:

Corn Crop Is Good.

Milling and Grain News said: "Beneficial moisture over a wide area of the corn belt has temporarily removed fear of drouth damage and the crop is making good progress, except in minor areas in Missouri. Harvesting of winter wheat will be general in the Southwest this week, and nothing has developed to lower the recent high crop promise. The yield per acre may be under highest estimates, however, owing to the forced growth of the plant during the recent high temperatures. Spring wheat continues to advance under practically perfect weather conditions and the recent high averages have been maintained, if not raised slightly. Oats have been benefited by better weather, except in sections of Missouri and Southern Illinois."

The domestic wheat visible decreased 4,125,000 bu for the week; corn increased 2,082,000 bu; oats decreased 527,000 bu.

The visible shows:

Corn	7,641,000	5,559,000	7,332,000
Oats	7,193,000	7,720,000	8,456,000

Barley	1,072,000	2,004,000	2,634,000

Although Chicago only received about two-thirds as much corn during the first two weeks of June this year as in the same period last year, the total primary receipts at all markets were about the same, 15,554,000 bu this year and 15,417,000 last year. The corn continued to go to the outside markets on account of the unusual demands for distribution created by the crop failure last year. While the primary receipts for the past two weeks total as large as last year, the increase in the visible supply during the same two weeks was only [illegible] the increase this year out of equal receipts is 1,500,000 bu less than the increase last year.

Floating quantities wheat and flour this week were 42,728,000 bu; last week, 45,224,000; last year, 51,184,000; decrease, 2,496,000. Corn this week, 15,836,000; last week, 14,119,000; last year, 28,875,000; increase, 1,717,000. Last year the wheat decreased 5,664,000 bu and corn increased 1,496,000.

France Needs Wheat.

Broomhall cabled: "In France crop advices are unfavorable over a large area. Supplies of wheat are inadequate and it is generally thought that importation of at least 96,000,000 bu will be necessary during the next season. Our agent supplements this report with the assertion that this estimate of requirements is absurd, but admits from personal investigation that the crop is not large, and even if heads fill well, prospects point to a small yield."

GERMS IN WATER, 6 SPRINGS IN CITY PARKS ARE CLOSED

OTHERS BEING TESTED

Colon Bacillus Found After Typhoid Patients Tell of Drinking Spring Water.

Two springs in Forest Park, one of them the familiar Wells Spring, near the Wabash tracks, to which numbers of persons have made daily pilgrimages with bottles and jugs in quest of fresh water, three springs in Tower Grove Park, eight in Bellefontaine Cemetery and one in O'Fallon Park are closed to the public under condemnation of the Board of Health.

This was yesterday's summary of results arising from statements made by three typhoid patients at the city hospital that they had drunk water from the Wells spring and from bacteriological tests showing that all of the springs in question are tainted with the colon bacillus.

This germ, although causing no definite disease, so far as science now knows is, like the typhoid germ, an intestinal bacillus, and its presence is regarded as indicating the probable presence of the typhoid germ. Whenever water is found to contain the colon bacillus, it is considered contamination, with the probability that the typhoid bacillus is also present. The detection of the latter germ in water is a difficult test, so that the colon germ is often used as an indicator.

Tests Are Directed.

Owing to the purity of the city water, which is tested twice a week by a member of the City Chemist's staff, typhoid cases are rare in St. Louis. When one appears, the strictest questions are asked as to where the patient has drunk water or milk, obtained ice or gone swimming. The suspicions of the Board of Health were aroused when the city hospital patients declared they had drunk from Wells spring, and tests of all springs, wells and cisterns in the city were directed to be made by the City Chemist and City Bacteriologist.

In Forest Park, the Wells Spring and the Jahn Spring, near the Jahn Monument at the foot of Art Hill, were found to contain the colon bacillus. On the recommendation of Assistant Health Commissioner Jordan to Park Commissioner Davis, they were ordered closed and signs to that effect were posted.

In Tower Grove Park three springs, Nos. 1, 2 and 8, were declared to be similary infected, and were closed by the Tower Grove Board of Commissioners. There are five other springs in this park. Two have temporarily run dry, and the others were pronounced free from impurities. These, with the one condemned in O'Fallon Park, account for all the springs in the public parks of the city.

Other Tests Under Way.

An examination of the water of the springs in Bellefontaine Cemetery, eight in number, disclosed all were polluted with the colon bacillus. A test of the spring water in Calvary Cemetery and all the other cemeteries in the city is now under way. The Board of Health has condemned scores of private wells and cisterns.

Dr. Jordan last night said the Wells Spring was doubtless tainted through its proximity to the River des Peres, which bears quantities of sewage through the heart of Forest Park.

"I advise," he stated, "that no one in the city drink spring or well water. In all large cities containing sewage pipes there is always leakage through the soil. The only safe water is tap water, which is under constant surveillance by the City Chemist's office."

There is at present no more than the usual number of typhoid cases in the city, Dr. Jordan said. He added that the authorities should not wait until an epidemic has broken out before taking steps to prevent it.

JURY TO INVESTIGATE GIRL'S DEATH IN HOSPITAL

Coroner Orders Inquest After Surgeon Tells Why He Refused a Certificate.

An investigation into the death Friday at the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium of Miss Susan Capps, 25 years old, daughter of Mrs. John R. Capps, an invalid widow, of 4341 West Pine boulevard, resulted yesterday in Coroner Padberg ordering an inquest for tomorrow.

The investigation was begun by the Coroner and the police when Dr. Oney C. Raines refused to issue a death certificate. Dr. Raines told the police Miss Capps came to him for treatment on June 11, and that he found her suffering from blood-poisoning as the result of an operation. He had the young woman sent to the Sanitarium. Dr. Raines said he knew the physician who is said to have operated on the young woman, but said he would disclose it only to the Circuit Attorney.

At Miss Capps' home it was said she had been ill three weeks and had undergone an operation for abscess. Miss Capps is survived by her mother, five sisters and a brother.

Eight Subscriptions Received in Two Days by Committee Headed by E. A. Faust.

Announcement was made yesterday by Guy Golterman, promoter of the enterprise, that $80,000 has been subscribed in two days toward the enection of a $350,000 opera house in St. Louis, to be the third largest in the United States, and that in addition steps will be taken by Edward A. Faust to revive the $50,000 offer for the purpose made shortly before his death by Adolphus Busch.

The sum of $10,000 each has been pledged by the members of the Opera House Founders' Organization Committee, consisting of Edward A. Faust, chairman; George W. Simmons, John Fowler, Charles A. Stix and Daniel G. Taylor. Additional subscriptions of $10,000 each were received from Mrs. Adolphus Busch, Claude Kilpatrick and Charles Wiggins.

In accepting the chairmanship of the committee, Faust stated that he would try to bring about the resuscitation of the $50,000 offer toward the erection of an opera house which was made by his father-in-law, Adolphus Busch, and which was contingent upon the raising of a similar sum and dependent upon a time limit which already has expired.

The original plan to build a combination opera house and hotel has been abandoned in view of the fact that a 20-story hotel is to be erected on Twelfth and Market streets, opposite the city hall, by August A. Busch. The proposed opera house is to be without stores, offices or other commercial features, and is to be devoted exclusively to opera, drama and music.

A horseshoe tier of 30 boxes, to be sold at $10,000 each to 30 wealthy families in return for stock in the opera house corporation, is relied upon to finance the building operations. The holders of the boxes, each of which will seat six persons, will have the privilege of their prior occupation on the payment of the current rate for tickets.

Plans have been made tentatively for a structure 220 feet long, 125 feet wide and 80 feet high, containing 1200 seats on the orchestra floor, 900 in each of two balconies, and a tier of 30 boxes—or 3180 seats in all. This capacity would be surpassed only by the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, with 3232 seats, and by the Metropolitan Opera House in Philadelphia, with 3560 seats. It would about equal the capacity of the Music Hall in the old Exposition Building.

The idea of placing the great proportion of the financial burden upon the box holders is modeled after the organization of the Metropolitan Opera and Real Estate Co. in New York more than 30 years ago. The boxes of the famous "Horseshoe Tier" were sold for $30,000 each, and now command large premiums.

It is expected to have the details of the enterprise worked out by next fall, when Otto Kahn, chairman of the directorate of the Metropolitan Opera Co., is to visit St. Louis as Faust's guest.

COLLISION THROWS GIRL THROUGH WINDSHIELD

House Guest of Mrs. Frank Steele of Edwardsville Seriously Injured.

Miss Lucille B. Royston, 16 years old, of Tottensburg, Mo., a house guest of Mrs. Frank Steele at Edwardsville, was seriously injured yesterday when a touring car collided with a runabout in which she was riding, throwing her through the windshield.

With August and Margaret Mead of Litchfield, Ill., and Mead Steele, Miss Royston was riding down High street in Edwardsville when H. P. S. Smith rounded a corner with his touring car. The cars, going slowly, collided, partly wrecking both machines and throwing the occupants of the runabout to the ground.

Miss Royston, after being hurled through the windshield, was unconscious for a time. Physicians said she was suffering from bruises and cuts and nervous shock, but would recover. The others were only bruised.

COMMISSION IN FAVOR OF MERGING APPELLATE COURTS

Body Passes Resolution for Submission of Matter to Vote in November.

The first important step in the movement for a simplification and reform of judicial procedure in Missouri was taken yesterday when the Court Commission, recently appointed by Gov. Major, passed a resolution providing for the submission in November of a proposed State constitutional amendment giving the Legislature power to merge the State's three courts of appeal, their Judges and jurisdiction with the State Supreme Court.

The commission met in the Court of Appeals room in the Pierce Building, adopting the resolution after suggestions and discussions by Judges George D. Reynolds, Albert D. Nortoni and William H. Allen of the Court of Appeals and several lawyers.

In order to have the proposed amendment submitted to a vote in November, it would be necessary to circulate initiative petitions and obtain signatures of 5 per cent of the bonafide voters in 12 of the 16 congressional districts. This would call for about 35,000 signers. The petitions would have to be filed by July 3.

Members of the commission said Gov. Major would issue a proclamation Monday, setting aside a certain day and asking that on that date voters make it a point to sign a petition for the submission of the proposed amendment.

The proposed amendment also provides that the term of an incumbent Judge shall not be affected by the proposed merger and that, if necessary, the Supreme Court may require Circuit Judges to sit as Supreme Judges.

A further amendment is recommended in the resolution, providing that the Supreme Court, en banc, or the Courts of Appeal, shall deliver written opinions in civil and misdemeanor causes only where a question of law is presented not previously settled by the Court, where the question presented is one of public interest or relates to the construction of the Constitution, where the Court, en banc, direct a written opinion, or where the Court overrules, modifies or reverses a judgment.

The resolution also recommends an amendment providing that the Supreme Court may, by general rule, establish, modify and amend the procedure and practice in the court, and may, if authorized by the Legislature, prescribe general rules of practice and forms of procedure in inferior courts of record.

The commission will resume its sessions at Kansas City Friday and at St. Joseph Saturday.

Members Expected to Take an Additional $200,000 and Insure New Home.

William Connett, chairman of the building and location committee of the Missouri Athletic Association, formerly the Missouri Athletic Club, said yesterday $150,000 bonds for the erection of a new clubhouse have been subscribed for by the members, and that as soon as the members take $200,000 of the bonds, the funds for the erection of a $600,000 club building will be assured.

The bonds are issued in $1090 denominations, and each of the 1100 resident members must take one bond. Many have taken more.

The committee on building and location, Connett said, has reported the details of three possible sites for the new building. The three sites under consideration are the old M. A. C. or Boatmen's Bank site at Fourth street and Washington avenue, the Stratford Hotel site at Eighth and Pine streets, and the northeast corner of Twelfth and Locust streets.

BOY, 8, IN CROWD IS PUSHED UNDER CAR AND KILLED

Izah J. Coles in Following Parade Accidentally Is Shoved Beneath Wheels.

A verdict of accidental death was returned by a Coroner's jury investigating the death of Izah J. Coles, 8 years old, son of George E. Coles, a dairyman, 1460 Summit avenue, East St. Louis, who was fatally injured by a street car at noon yesterday.

Izah was run down by an eastbound Belleville car at State street and Columbia place, while following a circus parade. Both legs were amputated at the knee, and he died in St. Mary's Hospital at 1:45 p. m.

The street car was following the parade closely, the motorman endeavoring to get through the crowd. A spectator jostled the boy, who fell beneath the wheels. The motorman did not see the boy until the spectators called to him to stop.

JUNE 21 THOUGHT.

We live in deeds, not years;
In thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial;
We should count time by heart throbs.
He most lives,
Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best.

"IF ADVERTISING WILL NOT SELL THAT REAL ESTATE, IT CAN'T BE SOLD."

Whether literally true or not, this assertion is measurably true. For good advertising always has found buyers for good real estate—is doing it today, and will do it tomorrow. Advertising does not make real estate valuable or desirable. It simply brings its value and desirability to the notice of prospective buyers. Can you afford to have your property listings left out of the Post-Dispatch Big House, Home and Real Estate Directory?

ONCE IN A WHILE PROSPERITY "SELLS ITSELF."

The accident of a strategic location, or of a sudden specific demand for a particular bit of real estate, sometimes obviates the need of advertising. In the same way "good fortune" comes to people—inheritances, unexpected increases in stock or property values. But just the average person must WORK, rather than wait for a lucky thing to happen, so must the average property owner ADVERTISE if he would sell his property, and most persons need only the suggestion to keep their offers listed in the Post-Dispatch Big House, Home and Real Estate Guide.

IT PAYS TO SECURE A TENANT WHO PAYS

The uncertain sort of tenant is easy to find. He is always [illegible] of the window sign of "To-let." He is easy to please. Even a rather high rental does not frighten him away.

But the STAY-AND-PAY tenant is not so easy to secure. He is surer of what he wants. He does not take the first house or apartment or store that he finds. HE WATCHES AND ANSWERS TO-LET ADS.

Property that is advertised adequately is rarely rented injudiciously.

The Post-Dispatch prints more of these "to-let" offers than its two nearest competitors.

"J.C.TRAVILLA'S ADDITION TO SOUTHAMPTON"

HOME SEEKERS AND INVESTORS

The SOUTHAMPTON REALTY COMPANY will place on sale, on or before July 1st, 8000 additional feet of ground in the part of Southampton, between Eichelberger and Nottingham, the eastern part of the Subdivision, and January Avenue. Lots front on Neosho, Itaska and Delor Streets. Lots to be sold will be indicated by stakes giving the number of the lot and the front feet therein. Ground laid out under the supervision of Mr. James C. Travilla, former Street Commissioner of the City of St. Louis, which is a guarantee of the high character of the work done.

This is undoubtedly the most beautiful tract of ground for homesite purposes that can be found in the City of St. Louis. High and rolling, it presents a most attractive appearance, and no doubt will soon be absorbed by far-seeing, thrifty buyers.

The same liberal terms and low prices, considering the quality of the ground, will prevail, as have obtained in the major portion of the Subdivision.

We believe it is the greatest value in real estate ever offered to people of St. Louis.

Come out, select your lot. See the man at the office on the grounds for plats and particulars. Office on grounds always open Saturdays and Sundays as late as 7:00 p. m.

ADJOINING SOUTHAMPTON

The One Great Opportunity This Season to Buy Your Lot and Build Your Own Home. Lowest Prices Ever Offered for Good Home Sites.

AGENT ON GROUNDS ALL THE TIME

Do you live in St. Louis? Have you seen the West, North and South End develop from vacant fields into comfortable and beautiful home districts? Do you know the only large undeveloped district in the City lies in the Southwest, adjacent to King's Highway and close to Chouteau-Southampton and Cherokee car lines? Do you know that there is more activity and development work going on in this district than all the rest of St. Louis? There's a Reason Why. The desire to own a home, the opportunity to get in on the ground floor, the certainty of profits and the last chance to get ground with these conveniences at bargain prices.

To the Dweller and Rent Payer who lives in houses built in solid rows, over stores, in small flats, in the congested districts of the city; who know the rent is high in proportion to the Comforts and Conveniences. Have you not often wished you had a little plot of green sod to look at, to walk on, to care for in front and a nice garden in the rear, instead of solid brick and concrete yards that gather the heat of day, store it through the sweltering nights of summer, robbing you of needed rest and sleep? Have you not wished for good, clean air to breathe? Don't you think the Wife and Kiddies would benefit in getting away from the dust and smoke-laden air? Don't you think in addition to their Comfort and Pleasure, it is a money saver in doctors and drugs, in laundry and clothes; adds to health, efficiency, economy? If you believe this, then take a ride on either Chouteau-Southampton or Cherokee car to Hayden's Boulevard Heights. Situated at N. W. Cor. Eichelberger and King's Highway; fronting 1000 feet on King's Highway. Lays high, overlooking the city. Rolling and well drained. Opposite one of the city's little parks and play grounds.

Lots 30x125. Prices as low as Twelve Dollars per foot. Terms: $10.00 cash and $10.00 a month. No taxes until December, 1915.

Opening Sale of Hayden's Boulevard Heights Addition, Saturday and Sunday, June 27th and 28th.

The Youngest Addition. The Best Located.
The Most Improved. The Lowest Price.
The Best Car Service. The Easiest Terms.

If interested in owning a home, go select your lot. If interested in saving your money, make a lot your Savings Bank. It is absolutely safe and pays the largest interest. Select it today.

Property has been laid out and improved under the supervision of John G. Joyce, the well-known Civil Engineer and City Surveyor. His extensive experience and well-known ability insures high-class work in this subdivision.

Look the ground over before the day of sale. Make your selection, then get there early Saturday morning and bring in your card.

London Wants Chicks at Less Than Pound

In This Country Broilers at One and a Half Pounds Are Popular.

The question is sometimes asked how old chicks must be before they are good to eat. No exact rule can be given. A pound to a pound and a half dressed is a favorite size for broilers in the city markets, and usually it is most profitable to sell broilers at this age. In general it may be said that if a chick is well fed it is good eating any time after it reaches a weight of one pound. If it is properly fed and fattened it will be good till it is three or four years of age. Recently I had a cock three years old, weighing 13 pounds, which I wanted to dispose of. The family would not listen to having the old fellow killed and eaten at home. He was too much a part of the family. The nearest meat market would not have him, because "old roosters" were tough. Well, I fooled the family by taking him to the meat market to be killed and dressed, then took him home. He was as tender as a six-months-old chick, because of was of a good eating type and because he was well fattened.

In the restaurants and hotels of London and other large cities they now want broilers smaller than a pound, say three-quarters of a pound, or even a half pound. These little chicks are in great demand in April and May by the wealthy classes, and of course the prices are extremely fancy. They sell for 40 to 75 cents each.

Varieties like the Dorkings, Orpingtons and Faverolles are used for this purpose. These little chicks are called petits poussins. This makes them taste better and causes the purchasers to part with their money more cheerfully. Milk is the chief article of food in preparing these broilers for the market. They are also fed small quantities of hard-boiled eggs, meal moistened with milk, oatmeal, barley meal, middling, etc. They are fed a variety because they will thus eat more, and the more rapidly they grow the better they are to eat and the cheaper it is to get them to the market stage. The value of milk in feeding poultry for the market is recognized in this country.

Chicks Should Be Kept Apart From Old Birds

If That Is Not Feasible, Protect the Feed for Growing Birds From the Adults.

Growing chicks should not be allowed to run with the old fowls, other than the mother hen. They will most likely be abused for one thing. The most important reason, however, lies in the feeding. A system of feeding adapted to the mature fowls is not adapted to growing chicks, and vice versa. This applies not only to the little chicks, but also to young stock up to laying time. I know that it is not always feasible to make this separation, but it should be done when possible.

In general it may be said that growing chicks should be fed all they will eat. If you want rapid, consistent growth, the more you can get the growing stock to eat the better, provided that the ration be a good one, adapted to growth. Young stock will not eat too much if the food be of the right sort, clean, wholesome, well balanced, in good variety, strong in muscle and bone-building elements.

But this condition does not apply to the old fowls. The system of feeding which will make chicks grow rapidly is likely to make the old fowls too fat.

If you do not find it feasible to keep all the little chicks away from the old stock, at least provide sheltered places for feeding the chicks, under a slatted frame through which the old fowls cannot go.

BREEDING BARRED ROCKS TO COLOR IS FASCINATING

Double Mating System Necessary to Get Best Results From These Fine Birds.

Other varieties have their ups and downs. Their popularity waxes and wanes. This is true, doubtless, to some extent, of the Barred Plymouth Rocks, but it is less true of this variety than of any other fowls. There is more demand for Barred Rocks than for any other variety of pure-bred fowls and this has been true continuously for many years.

The Barred Rock has been called especially the farmer's fowl. It is that certainly. More Barred Rocks are seen on the farms of the country than any other fowls. It is also true that the Barred Rock is pre-eminently the fanciers' fowl. It probably requires more skill to breed Barred Rocks true to color than any other variety. And when success is attained certainly no fowl is more beautiful. In the great poultry shows in New York, Boston, Chicago or St. Louis, they attract the most attention, as they do in the local county fairs.

I don't breed Barred Rocks, never did breed them and probably never shall breed them, so I cannot be accused of prejudice when I say that the Barred Rocks are the leading variety of fowls.

The Barred Rock is, in shape, like the other Plymouth Rocks, such as the white or buff. It is a bird of "medium" characteristics. It is medium in size, or a little larger, medium in length and breadth of back, in tail, in length of legs, etc. It is yellow in skin, and is the fowl that has made the "yellow-legged chicken" synonymous with good eating in America. Of course this yellow color is now recognized as not adding to the quality, but at any rate, Barred Rocks are mighty good eating.

In fact the Barred Rock is without a superior as a useful, practical fowl It is notoriously hardy. It is as free from disease as any other fowl. It matures quickly. It has plenty of size for table purposes. It is a good layer, though the eggs are often not so large as those of some other varieties. The hens make excellent mothers. They are more inclined to broodiness than some others. With some people this is an objection. They are certainly not more persistent sitters than that other popular fowl, the Rhode Island Red.

Good Color Attractive.

The color of the Barred Rocks is most interesting and attractive, that is, attractive in a really good specimen. The pale, washed-out specimens one often sees are not beautiful, nor on the other hand are those just as commonly seen which are black and smutty, with no distinct barrings, and when you hear someone saying he doesn't think Barred Rocks are beautiful, you will probably find on inquiry he has in mind either these washed-out or smutty specimens.

The color is, in general, black and white, though not exactly black and white. Each feather should be "barred" throughout its entire length with parallel bars of a lighter and darker shade. The darker bar stops short of positive black and the lighter bar is not quite white. The Barred Rock has often been called blue. To some eyes it is blue. I think the bluish effect comes from the blending of the two rather peculiar colors. Of course the bars should be bright and distinct. This gives the "snappy" appearance so much sought. The end of the feathers should be of the darker color. Perfect barring is never seen, though some specimens are beautifully barred. The barrings of the main wing feathers, or flights, is always defective.

I have referred to the difficulty of breeding this variety. In order to obtain the best results it is imperative that what is called the double-mating system be used. This is also in use in such varieties as Brown Leghorns or the Partridges of various breeds.

The double mating system means that you must have one type of color mating to produce standard or exhibition cockerels and another type of mating to produce the highest quality in pullets. That means a lot of trouble and many breeders will not go to such trouble. But if one is ambitious to have the very best in Barred Rocks this double mating system is necessary, because you cannot get the kind of birds you want otherwise. The Barred Rocks that win in the best shows are practically without exception the result of the double mating system.

How Breeding Works Out.

If you mate a Barred Rock male of the correct color with females of the correct color in both sexes, you would naturally expect to get chicks of correct color in both sexes, but alas, this is just what you do not get, consequently the double mating plan. For a cockerel mating you use a male that is of the correct standard in exhibition color, and put him with females that are too dark in win in the showroom. You want these females, however, to be as good in barring as possible. For the production of pullets you use a male that is too light for a show bird, but with as distinct barrings as possible, mated to pullets that are of correct color. All this means skill and trouble, but if you are after the best results there is no help for it.

Some of the best known Barred Rock breeders in the country breed only in one "line." C. H. Natham of Massachusetts, for example, breeds only in the pullet line, I believe. His males are too light for exhibition cockerels, but his females are superb. In the larger shows a special class is made for pullet-breeding males, or for cockerel-breeding females. These birds are not strictly show birds but the skilled breeder can distinguish their probable value in the breeding pen.

There are more culls naturally in Barred Rocks than in birds of most other colors, especially white or black, but to some breeders this is the very fascination of handling Barred Rocks. These breeders say that the problem of getting correct white color is too easy.

Naturally top notch Barred Rocks bring high prices, sometimes into the hundreds of dollars for a first-class male. In a show like Madison Square Garden, New York, the first prize Barred Rock cockerel is the "cock of the walk." This is the bird that is most sought out.

Poultry Problems Solved.

Coloring of Eggs.

We have several customers who are complaining about our eggs. The yolks are not a golden yellow, as they should be, but are rather a dirty greenish color. We gather the eggs daily and the hens are in good health—A. Subscriber, St. Louis.

I believe it is green feed that is coloring the eggs. It is like turning a cow on rich pasture in the spring. The milk sometimes has a grassy look and flavor for a time. The eggs probably taste all right, but don't look good. After a time they will probably lose this objectionable color. Unfortunately, it is difficult to feed green stuff too heavily in the spring at first. Some foods, even though good, if fed suddenly and liberally to fowls will affect the eggs, for a time, and then no effect is seen. A woman called me by phone and stated a situation just like this. I asked her if she had been feeding the hens something recently which they had not been getting. She replied that she had lately begun to feed the hens all the tender green alfalfa they would eat and that they devour it eagerly. I told her I had no doubt this green alfalfa colored the eggs, and that this effect would probably be only temporary. I think "subscriber's" case must be a similar one.

Lice on Roosters.

Perhaps you can tell me what is the matter with my rooster. He is barred rock, year and a half old and has been well and hearty until a few days ago, when his legs seemed to become weak and he could not stand or walk. When he gets down he cannot get up. In the few days he has become very thin, although he has had plenty to eat and has a good appetite. His comb is pale and he cannot get on the roost. He has been running with 10 or 12 hens. They have a large range and the chicken house and yard are perfectly clean and sanitary. Have no mites. Have been feeding Purina scratch feed in the mornings and wheat evenings. Have not had a sick chicken among my hens and 68 young ones, but had a year-old R. I. red rooster affected this same way during the winter—Mrs. L. W., Monroe, La.

It looks like a case of lice, though it may not be. You say it is not mites that cause the trouble. Are you sure there are no body lice on the bird? Look on head and neck, under wings, in fluff and around vent. Usually when a male bird acts as you describe, he is infested with lice. But it may not be lice. Without seeing the bird I could not say what is the trouble. Rub sulphur or Persian insect powder through feathers anyway. Be sure the bird gets plenty to eat. Sometimes a male bird is so gallant he will not eat till the hens have eaten and then there is little or nothing left for him. Feed him by himself once a day, giving him all he will eat. Give him a mash, bread or corn meal, moistened with a raw egg. I have found that male birds in a breeding pen suffer from lice more than females. Apparently their habits are somewhat different. They do not dust themselves so much as hens. On the other hand they suffer less, or at least this is my experience, from digestive troubles than hens.

Ducklings.

How old should ducks be before they are permitted to swim? Will it harm them to feed them flies?—C. B. F., Carthage, Mo.

Careful duck raisers keep the young from water until they are six weeks old, although some farmers seem to raise them successfully without such precaution. A reasonable number of flies will not hurt a duck.

Poultry Suggestions.

Green food is abundant. There is no excuse for not feeding it liberally.

Be careful about the feeding of lawn clippings, especially in the summer when the season gets dry. The fresh green clippings are good, but dried grass sometimes causes a crop-bound condition.

If you have been breaking up the hens from sitting because you wanted them to lay, better not do it all summer. Let the old hen sit three or four weeks once in the season. It is good for her.

Enough permanganate of potash to color the water a very light claret color in the water will act as a disinfectant and a mild tonic. A small pinch of the crystals will be sufficient for a big vessel of water.

Feed a variety, but don't forget that wheat is the best single feed. Poultry will live and thrive on wheat alone.

At this season if any of the flock, young or old, are ailing, look first for filth and lice.

Water the flock these warm days three or four times a day. Nothing will give more comfort to the birds, and nothing will pay you better.

Don't forget that oats are cheap, and that they make bone and muscle.

I have a neighbor who doesn't raise any chicks. But he always keeps a bunch of scrub hens, which he buys, for laying purposes. He has three males with 20 hens. He says the hens lay better! He has another guess coming. Eat the surplus rooster.

You can raise a lot of chicks in very small quarters. But it requires extra skill and care.

BALLPLAYER U. S. ATT'Y

Former Boston National to Be Named.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The nomination of F. H. Brown, Mayor of Somersworth, N. H., to be United States Attorney for New Hampshire, was prepared today at the White House.

Brown, formerly was a baseball player and was an infielder on the Boston National League team for a brief period eight years ago.

DISINFECTANT IS HIGHLY IMPORTANT TO POULTRYMEN

Expense Can Be Kept Down by Mixing the Cresol Solution in Large Quantities.

The first consideration in securing a disinfectant for poultry quarters should be effectiveness. It isn't good economy to buy a disinfectant for the simple reason that it is cheap. The first question should rather be, will it kill germs and vermin, but expense comes next and when one can combine effectiveness with low cost the ideal condition is attained.

Poultrymen can mix their own disinfectants. They can do it more cheaply than buying ready-mixed commercial disinfectants and they are quite as effective. The cresol solution is one of the best of these. It is recommended by poultry experiment stations as well as by the National Department of Agriculture at Washington. It is an excellent germicide as well as insecticide. Cresol may be obtained through druggists and in buying it should be specified as "commercial cresol."

This may be placed directly with water and used as a spray, but as it is not very soluble it is better to make use of what is known as "compound solution of cresol," which in turn is diluted by water. The Government's proportions are as follows:

"First four quarts of raw linseed oil in a four or five gallon stone crock, then weigh out in a dish one and two-thirds pounds commercial caustic potash, which may be obtained from any druggist at 10 or 15 cents a pound. Dissolve this potash in a pint of water and add the cold potash solution very slowly to the linseed oil, stirring constantly. Not less than five minutes should be taken to the adding of this solution of potash to the oil.

"For five hours after mixing the old potash the solution should be stirred thoroughly every hour, and then it should be left standing 10 or 12 hours. By the expiration of that time saponification should be complete. This soap should then be stirred and five and one-fourth quarts of commercial cresol should be added. The soap will slowly dissolve in this cresol. It may take two days for a complete solution to be effected. When the soap is all dissolved the solution is ready for use. This cresol will mix in any proportion of water and will make a clear solution."

The quantities given in the foregoing directions may be increased or lessened in accordance with your requirements, but one should be careful to maintain the proportions given. To disinfect the interior of poultry houses, incubators, brooders, etc., a 2 per cent solution of this cresol mixture will be found very satisfactory both for general disinfecting and for cleaning out vermin. This would mean one gallon of cresol solution to 50 gallons of water or three or four teaspoonfuls of cresol solution to a gallon of water would be about right.

The solution is a clear water fluid and may be either applied with spray pump or brush. In case there is reason to believe there is contagion such as white diarrhea in brooder or incubator, it is well to apply the solution with a scrub brush in addition to the spray. In that event, it is also advisable to decrease the strength of the solution.

Water for Scalding Fowls Should Not Be Too Hot.

In scalding a fowl after it is killed a mistake often made is to have the water too hot. The result is that the feathers are difficult to remove and the boiling water also has a deteriorating effect on the marketing qualities of the bird, at least, if not on its actual table qualities. Water for scalding should be hot, but not quite to the boiling point. Fowls should be scalded immediately after through bleeding. Immerse them three or four times in order that the hot water may penetrate to every part of the body. In case the fowls are to be sold with head and feet on, one must be careful to keep these parts out of the water or their natural color will be spoiled. After picking and dressing are finished dip the carcasses in hot water for a few seconds and then put in cold water until thoroughly chilled.

TERMINAL BONDS O K'd

Report to Commission Shows That Morgan & Co. Bought $500,000.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 20.—The Terminal Railroad Association today filed with the Public Service Commission a report that shows that $500,000 of Terminal bonds were sold to J. P. Morgan & Co., in June, 1913, for $427,000, or at 85½ per cent.

A bond issue of $954,000 was authorized by the commission to reimburse the company for funds used in improvement and extension work. Besides the bonds sold to Morgan & Co., $100,000 were turned over at par to the Central Trust Co. of New York as part of a sinking fund. The rest of the bonds, the report shows, have not been disposed of.

BANK TELLER LOSES $800

A man who said he was William A. Adamson, a bank teller in Wilkesbarre, Pa., told a policeman at Union Station yesterday he had lost $800 in cash and a watch and chain valued at $100.

He said he had been at the Planters Hotel several days. Thursday night, he said, he took a Turkish bath there, and remembered nothing more until he reached Union Station. He was sent to the city dispensary for treatment.

At the Planters it was said no one named Adamson had registered there during the week.

THE SENTINEL

By Emory J. Haynes

HE had stood at his post for two thousand years. When found recently under the ruins of Herculaneum he had turned to stone. Stiffly erect, his spear fist riveted in his rigid hand, his attitude was still that of the sentinel on guard.

When the volcanic ashes were falling thick as the snowflakes, the officer of the watch on that dread day had failed to give his men the word to look out each for himself. You can see still on the face of stone the pathetic look of dread held in check by the thought of duty.

"Why do they not relieve me?" that expression says. "I am awaiting the word to fall out."

The head is slightly turned as if looking for the Captain who did not come. Who knows but that he too was smothered on his way to set free this very sentinel smothered as were the thousand other officers and guards at their posts in the doomed city.

True to death! Such is the mighty preachment.

The granite archways of great buildings are displaced by the earthquake.

But the sentinel is in his place.

We can fancy the fleeing throngs, frantic with fear, looking upon his brave form and finding a new courage.

We can hear the mothers cry out to their terrified children:

"Look at the sentinel. Perhaps the danger is not so great as we fear. Is he not still on guard?"

But here was disorder beyond the power of even Roman discipline. Not Caesar's own army, the ever faithful and obedient, could stop that panic. Nature herself was in revolt; a mountain was on fire.

But though the multitude might flee, the servant of the public stood still at his post. Not his part to retreat until the Captain gave the word.

There is something in the attitude of the sentinel that stirs the depths of the soul. Some there are watching on storm-tossed ships, some in the dark deep of mines, some on ghostly battlefields when the moonbeams shine on the corpse-strewn grass. In every city there is at this moment some one standing at a hard and perilous post. All are comrades of the watchman of two thousand years ago.

Let your thoughts go out to him then, watchers of the present. He was of your kind—a band not numerous in any age. Nothing affrights you except dishonor. You are all of the grand legion whose religion consists in obedience, and it is this which unites you, men of today, with your brother whom duty bound to a post of death.

THE SKYSCRAPER LADY

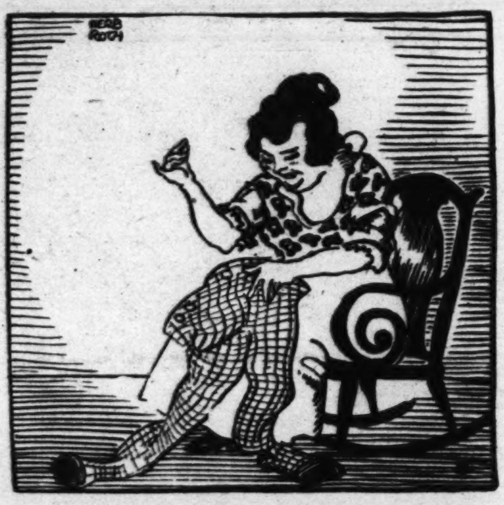
BY GERALD STANLEY LEE

I SPENT a few days in Cleveland last week and I was taken about everywhere and shown the things that people in cities show visitors—all the things that should be seen and that should be remembered afterwards, and, when I got back, as I did the other day, and began thinking about what had been happening to me and all I had seen in Cleveland, the thing that stuck out most—the thing that loomed up in Cleveland as I looked back—was a suspender button on a pincushion in room 802 in the Hotel Statler.

Perhaps I should not have been impressed so. But I had seen colleges and college presidents and city clubs and factories before, and this was my first suspender button—at least the first one I ever really appreciated.

The Hotel Statler is a skyscraper—a kind of steel and glass machine for supplying sleep to people. There are seven hundred rooms with bath in it, and when I had been shot up to the eighth floor and deposited in pigeon hole number 802 and left alone with my bags and my thoughts four hundred miles from home, and when my eye fell on that white pincushion on my bureau and I saw that little humble suspender button and the threaded needle by it, I was touched, and I wondered about the woman who had put it there. Was Cleveland full of women like that?

Before I went to sleep I almost said good night to that pincushion. I went to sleep thinking of the seven hundred other men going to sleep, too. I thought of the long perpendicular column of bedrooms I was in—rooms shaped precisely like mine, above me, below me—all of us lying there like chewing gum in a slot-machine, a kind of slot of sleepiness, and yet all going to sleep feeling gathered-around, protected and thought-for from their suspender buttons to their souls by Mrs. Plunkett of the Hotel Statler.



I looked at the button, and wondered about the woman who had put it there.

This was the first stage of my experience. In the morning, while I was dressing (it was like an inspiration), a suspender button came off—a thing that has not happened to me away from home for twenty years—came off, with that new happy suspender button for me two feet away, staring me in the face.

I have not been so pleased with anything my clothes have done to me for years—as having that button know enough to wait to come off that morning. Then, of course, Mrs. Plunkett, instead of being abstract poetry to me as she had been the night before, became applied poetry—made me want to go and thank her as soon as I got my coat on.

But of course I restrained myself. I thought in time of how it must must be if she were in the breakfast room for instance—of how there would be men in clusters probably every morning standing there before her waiting with their grateful suspender buttons all on, to thank her for making a skyscraper seem like a cottage.

It makes it comparatively comfortable to think of the New Woman since I have had Mrs. Plunkett's button on.

Women used to belong in a little cottage under a hill. She put a lamp in the window for her husband to see as he came home in the cold and dark or a few flowers on the table. Today she is going to be just what she has always been, except that she is going to insist on being a woman in more places, and more of the time and on a bigger scale than she has wanted to before. Under a thousand smoky chimneys—I can see it coming—she is going to slip in and be the Mother of Factories. She is going to appropriate streets and railway trains, hotels and city halls and make a home for a man to go downtown in, a home for him to make money in, and make a city as snug as a cottage.

All industry today, from the dispensing room in a factory to the directors' room on a railroad, is getting helplessly and characteristically dependent for its efficiency on the woman's touch. The touch that pulls any particular man together from the beginning of the world is going to be the touch that pulls all men together. There is scarcely a big manufacturing business known today which is not inefficient for the lack of the things that Mrs. Plunketts would think of in it.

Labor and Capital — those two grave solemn old he-fools—have blundered into nearly everything that is the matter with them today because the things any woman would think of in male human beings, the little big things a woman sees and plays on in human nature, have been passed over.

Here's the New York, New Haven and Hartford road, for instance—the directors all looking askance at the managers, the towns on the road all wishing they were off it, the trainmen all wishing they were on some other road, and the trains all wishing they were on some other track—and trying to get there—all because men cannot understand each other, oil each other and work with each other.

What it really wants—the New York and the New Haven and Hartford Railroad—in addition to its mechanical inventors, is a thousand plunkett-power Mrs. Plunkett to tend the thousand thousand little annoying over-and-over, forever-and-ever things that keep men out of sorts.

A railroad may be quite grand but it cannot really work men and make men work the way a woman can.

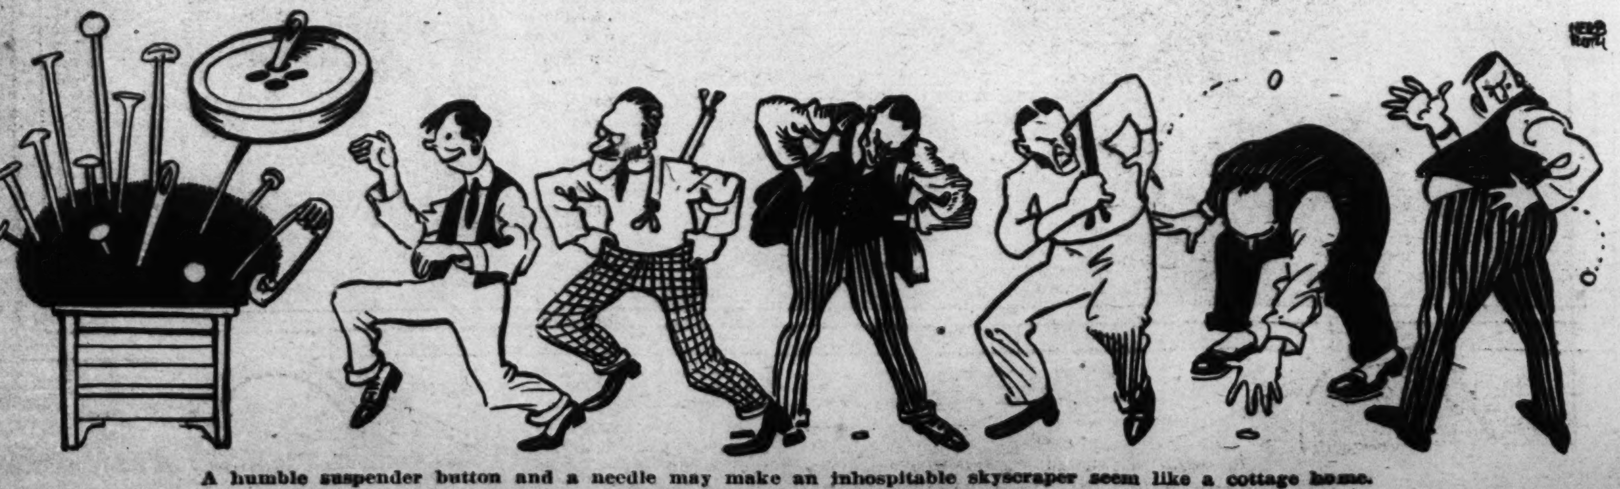
It may be a rather informal way to speak of a great stately worried corporation, but what the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad needs today, as it looks from Mount Tom, is some one to sew on its suspender buttons.

I do not like to end these somewhat cursory remarks without saying how cheerful I have come to feel since I have thought of this, about the New Woman.

The New Woman, as I take it, may be said to be the woman who is doing as well with me as Eve did with Adam. No extras. Nothing different really. And the same idea. The woman of today finds the skyscrapers, factories and railroads waiting to be made human and personal. And all she is going to do next is to proceed to be as new as Eve was. What Eve did with her own delightful little back yard the New Woman is going to do with Union Square and Sixth avenue.

There is nothing revolutionary about this.

So there is my toast, gentlemen. Here's to Eve of Genesis. And here's to Eve today. Here's to twenty million Mrs. Plunketts.



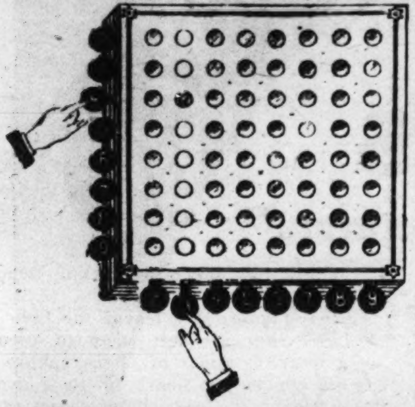
A humble suspender button and a needle may make an inhospitable skyscraper seem like a cottage home.

NEW AND ODD THINGS IN SCIENCE

Teaching the Multiplication Table to Children by Machinery

A FRENCH school teacher named E. Plancon is helping his pupils to learn their multiplication tables by means of a simple automatic multiplying machine. M. Plancon argues that mere figures mean nothing to the child mind, but that if the two senses of touch and sight be simultaneously called upon the process of multiplication will be learned readily.

So he has had made a mechanical multiplication table. It consists of a little square metal box, with two rows of keys, one at the left and one at the bottom. The cover is pierced by 64 round holes in rows of eight either way. When a child pulls out one of the lower keys (that of the figure 3, as the diagram shows, for instance) all the holes in the column vertically above this figure are opened. When he now pulls out one of the side keys (4, for instance) the result of the multiplication of the two numbers appears in the hole at the crossing of the lines.



Specialist in Children's Diseases Denounces the Boiling of Milk

DOCTORS who advocate the boiling of milk to rid it of its bacterial impurities never suggest boiling butter. Yet butter is a concentrated milk product, always made from raw milk and even more likely to contain disease producing germs.

Such was one of the arguments thrown at the advocates of cooking milk by Dr. Ralph Vincent of the Manchester (England) Infants' Hospital at a meeting of the Manchester Medical Society.

Dr. Vincent said that the most noxious bacteria were those that grew in sterilized milk. By this he meant that sterilized milk when once it began to turn sour was far more dangerous than raw milk. The explanation of this is that the bacteria which develop in raw milk, in themselves distinctly wholesome, are at the same time powerful enough to prevent the development of their poisonous cousins. But when these beneficent bacteria are killed by pasteurization there is nothing to oppose the growth of the evil ones. According to Dr. Vincent, this same process takes place in the tummy of the baby, the good bacteria of raw milk keeping down the growth of such dangerous microbes as the colon bacillus.

To one of the doctors present, who spoke of "sterile" milk, Dr. Vincent replied that there was no such thing. Neither human milk nor cow's milk was sterile. If either of these were collected aseptically and kept at blood temperature for eight hours they would show a profuse growth of the microbes called streptococcus lacticus. This, however, is one of the beneficent microbes.

Dr. Vincent said pasteurization could not be relied upon to kill the bacillus of tuberculosis. His experience convinced him that children fed on boiled or condensed milk were more prone to tuberculosis, especially in its more serious forms, than those fed on raw milk. He said dried milk was better as a food than boiled.

There are many specialists in the diseases of children who thoroughly agree with Dr. Vincent's ideas. The writer has heard an eminent New York physician denounce pasteurization, saying that it deprived the milk of some of its most valuable constituents, especially the bacteria that destroy the disease-producing bacteria that flourish in the human intestines.

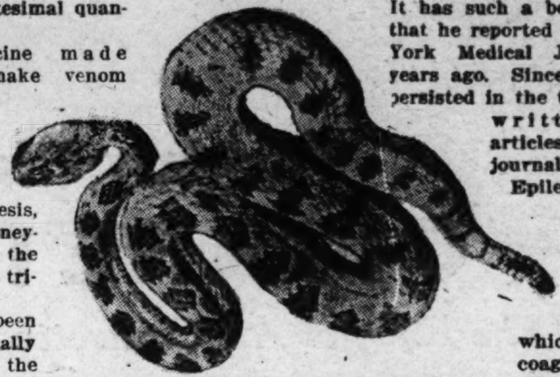
Rattlesnakes' Venom Checks Epileptic Fits

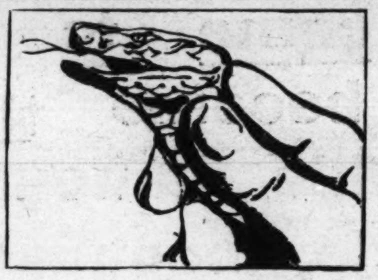
THE venom of rattlesnakes and vipers and the poison of bees have for several years been used as medicine. Needless to say, it is the homeopath that is employing them. For such virulent poisons can be given only in infinitesimal quantities.

The medicine made from rattlesnake venom is called crotalin. That made from the viper is called lachesis, while the honeybee supplies the opium virus trituration.



Crotatus Atrox, the rattlesnake from which the venom is taken.

Crotalin has been found especially useful in the treatment of epilepsy, but is administered also for asthma, neuralgia, neuritis, insomnia, lumbago, sciatica, laryngitis, pleurisy and nervous exhaustion. The rattlesnake's mouth is furnished with two long, sharp fangs that work backward and forward on hinges. When its mouth is closed these fangs are turned back and point down the snake's throat. When it opens its mouth the points of the fangs move forward until the teeth are in the normal position for biting. Each fang has a long, narrow hole on its front surface. This hole is the opening of a tube that runs up inside the tooth and communicates with a little sac in the roof of the mouth where the venom is stored. When the snake "strikes" and its fangs sink into the flesh the venom runs down the tube and is left in the blood.



How the rattlesnake is held in hand.

The general effect of this poison is a feeling of intoxication, loss of power over the limbs, profuse salivation, paralysis of the tongue and throat, difficulty in breathing, inability to swallow, twitching of the limbs and arrest of breathing. The heart finally ceases to beat.

Dr. Thomas J. Mays, Medical Director of the Philadelphia Clinic for the Home Treatment of Chest and Throat Diseases, compares the symptoms of rattlesnake bite with those of poisoning by cyanide of potassium.

It never occurred to anyone that this violent poison might prove valuable in medicine until Dr. Ralph H. Spangler noticed that a Texas epileptic who had been bitten by a rattlesnake was cured of his epilepsy. This led Dr. Spangler to try hypodermic injections of rattlesnake venom on his epileptic patients.

It has such a beneficial effect that he reported it in the New York Medical Journal three years ago. Since then he has persisted in the treatment and written several articles on it in that journal.

Epilepsy is a mysterious disease. One of its chief characteristics is that the blood, which normally coagulates in about seven minutes after being withdrawn, coagulates in about three minutes, the rate quickening during the period of the attack. When an epileptic has an acute fever, receives a wound that causes much loss of blood or becomes pregnant, the convulsions cease. On complete recovery they begin again. Dr. Spangler suggests that these conditions may be explained on the theory that the blood of epileptics contains a sort of toxin, which accumulates until a certain intensity is reached and an explosion (the epileptic convulsion) takes place. The fever, the pregnancy or the loss of blood would prevent this accumulation. He asks if the fact that wounds in epileptics rarely if ever become inflamed or infected and heal much more rapidly than in healthy persons may not be due to the greater coagulability of the blood and therefore the rapid closing of the wound.

Fangs of a rattlesnake, showing the tube down which the poison runs.

There is ample proof for the assertion that the blood of epileptics coagulates more rapidly than that of healthy persons. Now crotalin, the drug from the rattlesnake venom, has the specific effect of reducing the coagulability of the blood.

In a report to the National Association for the Study of Epilepsy, Dr. Spangler reported that six months' treatment with crotalin increased the time of blood coagulation from three minutes to about six minutes, or only one minute less than normal.

His reports contain the history of many cases of epilepsy treated with crotalin, in some of which the convulsions have entirely ceased; on others they have been much reduced in intensity and frequency. Other physicians make similar reports, though Dr. N. S. Yawger of Philadelphia recently reported absolute failure in six cases.

The method of obtaining the virus is simple. The snake is seized by the neck, immediately behind the head, with the forefinger and thumb, the other hand holding the body firmly. A small beaker glass is covered with aseptic gauze and held so that the serpent strikes it with mouth wide open. This is repeated until all the poison in the snake's sac is exhausted. The beaker now contains a yellowish-viscid liquid, which rapidly dries into a substance resembling amber. Solutions of this in various strengths are put up in sealed glass ampoules.

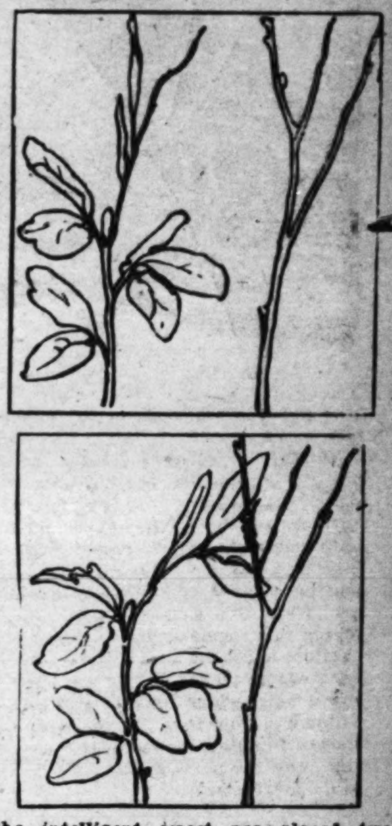
It is injected into the back of the arms, not more than 1-200 of a grain being given at first. The maximum dose is 1-50 of a grain, but this is dangerous.

The injection is followed by a burning, stinging pain, with numbness of the arm. Swelling follows. This reaches its maximum in from twenty-four to thirty-six hours, then subsides.

Intelligent Plants Go in Search of What They Want

PLANTS have a sense which enables them to feel objects at a distance, says S. Leonard Bastin in the Scientific American. He cites the sundew, which extends a leaf toward a fly until the sticky tentacles on the leaf have captured the insect.

The dodder, on germinating, sends up a long thread, which works through the grass till near a clover plant or a milkweed, when it grows rapidly straight for its victim, around which it climbs, suck-ing its sustenance from the sap of its support.

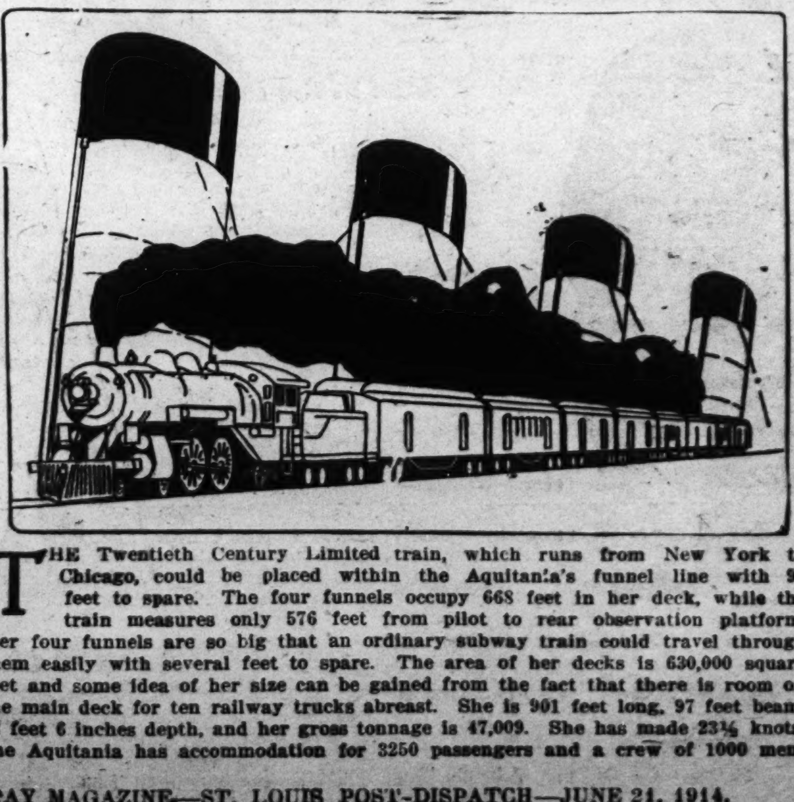


The intelligent sweet pea placed two inches distant from a stick bends over and grasps it.

The sweet pea sends forth the tendrils deliberately toward sticks or other objects that will act as a support. Mr. Bastin shows photographs of a young sweet pea plant that leaned over a gap of two inches in order to seize a support.

Darwin called attention to the cleverness of the root-tips of plants in seeking out nourishment, and said they seemed to show as much intelligence as was to be seen in the lower animals.

Aquitania's Funnel Space Longer Than Railway Train



THE Twentieth Century Limited train, which runs from New York to Chicago, could be placed within the Aquitania's funnel line with 92 feet to spare. The four funnels occupy 668 feet in her deck, while the train measures only 576 feet from pilot to rear observation platform. Her four funnels are so big that an ordinary subway train could travel through them easily with several feet to spare. The area of her decks is 630,000 square feet and some idea of her size can be gained from the fact that there is room on the main deck for ten railway trucks abreast. She is 901 feet long, 97 feet beam, 92 feet 6 inches depth, and her gross tonnage is 47,009. She has made 23⅕ knots. The Aquitania has accommodation for 3250 passengers and a crew of 1000 men.

THE SENTINEL

By Emory J. Haynes

INCOMPREHENSIBLE MARVELS OF THE F-RAY

By the touch of a finger inventor sends force through mountains and buildings, to the bottom of a river where, in a flock of bombs, it unerringly finds any one the director has chosen and explodes it

A SKYROCKET rose from the Piazza Vittorio Emmanuele and burst in a shower of stars above the Campanile of Giotto. Far away to the northeast an amazing red glow shone out upon a hilltop. It was 9 o'clock—21 o'clock, as they say in Florence,

The Lungarno was crowded from the Ponte San Niccolo, past the dam where the fishermen go, and down as far as the Ponte alle Grazie. It seemed as if all Florence was jammed into these roads on each side of the river.

Admiral Fornari descended the stone steps by the Barriere San Niccolo. Four sailors, each carrying a large oval object, followed him. They got into a boat and pushed out into the sluggish, yellow river. Just below the iron bridge they threw the four objects overboard, one at a time. These sank, but rose again and floated, bobbing up and down, one-third above water and two-thirds below.

"There go the bombs!" cried the crowd.

The Admiral was rowed back to shore, where he joined Col. Torretta and several other government officials. Carabinieri pushed the crowd aside to make room for them. Every window and balcony of all the houses from which the river could be seen was filled with heads.

A flight of rockets rose from the Piazza Vittorio Emmanuele. The stars they shot forth cast a lurid glow over the city from Santa Maria Maggoire to the Ponte Vecchio, from the Palazzo Corsini to the Badia. The buzzing of the crowd suddenly ceased. There was an expectant hush.

Suddenly a flash shattered the darkness. A terrific roar arose from the river, while a rain of sparks lit up a great spurt of water and sank to perish in the waves.

"Number four," said Admiral Fornari to Colonel Torretta. "The next should be number one."

A shout burst from the crowd.

"Viva l'Ulivi! Viva l'Italia!"

Those nearest him rush to shake the Admiral's hand.

"Wait," he says.

Fifteen minutes pass. The crowd relapses into excited chatter.

Then another flash, another roar, another shower of sparks lighting up another fountain of foam.

"Number one!" cries the Admiral. "It is marvelous how he picks them out. The next should be number three."

Again the vivas and the roars from the pushing, neck-craning crowds on both banks of the river.

Fifteen minutes more and bomb number three explodes. It is a few yards above the Pescaia del Mulino, towards which it has been carried by the current.

"Can you see bomb number two?" the crowd is asking.

"Yes, there it is, bobbing about just above the pescaia."

The lights along the shore are dim, but the remaining bomb—the Admiral's number two—can be made out drifting slowly towards the dam. It is caught in the swirl of water, vanishes for an instant, then reappears below, bobbing more vigorously after its dive. Slowly its floats onward. Fifteen minutes pass and it is still moving along, intact. The crowd moves westward with it. The Ponte alle Grazie is now the vantage point. This bridge is filled with eager watchers.

Sixteen minutes go; still the bomb floats on. Seventeen minutes; eighteen minutes. Surely Ulivi is not going to fail with this one after being so successful with the others!

Expressions of doubt and disappointment are heard as the nineteenth minute passes. The bomb is now at the Ponte alle Grazie. Twenty minutes have passed since the third exploded.

A flash under the bridge. A roar. A shower of sparks and water. A yell of triumph from the crowd. The last bomb has been sent off. Guido Ulivi has proved again that his invention for causing explosions at a distance by sending out wireless electric waves will actually work!

On the summit of Monte Senario, ten and a half miles away to the northeast, Guido Ulivi stood in a group of government officials, with Father Alfani, the famous priest who is also astronomer, mathematician, meteorologist, electrical engineer, and one of the most conservative scientists in Europe, at his side. Hours earlier they had left Admiral Fornari and Colonel Torretta in Florence, after arranging the order in which the flashing bombs should be exploded and the signals by which each should know that the other was ready. A rocket was to inform Ulivi that the Admiral was ready; he was to answer with a red bengal light if he had reached the mountain top; a flight of rockets was the signal that the bombs were awaiting the silent invisible shock that should come through all those miles of dark air.

The bombs had been specially constructed for the occasion. The explosive was contained in a rubber bag; this was placed in a porcelain jar and packed tight with felt. The jar was wrapped in asbestos and asbestos cloth and the whole was sealed with pitch in a shell of forged iron, an air chamber being left at one end so as to insure floating.

When all details had been arranged, Ulivi started in a motor for Monte Senario. He carried his apparatus with him. He had already used it at Paggio Pini, five miles away, whence he had exploded bombs in the Arno. This was to be a severer test, and under official observation. Col. Torretta had been sent from Rome by the War Department. Admiral Fornari represented the navy.

Gazing out towards Florence through the night, the little group on the mountain top saw a skyrocket rise and burst. From that distance it looked very small and seemed to rise very slowly. Ulivi lit the bengal light that made a vivid crimson flare, visible at a great distance. He looked to his apparatus. It was working perfectly. A brief wait and a flight of rockets in the faraway city announced that the bombs were afloat.

Ulivi's apparatus began to work.

"I have made one explode," he said quietly, turning to Father Alfani, one of the very few men to whom the young engineer has imparted full details of his invention.

Straining their eyes through the night the little party saw a faint flash. Several seconds later they heard a sound as of a distant gun.

Father Alfani was visibly moved. Speaking of it afterwards, he said that when he saw the flash and heard the dull report, his emotion almost choked him. For he knew that he was witnessing the first practical test of an epoch-making discovery.

To anyone who knows the lay of the land between Florence and Monte Senario and understands at the same time the way that wireless waves pass from one point to another, this feat was extraordinary. Wireless waves radiate in every direction from the point whence they are emitted. But they move in straight lines. Therefore, when they encounter an obstacle, one of three things must happen: they are absorbed by it; they are reflected back from it or they pass through it. The rays emitted from Monte Senario's summit traveled in a straight line to the surface of the River Arno. In order to do this they had, as Father Alfani carefully pointed out, to pass right through the hills about Fiesole and through all the buildings in the heart of the city of Florence before finding their mark on the river.

The rays that Ulivi projects are much more than the ordinary aerial waves of electricity. These are combined with the infra-red rays of light, those rays immediately beyond the visible red of the spectrum, and invisible to our eyes. Those particular rays he calls F rays. They are the product of vibrations that are slower and longer in wave-length than those of red light, just as the ultra-violet rays are the product of vibrations more rapid and shorter in wave-length than those of violet light.

Ulivi discovered the properties of the rays he is now using when studying these in his laboratory in Paris. At certain times, he learned, sparks flashed from the steel shoes of horses in a stable thirty or forty feet distant. A few experiments taught him how to produce sparks at will. It was a matter of electric tuning, so to speak. The phenomenon is comparable to that of

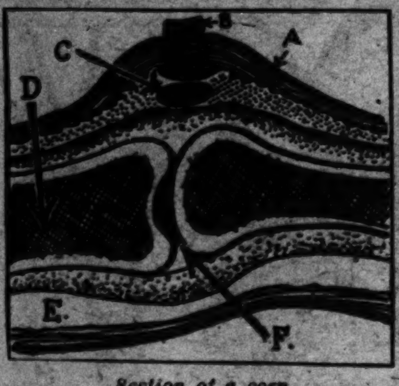
NOVEL THINGS WORTH KNOWING

What a Corn Is and How It Is Cured

HERE is a diagram showing how a little toe with a corn on it would look if split down the middle. It is taken from a circular sent to physicians by the manufacturers of a famous corn cure. It serves to illustrate what a corn really is. B is the core of the corn, the horny thickening of the skin; A is the swollen tissue around it; C is a little sac of fluid immediately under the core; D are the bones of the toe, forming the point F; E is the skin and flesh of the under surface of the toe.



Section of a corn.

Whether a corn is treated at home or by a chiropodist, the treatment is the same. It consists of applying to the surface an acid (the most commonly used being salicylic), mixed with collodion and ether. The ether evaporates, leaving a layer of collodion to hold the acid while this does its work. After applying this regularly for four or five days the foot is soaked in hot water, when the corn can be picked out in one piece, leaving a hole, which quickly fills up.

Some chiropodists eat the corn out by repeated applications of nitric acid, picking away the parts of the corn destroyed at each treatment.

This Dog Does Arithmetic by Ringing Up Numbers on a Bell

Hector, the calculating dog, working the key which rings an electric bell announcing the result of his calculations.

MANY people were astonished by the account of the marvelous talking dog of Germany, which appeared in this magazine a few weeks ago. Yet there is now in New York City a dog nearly as wonderful.

He is Hector, a small white French poodle with no pedigree, who adds, subtracts, divides and multiplies with the proficiency of an average boy five times his age. Hector is not yet two years old. He is the property of C. J. Tryon, a mining engineer of Los Angeles.

Prof. Charles Lincoln Edwards, head of the nature study work of the Los Angeles schools, has examined Hector and pronounced him a thinking, calculating dog. In the critical examination given him by Prof. Edwards he received a rating of 90 per cent.

At a demonstration at which the writer was present Hector was placed behind a little box, at the side of which was a large electric bell. Hector taps out his answers on this bell by pressing with his right forepaw on a little telegraph key on top of the box.

First he was asked to count numbers ranging from 1 to 25. This he did without a mistake. He was then asked to multiply 3 by 5, 2 by 6 and 7 by 3. Both his master and those standing about propounded problems. He answered all with equal facility. He also added and subtracted. In all he made about 5 per cent of errors. In addition and multiplication examples, however, he was invariably correct.

It was amusing to watch the dog think over a difficult problem. Someone asked him to add 5 and 7 and 4. For an instant the dog stared straight before him, then he slowly closed his eyes and his head drooped. He was evidently thinking deeply. Suddenly he brightened up and quickly tapped 16. When numbers are placed on a slate he looks at them steadily for a few moments and then adds or subtracts as the case may be.

Hector seems to understand every word that is said. He pirouettes like a ballet dancer, walks, sits and poses at command without coaxing or threatening.

Enormous Money From Waste.

AT a banquet of the National Association of Waste Material Dealers in New York it was brought out that by collecting and utilizing waste products the members of the association transact an annual business of $700,000,000.

The utilization of cottonseed oil and of cotton seed, until very recent years a mere waste product of the cotton crop, it was pointed out, is now valued in the United States alone at $60,000,000 a year. Curtis Guild, ex-Ambassador to Russia, noted that we are now exporting sisal strings to Europe to be turned into tooth brushes; that we are using the worn-out painter's brush, soaked with white lead, by cleansing and using the worn bristles to provide inexpensive and durable scrubbing brushes, and exporting American cotton stockings to Europe, where they are unraveled and used as a cheap packing in the manufacture of graphophones and electrical machinery, while the patched and darned European stockings not having any other use, are exported from Europe to this country for their only possible use as paper stock.

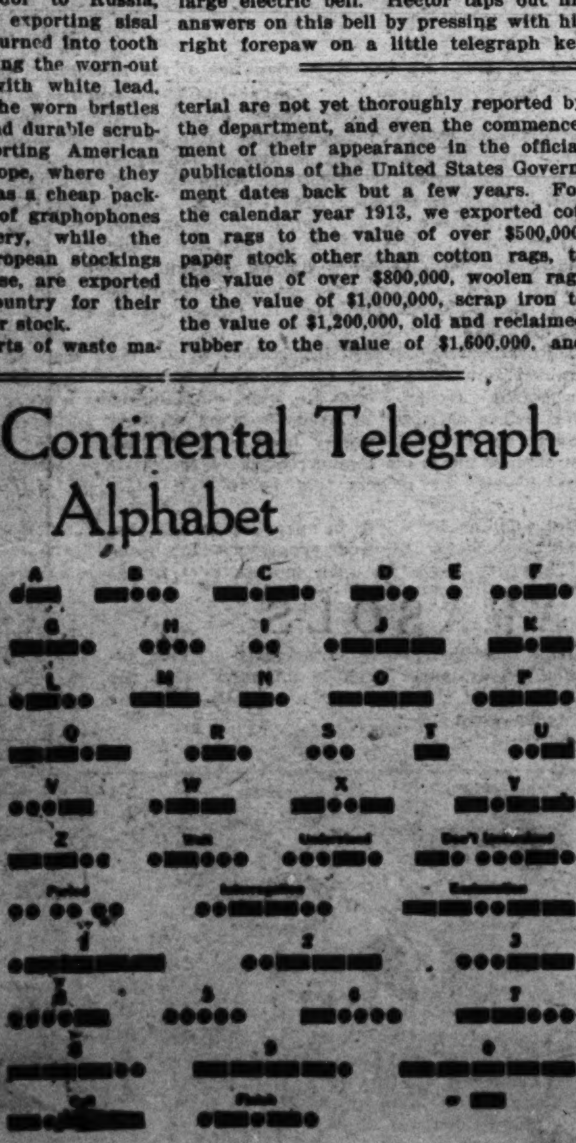
The exports and imports of waste material are not yet thoroughly reported by the department, and even the commencement of their appearance in the official publications of the United States Government dates back but a few years. For the calendar year 1913, we exported cotton rags to the value of over $500,000, paper stock other than cotton rags, to the value of over $800,000, woolen rags to the value of $1,000,000, scrap iron to the value of $1,200,000, old and reclaimed rubber to the value of $1,600,000, and scrap brass to the value of over $2,000,000.

The figures of the imports of waste materials from foreign countries are even more striking. In the year 1913 we imported scrap iron to the value of $500,000, old copper to the value of $1,000,000, silk waste to the value of $3,000,000, old rubber to the value of more than $3,000,000, cotton rags to the value of $3,000,000, and other paper stock which was neither cotton rags nor wood pulp to the value of nearly $5,000,000.

Wireless Continental Telegraph Alphabet

"THE WIRELESS AGE" gives the accompanying alphabet which is used by wireless operators at sea. It will be noticed by those familiar with telegraphy that this is Morse with a few modifications, such as the dots of P giving way to dot, dash, dash, dot, the long dash of L becoming dot, dash, two dots, etc.

The famous call of distress S O S is very simply made, being three dots, three dashes, three dots. This is much safer and more easily made than the C Q D call which was formerly the arbitrary for distress: dash dot dash dot, dash dash dot dash, dash two dots.



Wood Made From Straw

INFORMATION has been made public in Lyons, France, concerning an artificial wood which, it is stated, will be of great value as a substitute for natural wood. The new product has been found, after years of study and practical experiments, the most recent of which have given eminently satisfactory results.

The process consists in transforming straw into a solid material having the resistance of oak. The straw, after being cut into small pieces, is reduced to a paste by boiling, to which certain chemicals are added. When the paste has been reduced to a homogeneous mass it is put into presses, and planks, beams, laths and mouldings of all sizes are readily made. This new material can be sawed like natural wood. As a fuel it emits a bright flame and little smoke. It is further stated to be adaptable to the manufacture of match stems.

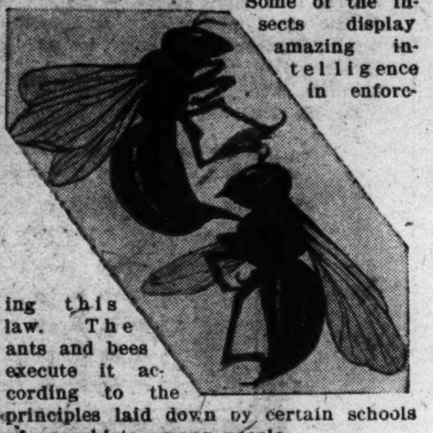
Bandit Bees Killed by Stings of Workers

IN the struggle for life among the lower animals there is no place for the drone. He that won't work must die is the inexorable rule of creation.



Some of the insects display amazing intelligence in enforcing this law. The ants and bees execute it according to the principles laid down by certain schools of anarchists among people.

When a queen bee leaves the hive the workers that are left seem to become discouraged. Some of them behave as if they had lost heart in their work. They begin to loaf; they desert their native hive and, as they must eat, become bandits, robbing other hives of the honey stored up by the busy workers. But the owners of these more prosperous hives do not submit willingly to such robbery, and defend their stores eagerly. They chase out the marauders and kill them if they resist.

The photograph reproduced herewith is a remarkable snapshot, for it has caught a worker bee in the very act of killing a robber. It will be noticed that the worker is inflicting a deadly stab with his sting at the throat of the robber. So much vigor has he put into his stab that the poison bulb has issued from his abdomen with his sting.

Caspian Sea Sinking

IT is reported that the surface of the Caspian, which is 27 meters under the surface of the sea, has, since the summer of 1910, been continually sinking, and that it is gradually becoming inconvenient for navigation. A commission has been appointed by the Government to study the subject.

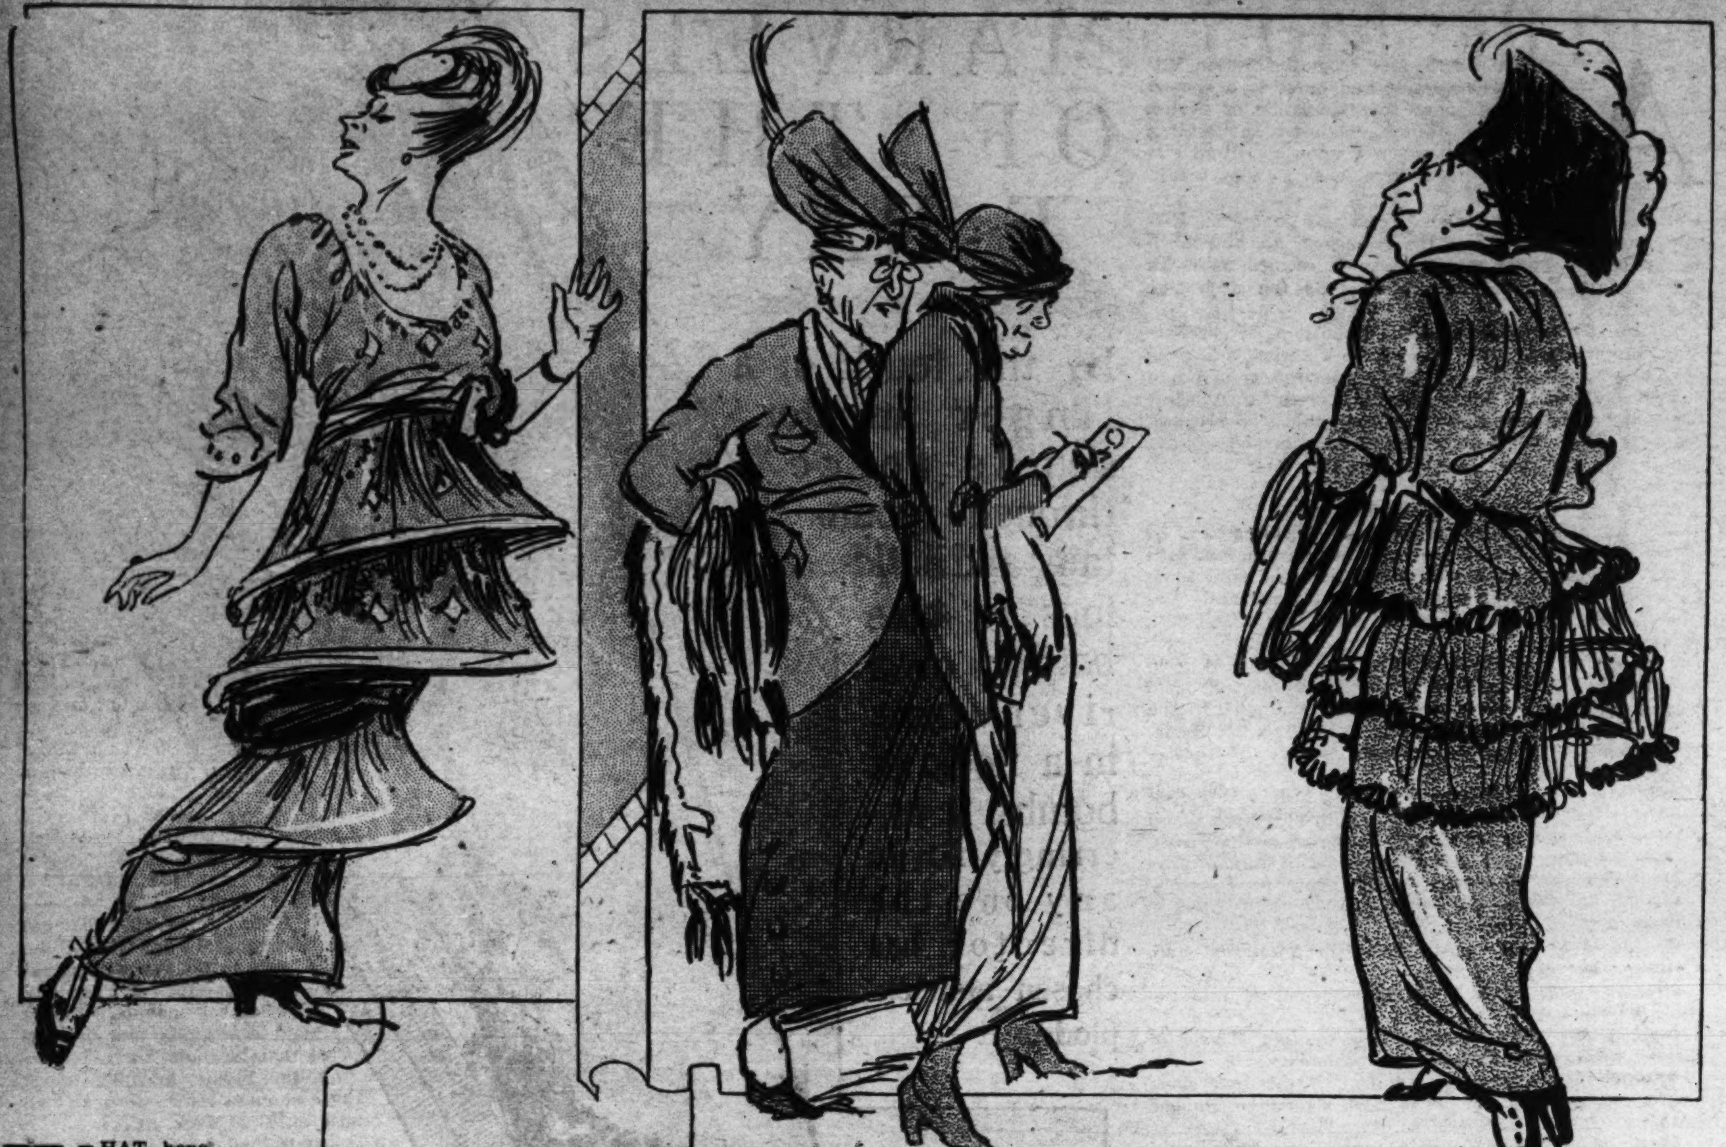
KILLING FASHION WITH RIDICULE



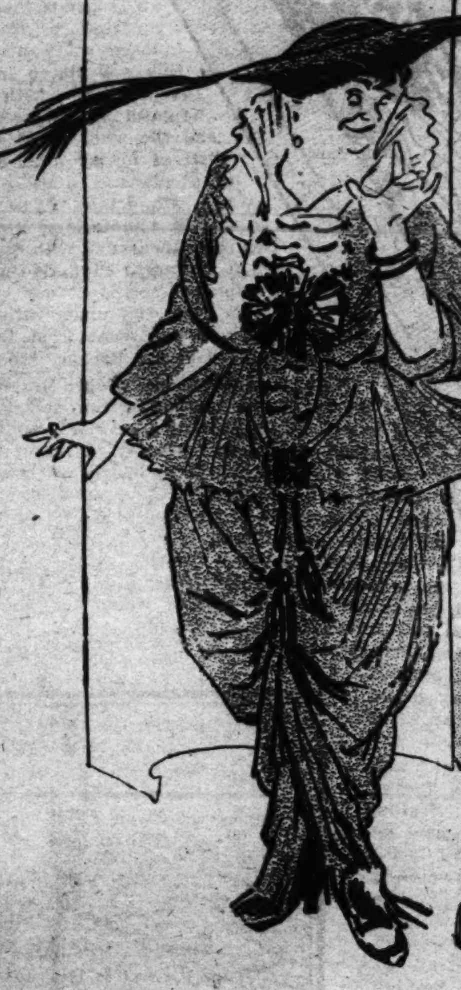
"Sem," Noted Caricaturist, Tackles the Job—How Can a Race of People Dress as Our Women Do, and Survive? He Asks

WHAT hope of success is there for the man who would reform woman's dress by laughing at it?

"Sem," greatest of French caricaturists, is seeking the answer in practical experiment. Which proves that even a Frenchman can take a joke seriously.

"Sem" looked about him the other day and trembled for the future of his country. He put himself through a little oral examination and flunked at the first two questions. They were: How can a people live that dresses as we do, and why? Let it be well understood that the "we" means all the feminine half of the civilized world.

"Sem" decided that something must be done and that he was the man to do it. It was a shrinking, modest little decision, inasmuch as a considerable section of the male population has spent many toilsome days and sleepless nights trying to devise a means of getting the ladies to dress differently, and none has been conspicuously successful thus far. Yet "Sem" seized his trusty crayon and valorously tackled the job.



His theory was that something might be done by showing exactly how laughable clothes are anyway. He designed a series of sketches which he called "The True and the False Chic." They were to be drawn from life, the model to be the Parisienne, as she actually appears in every-day life. He believed he could make bad taste in dressing appear so ludicrous that a reform would have to come and thereby the country would be saved.

With the deft touch which has made him pre-eminent of his kind, he succeeded in getting laughs. In one woman's costume he saw an Albanian's disguise and made the world see it that way. He showed another woman's marvelous resemblance to an altar candle, surrounded by frizzled paper, and revealed how another had divided herself up into three floors and how another had cut herself into cross sections.

He saw hats that were flower pots or skylights or casseroles, or pineapples, or harpoons, or telephone boxes, or diving helmets, or grappling irons, or butter molds. He saw hats that were "polyhedrons, elliptics, trapezia, polygons, condoids, and navicular, made in zinc, india rubber, pegamoid, celluloid, sheet-iron and sometimes even in straw and felt." In brief, he saw whatever was bizarre in apparel and reproduced it in such a way that nobody could miss the point.

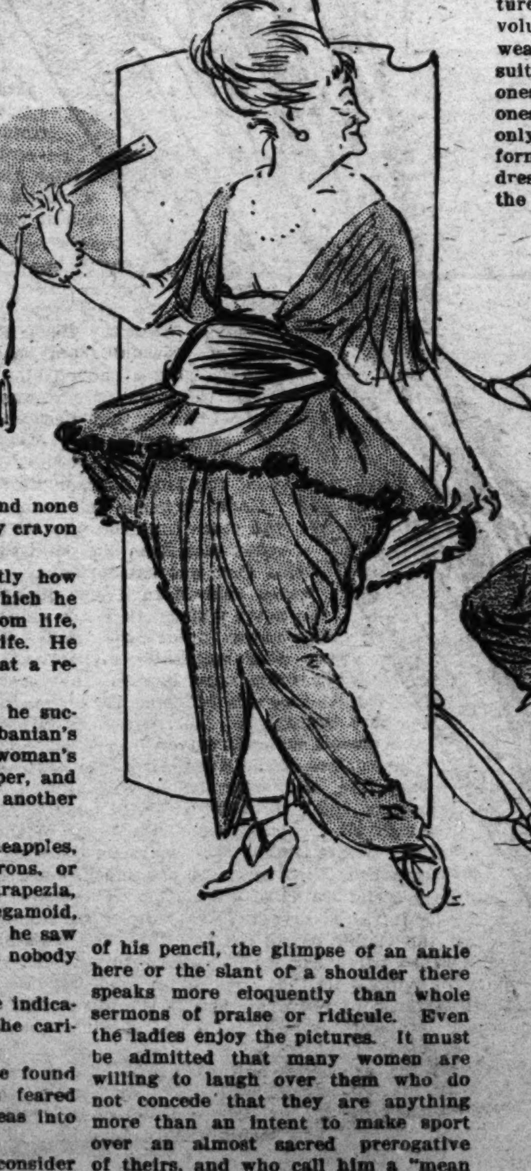
But did it all accomplish what "Sem" had hoped for? If so, all the indications of a general reform have been successfully concealed. Even the caricaturist fears the worst.

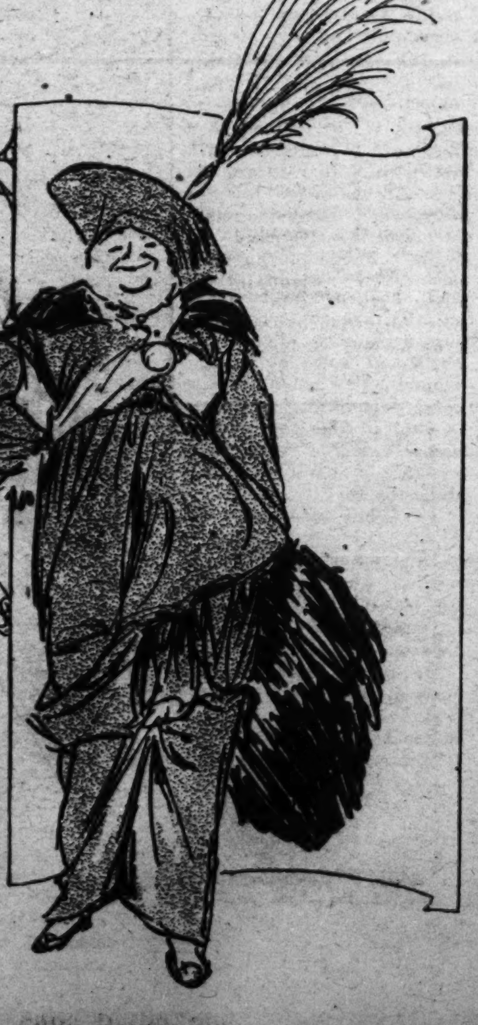
He remarked gloomily, the other day, that he believed few people found anything ridiculous in his most extravagant caricatures. He even feared that some well-intentioned ladies might try to carry some of his ideas into effect by making gowns like those in his pictures.

At the same time, he begs the ladies to pause a moment and consider whither they are drifting. He entreats them to study the costumes of their husbands and brothers, the inference being not that they should wear the same kind of clothes but that their clothes should have the same general ideas of concealment and utility.

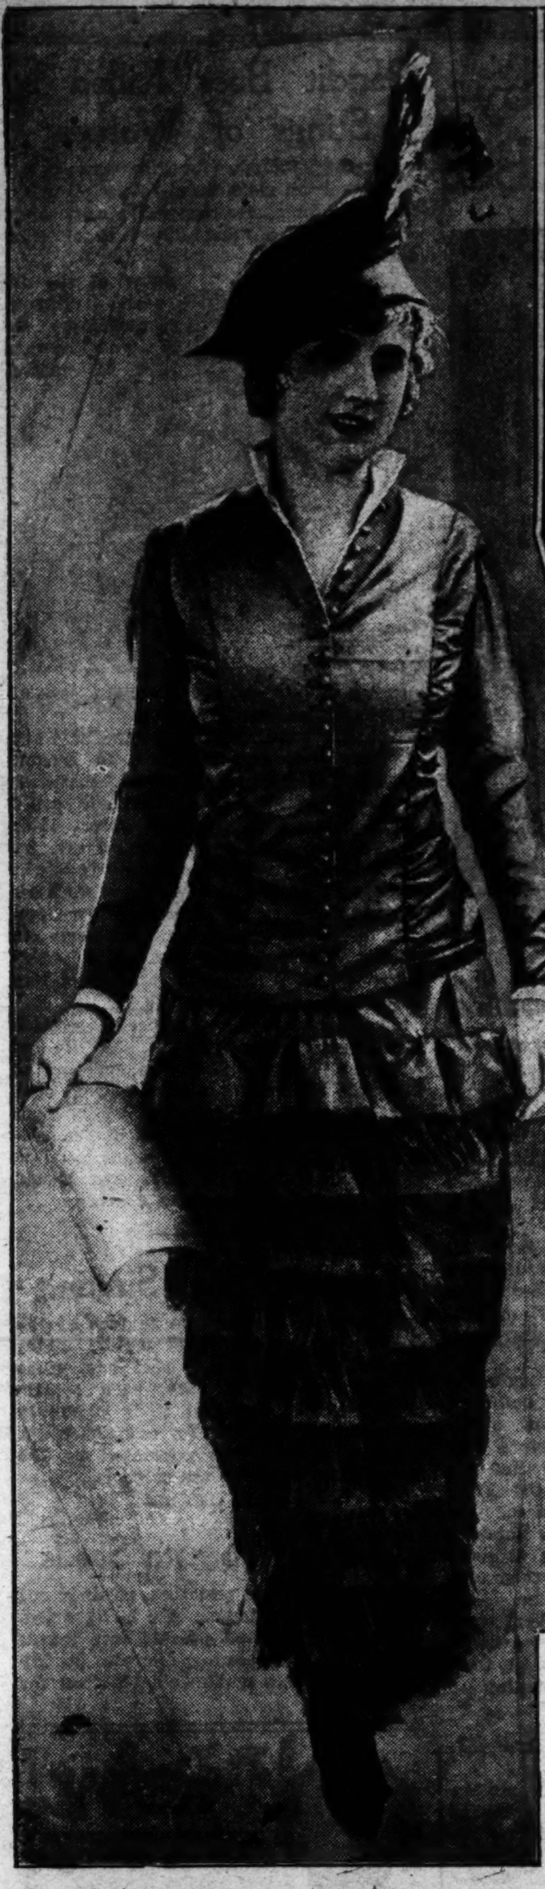
A glance into some of the fashion books by the French men's tailors, however, rather weakens the illustration. If the women can get themselves up to look any more freakish than some of these designs, what they need is not so much a caricaturist as a keeper.

However much or little "Sem" may have accomplished in the way of reform, he has at least succeeded in drawing some diverting pictures. He can make a smirk or a scowl tell volumes. There are angular vestals who are wearing clothes suited to plump ones and plump ones garbed as only the attenuate form should be dressed. Under the magic touch of his pencil, the glimpse of an ankle here or the slant of a shoulder there speaks more eloquently than whole sermons of praise or ridicule. Even the ladies enjoy the pictures. It must be admitted that many women are willing to laugh over them who do not concede that they are anything more than an intent to make sport over an almost sacred prerogative of theirs, and who call him a "mean old thing," even while them chuckle.

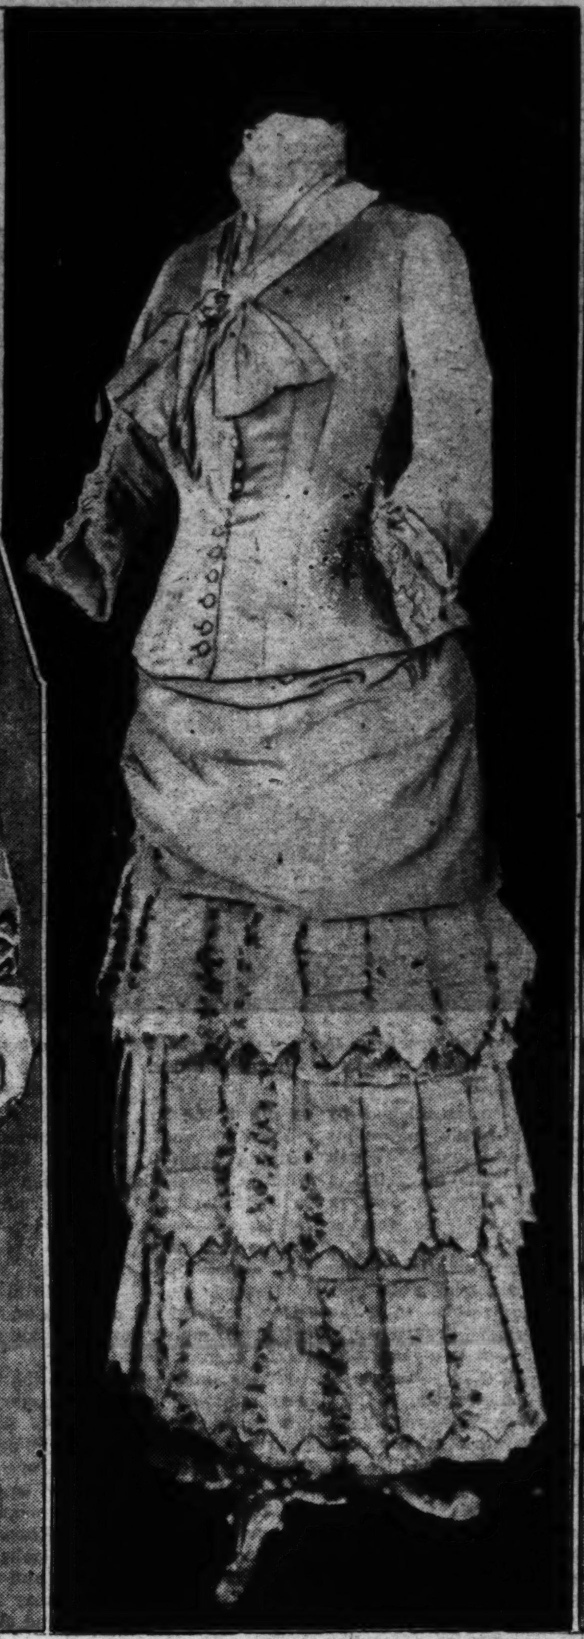




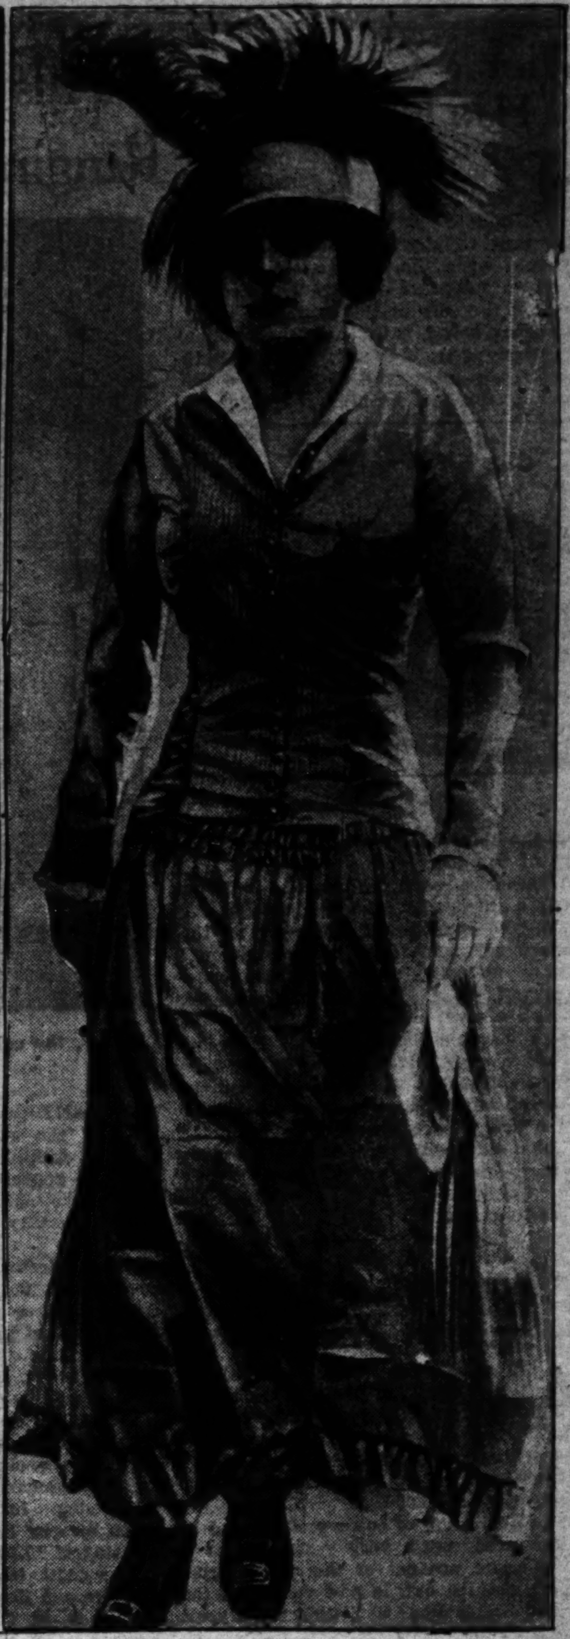
Now See What's Coming Into Style!



The above photograph shows the very latest costume design in Paris worn by a living model.



This gown was worn in 1863 by Mrs. W. S. Bartley of St. Louis. It was made in Paris.



Another of the new Paris costumes with basque much like those worn here during the Civil War.

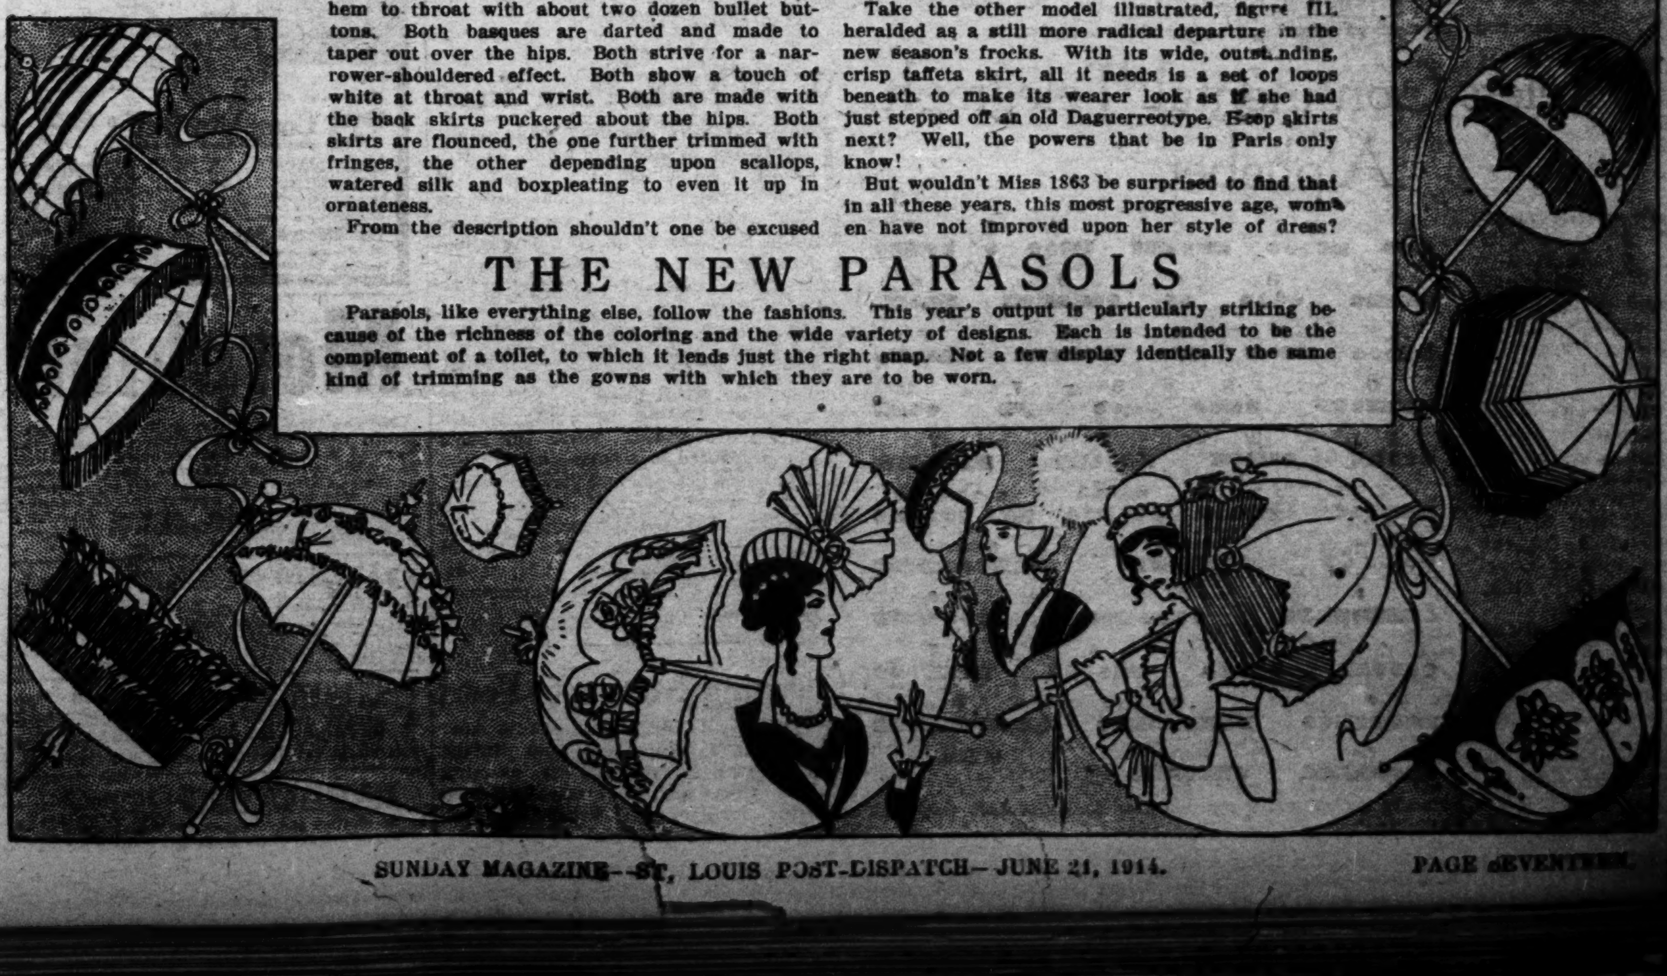
COMPARE the two costumes, figures I and II, illustrated on this page. Can you tell to which period of fashion each belongs? Taken point by point, it is rather confusing, isn't it? Let us see: Both are made with basques. Both are buttoned from hem to throat with about two dozen bullet buttons. Both basques are darted and made to taper out over the hips. Both strive for a narrower-shouldered effect. Both show a touch of white at throat and wrist. Both are made with the back skirts puckered about the hips. Both skirts are flounced, the one further trimmed with fringes, the other depending upon scallops, watered silk and boxpleating to even it up in ornateness.

From the description shouldn't one be excused for supposing they were gowns of the same period?

The truth of the matter is, one is the latest agony from Paris—the other was worn by a St. Louis belle of the season of 1863! One is a photograph of a gown in the collection of antiques gathered by Mrs. Harry E. Waggoner and exhibited at the Scruggs store during Pageant and Masque week. The other was photographed at an ultra fashionable racing meet in France just a few days ago.

Take the other model illustrated, figure III, heralded as a still more radical departure in the new season's frocks. With its wide, outstanding, crisp taffeta skirt, all it needs is a set of loops beneath to make its wearer look as if she had just stepped off an old Daguerreotype. Hoop skirts next? Well, the powers that be in Paris only know!

But wouldn't Miss 1863 be surprised to find that in all these years, this most progressive age, women have not improved upon her style of dress?



THE NEW PARASOLS

Parasols, like everything else, follow the fashions. This year's output is particularly striking because of the richness of the coloring and the wide variety of designs. Each is intended to be the complement of a toilet, to which it lends just the right snap. Not a few display identically the same kind of trimming as the gowns with which they are to be worn.

"MY WEEK in the MILL WHERE GIRLS WOULD SELL THEIR SOULS"

MRS. BARRATT O'HARA, wife of the Lieutenant-Governor of Illinois, worked for a week in a knitting factory in Bridgeport, Conn., while her husband handled shipping cases in a corset factory in the same town.

Both the youthful Lieutenant-Governor and his pretty, aristocratic wife sought the factory work because of a desire to acquire at first-hand a knowledge of working conditions among the men and women of a New England factory town. Dressed in rough clothes, suitable for the labor they sought, they left New York together, separating at the station in Bridgeport. The Lieutenant-Governor worked for three days at the pay of $¼ a week. On the third evening he was discharged; Mrs. O'Hara worked through the week, living the life of a factory girl, on a wage of $6 a week.

In that time Mrs. O'Hara made good at her job, although her evident inexperience brought her the unsolicited sympathy of some of her fellow-workers. She received three offers of marriage, one of them from the factory "catch," who earned $11 a week at his trade.

She has written the following account of her experience:

THE knitting factory loomed dark against the sky as I started down the street alone. Its straight sides of blackened brick seemed to assume grotesque masks of expression as I approached closer to the walls. I had a moment's feeling that the windows were eyes and mouths that grimaced at the April brightness of the morning, before a sudden glimpse of myself in the glass of a shop doorway recalled my attention to the part I had assumed and the task I was about to do.

I was wearing a dark blue suit of loose skirt and tight coat, a cheap blouse that I had bought in New York and a straw hat that had a wreath of flowers for trimming. I took off my gloves and put them in the big, black handbag I carried. A glimpse of my shoes startled me for a moment, for I had forgotten to bring them into conformity with the rest of my outfit and I feared that some sharp-witted forewoman might notice their incongruity with the skirt that only half-covered them. I tried to walk in such a way as to hide them as I came to the door of the factory.

As I opened the door an old man, who seemed to be a watchman, arose from a stool where he had been seated. "What do you want?" he grumbled, "work?" I gasped "Yes," feeling for the first time that I was really seeking employment for the reason that every other girl who had entered the factory before me sought it, the need of money for existence. He pointed to a low doorway. I followed his directing finger, to find myself in a room where glass partitions left a tiny square of space. Three girls were standing in this place. They moved a little, letting me stand beside them.

I became conscious of the roaring noise that pounded above our heads unceasingly. It was a roar that numbed the faculties, leaving me with the sensation of being already part of the pounding machinery of the place. The girl beside me, a very young, frail, white-lipped girl, shook her head once as she glanced at me, indicating that speech was impossible in the din about us. A big, dark-haired girl at the other side of her laughed shrilly at some shout of her companion, a peroxide blonde. The laugh rang out above the roar, then became part of it.

After a time that must have been an hour, a man came from the door of one of the partitions, staring at the four of us. He nodded to the two girls who had come together, evidently knowing them, and gave them slips. They grasped these eagerly and sped from the room.

"Any experience?" he asked the white-lipped girl and me. I was starting to say, "No," when she grasped my hand.

"Yes, sir," she said. "We worked together in Lawrence."

He looked at us keenly at the mention of the Massachusetts town. "Well, I guess you aren't firebrands, either of you," he said. "Can you run the machines?"

"Yes, sir," she told him, straining her voice to make it carry above the ceaseless roar.

He pushed us cards that we filled out. I wrote my own name from fright and force of habit. He looked at it mechanically. He studied hers a second longer. Then he gave us both slips of the sort he had given the two girls who had been in the room with us. The white-lipped girl led me to the hall and up a dingy stairway.

Up by a dirty window at the landing she spoke to me. "I had an awful time in Lawrence," she said. "I haven't had a job in months. I've found that two girls together can get work easier than one. That's why I put us together."

"That's all right," I told her. "Don't you live here?"

"I've got a room with some girls that work here," she said.

"Have they another?"

"I guess they can fix one," she said, "if you pay them $2 a week for it." She asked me my name and told me hers, Jennie Prentice. "If we ain't together in the room, I'll wait for you at the door at quitting time," she promised.

The "room" to which the slips admitted us seemed to me to be whirling, so many and so swift-moving were the machines that filled almost every inch of it. After a time I realized that there were people beside the machines, but my first impression of mechanical motion survived through the time I worked in the factory. A man who came from a tangle of wires looked at our cards and at us, motioned us to take off our hats, which we left with a pile of others in a tiny closet, then led us to a machine at the end of the room.

We threaded our way after him through tangles of whirring machinery. More than once I stopped in fear that my coat had caught in the wheels. The terrible din confused every thought, the fearful whirl dizzied sight.

A woman who stood before the machine hardly gave us a look as she went on with her work. The foreman nodded to the machine beside her. "You're her helper," he shouted. I must have looked dazed, for Jennie Prentice pushed me forward. "Bluff," she shouted in my ear as the foreman went away. "I'll come back and show you."

For ten minutes I stood before the machine, trying to see what the woman next to me was doing. The noise was so terrible that my head seemed about to burst from overpressure of sound on the ear drums. The light came gray through the closed windows. The air was horribly close and suffocating. All around me girls and women worked unceasingly without even glancing up from their machines.

Each one seemed to be doing some highly centralized bit. The woman beside me, I saw, was apparently moving a needle, set like a phonograph needle, backward to the same starting point whenever it had moved across a plane of space. Jennie Prentice was far down at the other end of the room. A man passed me and looked at me with more kindliness than curiosity.

"Want a start?" he cried. I nodded. He showed me how to work my machine. The woman beside me did not even glance up while he stood there, initiating me into work like her own.

It seemed hours before noon came. The sudden stopping of the machinery seemed to break something

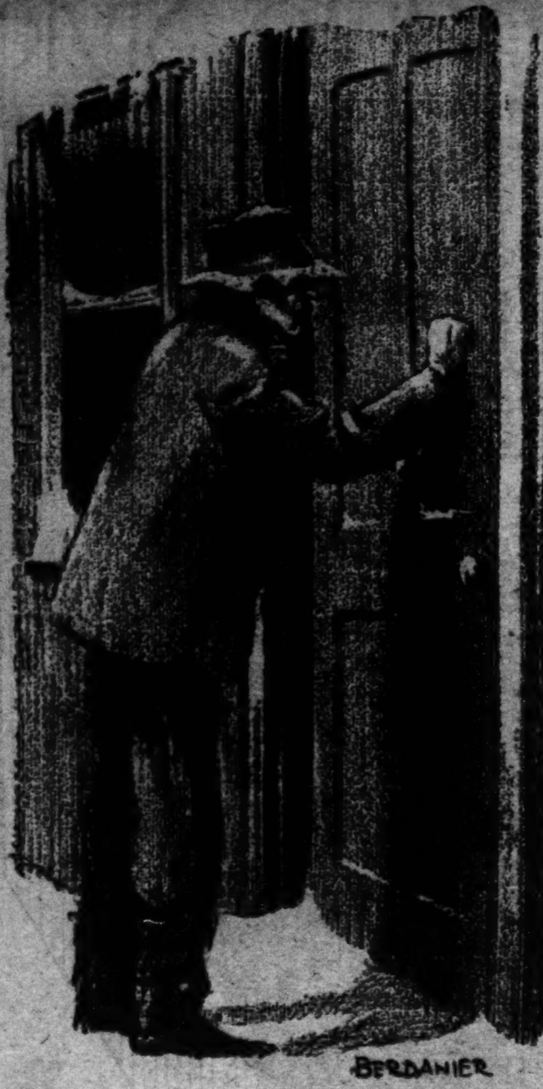
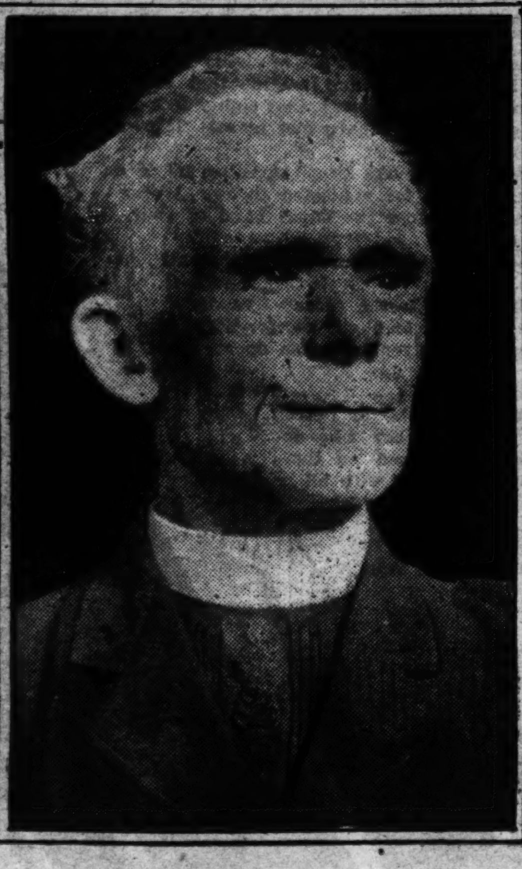
Human Driftwood at Father Coyle's Door

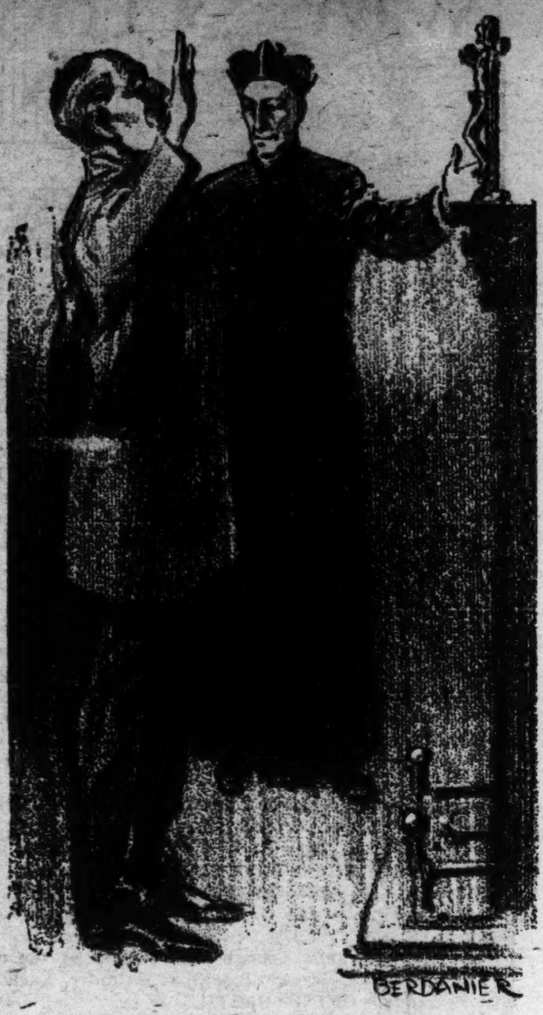
Protestants, Jews, nonbelievers seek the Old Cathedral pastor for counsel and material aid, both of which are unstintedly given ☙ How the venerable priest prevented a suicide



Father Coyle insists that those looking for assistance shall knock at front door.



FATHER COYLE.



Promising to abstain from liquor.

SMOTHERED by the dingy business buildings that hem it in on all sides, the old St. Louis Cathedral, in the heart of what was once called the Levee District, is so much cut off from most of the city's life that it looks forlorn and abandoned, in spite of the simple beauty of its architecture.

Soon it will be forgotten as a diocesan headquarters, when the great new temple at Newstead avenue and Lindell boulevard is sought by its thousands of worshipers. Yet it will be many a long year before the new Cathedral will have been hallowed by the human memories which endear the old to the hearts of all, Catholic, Protestant and unbeliever alike.

Not so much as an episcopal seat as a parish church has the old Cathedral caught the affection of a large section of the population. Across its front in three languages is the announcement that it is a house of prayer. It has been a house of prayer for those who did not believe in the tenets of the ecclesiastical organisation of which it is a part as well as for the most devout Catholics. This is principally because of the parish priest, the Rev. Father Coyle.

So it has happened that for the 30 years of his pastorate, men and women with no especial claims upon his time have taken their woes to him and found, nearly always, just the right sort of consolation. Many human tragedies have been unfolded in the simple reception room of the parish house. In many, many instances it has been a matter of poverty. Many times it has been the struggle of a soul with the great problems of eternity. Often it has been a question of business disaster, or domestic ruin, or conflicts with the devils of alcohol and drugs.

And always, whether the seeker were of the priest's own faith or not, there was kindliness and good cheer and maybe, in case of need, something more tangible in the way of money. Sometimes also there were stern, flaying verbal castigations wisely administered. For Father Coyle studies men rather than problems and knows which man needs the lash and which needs a friendly lift.

A typical story is that of a Jew who had failed after heavy speculation on the Stock Exchange. He had taken to drink and had decided to end his life. He was on his way to the river when he passed the church. An impulse caused him to enter.

Father Coyle listened to his tale, which was not particularly a new one to him. He read determination in the man's face—realized that it was not the usual suicide bluster to win sympathy.

"So you have finally decided to end it all?" he said, in a low, matter-of-fact voice.

"I have," was the firm reply.

"By what right?" the priest rejoined. "By what right do you take your life? Who told you it was yours to take? Did you give it to yourself? Can you restore it to yourself? How do you know that it is yours?"

Unmoved, the visitor shrugged his shoulders, saying, with a short, bitter laugh:

"As to that, I can only say that my life is highly offensive to me and I am going to take it."

The priest caught him by the arm, led him to a front window and pointed across the street.

"Those buildings over there," he said, "are offensive to me. They obstruct the view. I would like to destroy them, but they are not mine. Instead of taking your life, do me a favor, since you do not care what becomes of you. Go over there and burn them down for me."

The visitor looked at Father Coyle in amazement. "I—why, you know I can't do that!" he said. "You know that would be wrong—against the law"——

Then he broke off and his face flushed. His quick intelligence had brought him the lesson that the priest had meant to teach. He stood for a few moments as embarrassed as a schoolboy caught in a fault. Finally he seized Father Coyle's hand.

"You are right," he murmured. "I have as much right to do the one as the other and I shall do neither."

The man never finished his journey to the river. He went back to his home and once more became a man of genuine value to society.

There is the case of the poor mother whose boy is on the downward path. Perhaps he is a drunkard or a gambler. She asks the priest to use what influence he can to help the erring one to mend his ways. Her appeal is never unheeded. Catholic or noncatholic, she is urged to bring the boy to the clergyman or to help the clergyman to meet him. And then, whether the case calls for mild persuasiveness, or an appeal to the highest nature or to bitter scolding, the proper treatment is given.

According to Father Coyle, hundreds of noncatholic men have come to him to take a pledge to abstain from liquor. Many others have persuaded Catholics to visit the priest to take the pledge. The priest declares that more Protestants who have come to him for this purpose have kept the solemn obligation than have Catholics.

The procedure is simple. The drunkard is exhorted to change his ways. He expresses a desire to make a solemn obligation that will restrain him from further indulgence. The priest then leads him before a small crucifix on a mantel in the parlor of the parish house. The man simply promises that he will quit drinking and calls the "Savior of the World," as Father Coyle delights to call the Nazarene, to witness the promise.

"It is not easy to explain why this promise has been especially binding on Protestants," the priest remarked thoughtfully. "There may be several. The one I believe is principally responsible is purely theological. But the others are entitled to consideration.

"One is that it is a very unusual ceremony for a Protestant. The fact that he undertakes it at all is evidence that he is profoundly stirred. It leaves a lasting impression upon him because of a sense of unfamiliarity that a Catholic might not feel."

The priest was reticent in telling of many of the cases in which noncatholics have come to him for advice. Whether he considered this as somewhat akin to the secrecy of the confessional in his own church or whether it was due to the instinctive sentiment that such confidences ought not to be disclosed, he did not say. However, he did tell of many instances in which he had been of assistance to persons not, strictly speaking, within his flock.

He told of one of the city's errant women who came hesitantly to his door to ask his advice. She had heard he was a good man, she said, and she wanted to consult him, although she knew little of the teaching of his church. He was going away on a business matter at the time she came in, but he postponed this to talk to her. The result was a complete change of her outlook upon life and her removal from a sordid section of the city to a respectable neighborhood, where she ended her days in a respectable manner, with the esteem of her relatives and neighbors.

Almost any morning, when times are hard, a procession of men may be seen ringing the front door bell at the parish house. For the most part they are hungry men and they are in need of food. They are not the kind of men who go to kitchen doors to beg. In fact, nobody can get a meal by knocking at the back door of the old Cathedral house. Father Coyle's idea seems to be that the dignified way for an honest man who needs something to eat is to knock at the front door, tell his needs like a gentleman, regardless of personal embarrassment, and receive acceptance or rebuff square in the face. It is said that nobody has ever knocked at Father Coyle's front door in vain. Indeed, many an unfortunate, regardless of whether he paid spiritual allegiance to Rome, has gone away from the priest's house with a coin or so in his pockets to help him on his way.

Father Coyle has been a priest 42 years, having been born in the North of Ireland. Before he took his present pastorate he was in charge of a church in Northeast Missouri. He is a slight man of rather better than medium height. An esthetic face, relieved from sternness by thin, smiling lips, blue, clear eyes, completely shaded by overhanging brows, thin, strong hands, a rather high voice, with more than a touch of brogue in it when he is excited or merry, and an infectious laugh mark him as a man who has seen much of the world and who sympathizes with its indulgences while he rebukes its shortcomings or rails at its follies.

80 FEET A SECOND IN A MOTOR BOAT!

While we were talking, two mechanics had been silently filling oil and gasoline tanks.

"Put on the life preserver and strap it tight," said Beebe. "You can't tell what might happen at this speed. Come on."

I was sitting on the thick cushion in the driver's seat, gripping the wheel. Jack leaned over and threw the clutch. We went forward so suddenly that it was like being shot out of a cannon. For a moment we splashed clouds of spray. A tremendous, deafening roar came from the exhausts. I leaned over and tried to shout to Jack to "open her up." And in that roar I couldn't make a sound.

The open exhausts poured out volumes of blistering hot gas, which was driven back into my face. I leaned aside and gulped fresh air like a man coming up from a dive. As we made a wide turn spray, shipped through the air, wet the steering wheel. I dried my hands, one at a time, to get a better grip. Jack Beebe, watching me, closed his throttle and slowed the boat down. When he could be heard he said:

"Don't let the wheel move more than an inch or two. If the rudder twists at that speed it'll throw us out or flip the boat upside down quicker than lightning."

Back we went down the river, tearing past the ranges for a speed trial. A canoe with two men in it paddled across our course. We passed them within twenty feet. I glanced back over my shoulder. The canoe was rocking gently. We threw no wave, for we were running on the heel of the second plane, fairly on top of the water.

Behind us was a white streak of foam, a creamy, misty white. We were going so fast that I saw no bubbles or ripples on the water. I felt as if I were riding on a falling star and looking back at the silvery trail of it. Arching across our wake, right through the mist, hung a brilliant rainbow of our own. It belonged to us, there in the boat. No one else could see it.

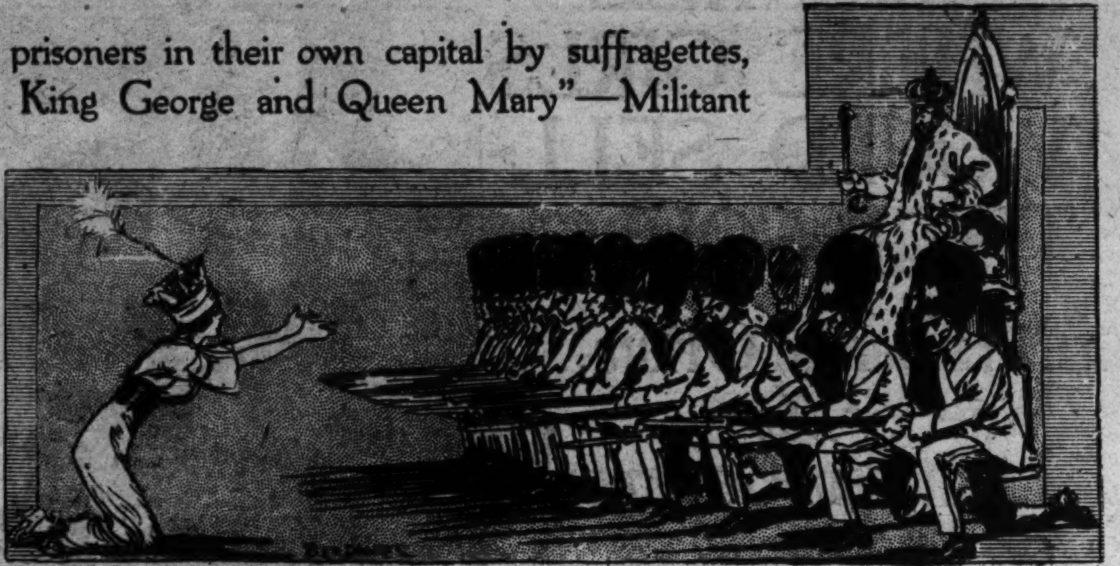
At lunch Chris. Smith told us how he had built the fastest boat in the world. Whoever it was said that "genius is the infinite capacity for taking pains" must have had Chris. Smith in mind.

"We used all the good points of the others," he said. "Then we put the engine in and tried her out. For two months we made trial after trial. I shifted the engine back inch by inch. I took the boat apart and shifted her planes, an inch at a time. I built her and tore her down and rebuilt her, and at last we got all we can get. She's the fastest thing that ever went atop of water. This afternoon you can get a surveyor and give her another trying out."

The Siege of Buckingham Palace

WAR OF SEXES ACTUALLY ON ❧ CONAN DOYLE

British Sovereigns held virtual prisoners in their own capital by suffragettes, whose motto is: "No Rest for King George and Queen Mary"—Militant demonstration occurs whenever they venture to stir out in public—Palace guarded against attack day and night by 1500 policemen. . . .



ON his recent arrival in the United States Sir Arthur Conan Doyle expressed the foreboding that in the near future the English people, in the matter of the militant suffragettes, will take affairs into their own hands and that the result will be nothing less than lynching. No sensation-monger is the creator of the cold and analytical Sherlock Holmes, but a clear-visioned student of current events. Yet his prediction has no less atrocious a meaning than that the imminent possibility exists of British streets being the scene of history's first war between the sexes.

In other words, to such a pitch have mutual outrages wrought the passions of both militants and the English public that the ancient Teutonic veneration for women as women which Tacitus noted with astonishment, the century-old chivalry developed when knighthood was in flower, are about to be demolished at a stroke. As a keen observer points out, such an event would strike a deadly blow at Occidental idealism concerning women, and would fill with triumph the advocates of the Oriental system of harems, veils and captivity. Some such denouement was presaged centuries ago by Montesquieu in his "Persian Letters."

Dispatches arriving almost daily from London confirm Sir Arthur's apprehensions to the extent that they reveal the growth of an ominous change in the spirit of the suffragettes and their enemies. Above the suffragette camp there shrill today the piercing and passionate accents of vengeance—vengeance for imprisonment, for forcible feeding, for police coercion, for the treachery, as they proclaim it, of Premier Asquith's Government. From all reports, the extremists among the female rebels have become keyed up to a hysterical desperation, to a frenzy which in many cases seems almost deranged. They have won a new nickname, that of "wild women."

On the other hand, there is ample evidence that John Bull's slow but dangerous exasperation has at last been aroused. News dispatches continually relate, nowadays, that "the militants were protected by the police from the fury of the mob." Women have been mauled, clubbed until they bled, ducked in ponds. Father Bernard Vaughan, brother of the late Cardinal Vaughan, is quoted as saying, in regard to a proposal to let militants on hunger strike perish of starvation: "There would be nothing ethically wrong in letting them die;" and the Rev. Arthur Waldron, vicar of St. Matthew's, Brixton, added: "If the women refuse food they should be allowed to die."

The argument is met on every hand in England that the women have deliberately availed themselves of man's tolerance of their sex to commit offenses for which men, had they been guilty, would have been shot down with machine guns. Not the least of these is their new campaign which the British journals denounce as lese majesty. This is the policy of besieging the King of England in his own palace of Buckingham, of directing a crusade of intimidation against the throne itself, of fulfilling the slogan: "No rest for King George and Queen Mary."

A direct attack on the palace, made by women armed with clubs and led by Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, was made on May 21. Several hundred women gathered in Grosvenor Garden, stormed the gate at Constitution Hill, and began marching through the palace gardens to the royal quadrangle itself. In anticipation of the attack, 1500 policemen were on guard about the palace, many of them mounted.

Inside of the gate a furious battle raged. Women seized the bridles of the mounted constables and tried to drag them from their horses. The women wielded clubs with such effect that many heads were broken. They bit, scratched and mauled the policemen, and were in turn knocked down and disarmed. They threw cans of paint upon the policemen's clothes and into their faces. The women fought their way to the very railings of the palace and clung to them until rapped over the fingers with police clubs. Many arrests were made, including that of Mrs. Pankhurst, who was carried away bodily.

For weeks the King has been practically under siege in his own palace and in his own capital of London. And let no one imagine that the siege is not effective because no cannon is trained upon the palace wall and the assailants and defenders are not firing upon each other with bullets. Day and night the royal park is surrounded by a regiment of policemen. King George and Queen Mary have been compelled to abandon their daily rides in Rotten Row for fear of the suffragettes. Sylvia Pankhurst is believed to be lurking mysteriously in a house overlooking the palace, ready to give the signal for attack if at any point there appears a relaxation of vigilance.

The sovereigns have not been able to appear for weeks at any place of public entertainment without being assailed face to face by militants, who pelt them with prayers, denunciations and pamphlets. They have been harassed at the theaters, the concerts and the races. An order has been issued from suffragette headquarters that there shall be no public appearance of Their Majesties without a militant demonstration.

The movement has penetrated even into the ranks of the court, and the monarchs are not safe from annoyance even at their own receptions. Witness the noblewoman who recently, in the midst of a levee, threw herself at the King's feet with a petition against forcible feeding. The terror under which the royal household labors was shown by the fact that it almost suffered nervous prostration when a drunken laborer passed through all the guards and, unmolested, explored the palace from the basement to the sixth floor before he was detected. "Supposing it had been a suffragette with a bomb!" the household exclaimed with shudders.

As Sir Arthur remarked, we on this side of the water can have little idea of the gravity which the situation has attained in England. But a parallel may bring the crisis home to us.

Supposing that President Wilson had been compelled to retreat into the White House behind a thousand guards, and scarcely dared venture forth. Supposing that Secretary Bryan were set upon by women who would knock him down, drag him along the ground and thrash him soundly—as happened to Premier Asquith. Supposing that Secretary Lane's house were burned down and he found near by the salutation on a placard: "Militancy is not dead, but if you are not so already you soon will be."

Transferring the scene to St. Louis, imagine that bombs were set off in the New Cathedral and wrecked the Dragging a suffragette along the ground when she lay down and refused to get up—An incident of Mrs. Pankhurst's charge upon Buckingham Palace.

Rage and pain are printed on the face of this militant, who finds herself handled as roughly by the police as if she were a man.

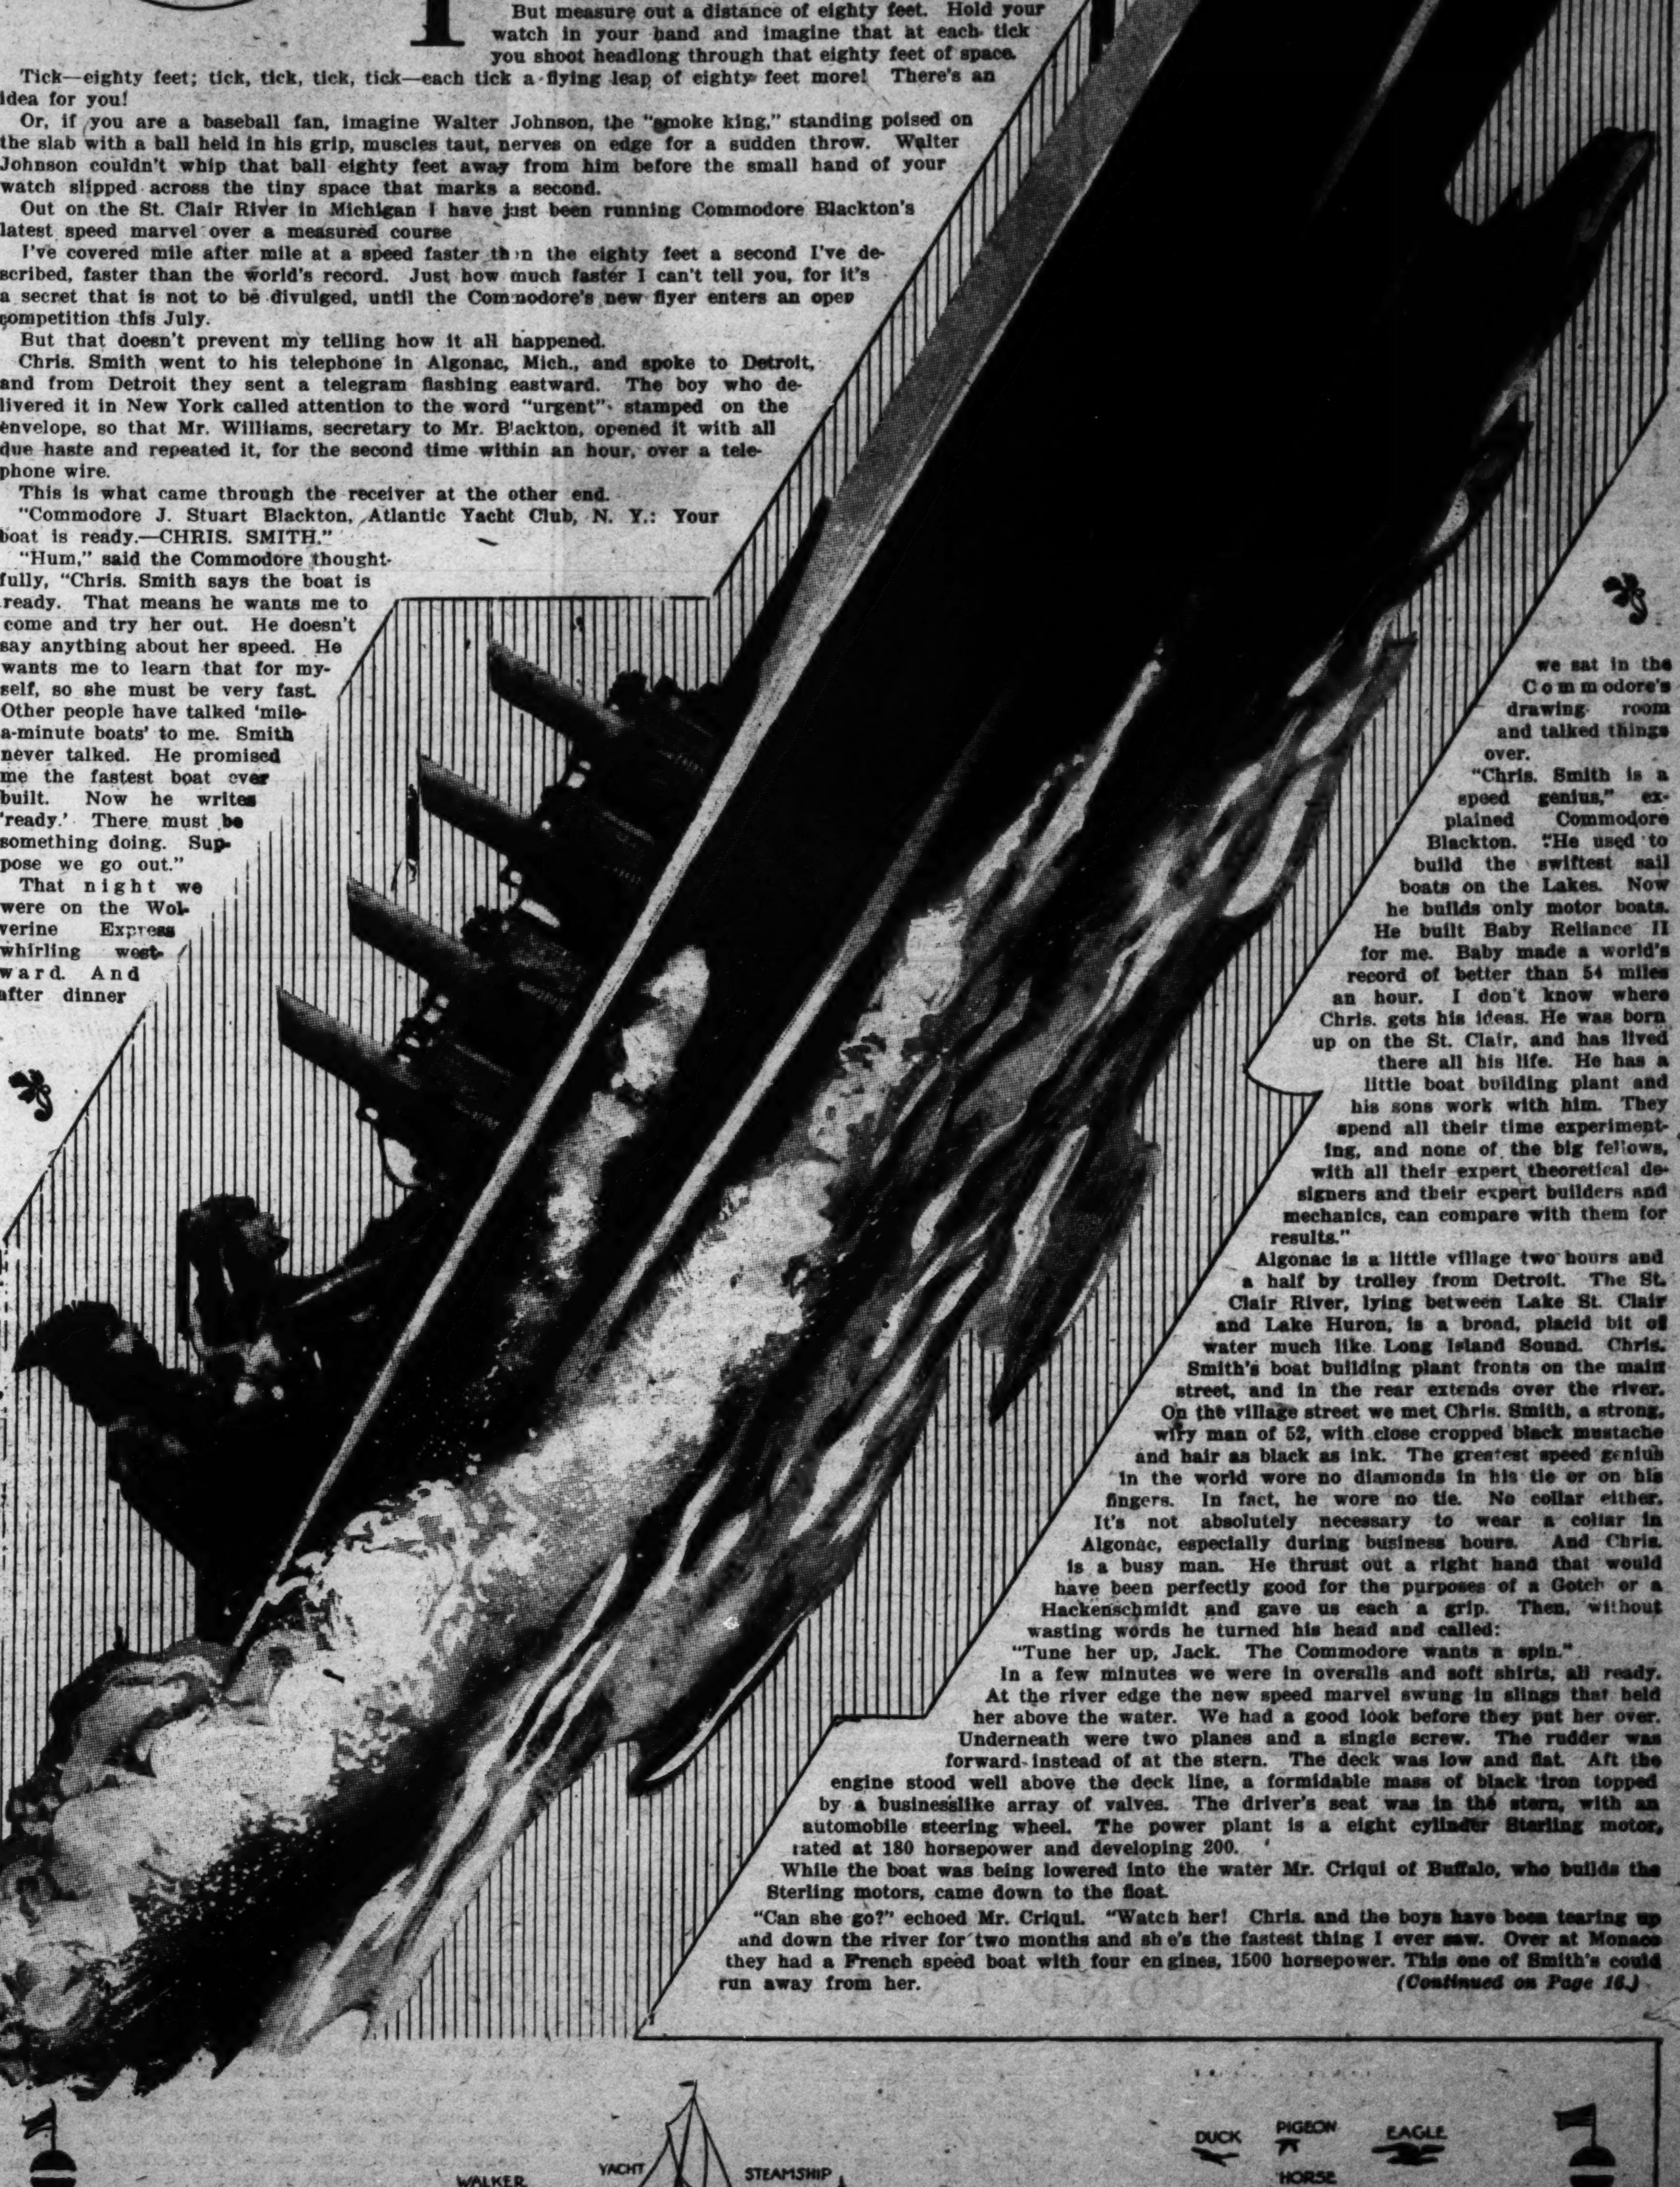
80 FEET A SECOND IN A MOTOR BOAT!

Noted sport writer tells how he tried out water racer he declares is the fastest ever built. . . .

By ROBERT EDGREN.



IMAGINE yourself zipping along over the water in the fastest speed boat ever built, mile after mile, and each mile faster than the best on the record books.

That may not give your imagination much of a thrill.

But measure out a distance of eighty feet. Hold your watch in your hand and imagine that at each tick you shoot headlong through that eighty feet of space.

Tick—eighty feet; tick, tick, tick, tick—each tick a flying leap of eighty feet more! There's an idea for you!

Or, if you are a baseball fan, imagine Walter Johnson, the "smoke king," standing poised on the slab with a ball held in his grip, muscles taut, nerves on edge for a sudden throw. Walter Johnson couldn't whip that ball eighty feet away from him before the small hand of your watch slipped across the tiny space that marks a second.

Out on the St. Clair River in Michigan I have just been running Commodore Blackton's latest speed marvel over a measured course

I've covered mile after mile at a speed faster than the eighty feet a second I've described, faster than the world's record. Just how much faster I can't tell you, for it's a secret that is not to be divulged, until the Commodore's new flyer enters an open competition this July.

But that doesn't prevent my telling how it all happened.

Chris. Smith went to his telephone in Algonac, Mich., and spoke to Detroit, and from Detroit they sent a telegram flashing eastward. The boy who delivered it in New York called attention to the word "urgent" stamped on the envelope, so that Mr. Williams, secretary to Mr. Blackton, opened it with all due haste and repeated it, for the second time within an hour, over a telephone wire.

This is what came through the receiver at the other end.

"Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, Atlantic Yacht Club, N. Y.: Your boat is ready.—CHRIS. SMITH."

"Hum," said the Commodore thoughtfully, "Chris. Smith says the boat is ready. That means he wants me to come and try her out. He doesn't say anything about her speed. He wants me to learn that for myself, so she must be very fast. Other people have talked 'mile-a-minute boats' to me. Smith never talked. He promised me the fastest boat ever built. Now he writes 'ready.' There must be something doing. Suppose we go out."

That night we were on the Wolverine Express whirling westward. And after dinner we sat in the Commodore's drawing room and talked things over.

"Chris. Smith is a speed genius," explained Commodore Blackton. "He used to build the swiftest sail boats on the Lakes. Now he builds only motor boats. He built Baby Reliance II for me. Baby made a world's record of better than 54 miles an hour. I don't know where Chris. gets his ideas. He was born up on the St. Clair, and has lived there all his life. He has a little boat building plant and his sons work with him. They spend all their time experimenting, and none of the big fellows, with all their expert theoretical designers and their expert builders and mechanics, can compare with them for results."

Algonac is a little village two hours and a half by trolley from Detroit. The St. Clair River, lying between Lake St. Clair and Lake Huron, is a broad, placid bit of water much like Long Island Sound. Chris. Smith's boat building plant fronts on the main street, and in the rear extends over the river. On the village street we met Chris. Smith, a strong, wiry man of 52, with close cropped black mustache and hair as black as ink. The greatest speed genius in the world wore no diamonds in his tie or on his fingers. In fact, he wore no tie. No collar either. It's not absolutely necessary to wear a collar in Algonac, especially during business hours. And Chris. is a busy man. He thrust out a right hand that would have been perfectly good for the purposes of a Gotch or a Hackenschmidt and gave us each a grip. Then, without wasting words he turned his head and called:

"Tune her up, Jack. The Commodore wants a spin."

In a few minutes we were in overalls and soft shirts, all ready. At the river edge the new speed marvel swung in slings that held her above the water. We had a good look before they put her over. Underneath were two planes and a single screw. The rudder was forward instead of at the stern. The deck was low and flat. Aft the engine stood well above the deck line, a formidable mass of black iron topped by a businesslike array of valves. The driver's seat was in the stern, with an automobile steering wheel. The power plant is a eight cylinder Sterling motor, rated at 180 horsepower and developing 200.

While the boat was being lowered into the water Mr. Criqui of Buffalo, who builds the Sterling motors, came down to the float.

"Can she go?" echoed Mr. Criqui. "Watch her! Chris. and the boys have been tearing up and down the river for two months and she's the fastest thing I ever saw. Over at Monaco they had a French speed boat with four engines, 1500 horsepower. This one of Smith's could run away from her.

PREDICTS LYNCHING OF MILITANTS BY ENGLISH MOB

Hand-to-hand engagements with clubs fought between men and women—Firearms and bombs discharged in Glasgow riot—Militant hacks museum attendant with hatchet altar, and that Christ Church Cathedral and the Second Baptist Church were destroyed by fire. Supposing that an epidemic of fires consumed a dozen mansions in Portland and Westmoreland places and in Weshington Terrace, and that a conflagration started among the lumber yards in South St. Louis and caused damage of half a million dollars. Then conceive that the public library is set on fire and wrecked. Imagine "arson squads" of women let loose upon the city and causing nearly $3,000,000 of damage to property in a year. Imagine almost daily battles on the city hall lawn between women and policemen, both sides wielding clubs. Then, with all these things in mind, one may have an inkling of why John Pull's "dander" is at last up.

Take what happened during the one week between May 31 and June 6 of this year. On Sunday services in St. Paul's Cathedral in London and in the Cathedral at Birmingham were disrupted by women who invaded the pulpit to shriek out their arguments. On the same day the parish church at St. Mary's, Wargrave, which was built in 1539, was burned to the ground. The warning was left: "Stop persecuting women."

Wednesday of that week was a day of versatile and far-flung outrage. The cricket pavilion at Earl's Field, near London, was burned. A large country residence was set on fire near Belfast, in Ireland. A militant, found chopping pictures to pieces in the Dore Gallery, London, turned upon an attendant who attempted to stop her and hacked him savagely with a hatchet. Militants waylaid the chief medical officer of Hollaway Jail, who is held responsible for the invention of forcible feeding, and horsewhipped him. This was no new experience for him, for he had been similarly thrashed several months before. On the next day occurred the militant scandal at the King's reception.

On July 6 two well-dressed women, one of whom was magnified by the terror of her victim into a "giantess," entered the offices of two newspapers in Belfast which had opposed female suffrage. With the skill of a pugilist, the giantess landed with her mighty right upon the jaw of the managing editor of each paper, knocking both of then from their chairs and sending one to a hospital for repairs. Simultaneously a mansion stored with priceless examples of antique art was burned with all of its contents near High Wycombe, in Buckinghamshire, 30 miles from London.

The month of May was an eventful one. The sovereigns, entertaining the King and Queen of Denmark at Covent Garden, were heckled by a woman who towered in a box nearby. At a suffrage meeting in London a cry of "Shoot the King!" was received with wild applause. On May 21 came the attack on Buckingham Palace, and a few days later the palace was stoned and many windows broken. A suffragette smashed a row of windows in the National Gallery, another slashed Sargent's portrait of Henry James in the Royal Academy, and at the same gallery another demolished a historic picture of the Duke of Wellington.

During the same

Some of the militants dashed forward as far as the palace railing, to which they clung until policemen dragged them away or made them loose their grasp by rapping their fingers.

Ejecting a militant who hurled denunciations at the King while he and the Queen were entertaining the King and Queen of Denmark at the theater.

THE SHADOW OF THE ROPE

By E. W. Hornung

Well, sir, I not only let him do that, but I gave him a good sup o' whisky, too!"

"Quite right," said Langholm; "and then?"

"It seemed to pull him together a bit, and he began to talk. He wanted to know about all the grand folk round about, where they lived and how long they'd lived there. At last he made me tell him the way to Normanthorpe House."

"But did he go to Normanthorpe?"

"He started, though I begged him to sit still while we tried to get him a trap from the village, but he wouldn't. And he was hardly out of sight when we see him come staggering back with his handkerchief up to his mouth and the blood dripping through his fingers into the road."

"A hemorrhage!"

"Yes, sir; you was the very word the doctor used, and he says if he has another it'll be all up. So you may think what a time I've had! If he's a friend of yours, sir, I'm sure I don't mind. In any case, poor gentleman"——

"He is a friend of mine," interrupted Langholm, "and we must do all we can for him. I should like to see the poor fellow if I may."

"He is expecting you, sir. He told Dr. Sedley he must see you the moment you arrived, and the doctor said he might."

"Then I'll go up alone, Mrs. Brunton, if you don't mind."

Severino was lying in a high square bed, his black locks tossed upon a spotless pillow no whiter than his face.

"Do you forgive me?" he whispered.

"What for?" smiled Langholm. "You had a right to come where you liked; It is a free country, Severino."

And the sound man took the sick one's hand with womanly tenderness.

"You do not ask me why I did it," came from the tremulous lips.

"Perhaps I know."

"I will tell you if you are right."

"It was to see her again—your kindest friend—and mine," said Langholm, gently.

"Yes! It was to see her again—before I die!"

And the black eyes blazed again.

"You shall see her," said Langholm, tenderly, gravely, as he rose to go.

. . . .

"I AM glad you have come back," said Dr. Sedley with relief. "Of course, eventually, he will require trained nursing, either here or somewhere else; there is only one end to such a case, but it needn't come yet, unless he has another hemorrhage. As to his seeing any ladies who like to look him up, by all means, only one at a time, and they mustn't excite him."

The doctor had called within an hour of the return of Langholm, who repeated these stipulations upstairs, with his own undertaking in regard to Rachel. He would write that night and beg her to call the following day.

This letter written, there was a small pile of them awaiting attention on top of the old bureau. One attracted his particular attention. He noticed that it bore the Northborough postmark, also that the handwriting was that of an illiterate person, and his very surname misspelled. The contents were as follows:

Northborough, Aug. 18, 189—.

Mr. Langham, Sir:

I here as you are on the tracks of them that murdered Alexander Minchin, if you want to know of them that had a Reason for doing it I can give you the straight Tip.

I have been out to your place tonight, but you are only due home tomorrow night, therefore, I will be your way again tomorrow night, but will only come to the cross-roads as your old girl look suspichious last night and this is on the strickt Q. T.

Till tomorrow night then at the cross-roads near your place, from nine to ten tomorrow night, when you will here of something to your advantage.

Believe your's faithly,
JOHN WILLIAM ABEL.

Langholm could not guess who this man Abel might be, but idly imagined him one of the innumerable drones who stood about the street corners of Northborough from morning till night. That evening, however, the novelist sallied forth to meet his correspondent.

It was a dark night, for the rain was by no means over, though not actually falling at the moment; and the cross-roads, which lay low, with trees in all four angles, was a dark spot at full moon. But there was a light ready waiting for him, for his illiterate correspondent was on the ground before him, with a cutty-pipe in full blast.

"Name of Langholm?" said a rather rollicking voice.

"That's it," said Langholm; "if your's is Abel, I have got your letter."

"You have, have you?" cried the other. "And what did you think of it?"

The glowing pipe lit a wild, brown beard and mustache, thickly streaked with gray, a bronzed nose, and nothing more. Langholm kept his distance, stick in hand.

"As yet," said he sternly, "I think very little of either you or your letter. Who are you and what do you mean by writing to me like that?"

"Steady, mister; you do know my name!" remonstrated the man, in rather more respectful tones. "It's Abel—John William—and as much at your service as you like if you take him proper; but he comes from a country where Jack isn't the dirt under his master's feet, and you're no master o' mine."

"I don't want to be, my good fellow," rejoined Langholm, modifying his own manner in turn. "Then you are not a Northborough man?"

"Not me!"

"I seem to have heard your voice before," said Langholm. "Where do you come from?"

"A little place called Australia."

"The devil you do!"

And Langholm stood very still in the dark, for now he knew who this man was, and what manner of evidence he might furnish, and against whom.

"You're the man I saw 'knocking down your check,'" he said at last, "at an inn near here called the Packhorse."

"I am so!" cried the fellow, with sudden savagery. "And do you know where I got the check to knock down? I believe he's a friend of yours and he calls himself Steel!"

"But do you mean to tell me that it was Mr. Steel to whom you referred in your letter?"

"I do so!" cried Abel.

Langholm lowered his voice, though neither foot nor hoof had passed or even sounded in the distance.

"Do you actually hint that Mr. Steel has or could have been a gainer by Mr. Minchin's death?"

Abel pondered his reply.

"What I will say," he declared at length, "is that he might have been a loser by his life!"

"You are not thinking of—of Mrs. Steel?" queried Langholm, after pausing in his turn.

"Bless you, no! She wasn't born or thought of, so far as we was concerned, when we were all three mates up the bush."

"Ah, all three!"

"Steel, Minchin and me," nodded Abel.

"And you were mates?"

"Well, we were and we weren't; that's just it. I was overseer at the principal outstation and Minchin was overseer in at the homestead. But Steel was the boss, damn him!"

"But if the station was his?" queried Langholm. "I suppose it was a station?" he added.

"Was it a station?" the ex-overseer echoed. "Only about the biggest and the best in the blessed back-blocks—that's all! Oh, yes, it was his all right; bought it for a song after the bad seasons 15 years ago, and sold it in the end for a quarter of a million, after making a fortune off of his clips alone. And what did I get out of it?" demanded Abel furiously. "What was my share? A beggarly check same as he gave me the other day and not a penny more!"

"I don't know how much that was," remarked Langholm; "but if you weren't a partner what claim had you on the profits?"

"Aha! that's tellings," said Abel, with a sudden change both of tone and humor; "that's what I'm here to tell you, if you really want to know! Rum thing! One morning I turn up at his grand homestead here—and you know what! It was a check for three figures. And why do you suppose?"

"I suppose there is some secret," said the novelist, taking a fresh grip of his stick, in sudden loathing of the man.

"Ah! You've hit it."

"And did Mr. Minchin know this secret?"

"He did."

"You would tell him, of course?"

This sort of scorn was too delicate for John William Abel, yet even he seemed to realize that an admission must be accompanied by some form of excuse.

"I did tell him," he said, "for I felt I owed it to him. He was a good friend to me, was Mr. Minchin, and neither of us was getting enough for all we did. So one night I told him what I knew. The boss treated Minchin like a son, and perhaps he wasn't such a good son as he might have been. But when he made the suggestion that I thought would come best from him"——

"That you should both be taken into partnership on the spot, I suppose?" interrupted Langholm.

"Well, yes; something like that."

"Go on, Abel. I won't interrupt again. What happened then?"

"Well, he'd got to go, had Mr. Minchin! And go he did, with his tail between his legs. I believe it was the boss who started him in Western Australia."

"Not such a bad boss," remarked Langholm, dryly. "And what happened to you?"

"I stayed on."

"And you kept this secret up your sleeve to play it for all it was worth in a country where it would be worth more than it was in the back-blocks?"

"Well, if I did, that's my affair."

"Oh, certainly. Only you came here at your own proposal in order, I suppose, to sell this secret to me?"

"Yes, to sell it."

"Then, you see, it is more or less my affair as well."

"It may be," said Abel doggedly. And his face was very evil as he struck a match to relight his pipe.

"Well, and what's your price?"

"Fifty pounds sterling."

"Nonsense! I'm not a rich man like Mr. Steel."

"Not twenty [illegible] hard cash?"

"No me; but look here, mister; you show me thirty and we'll see."

The voice drew uncomfortably close. Langholm laughed aloud.

"Did you really think I would come to meet the writer of a letter like yours, at night, in a spot like this, with a single penny piece in my pocket? Come to my cottage and we'll settle there."

"I'm not coming in!"

"To the gate, then. It isn't three hundred yards from this."

Langholm set off at a brisk walk, his heart in his mouth. In another minute they were at the wicket.

There were other lights in the other cottage. It was not at all late. A warm parallelogram appeared and disappeared as Langholm opened his door and went in. Was it a sound of bolts and bars that followed? Abel was still wondering when his prospective paymaster threw up the window.

"It was a three-figured check you had from Mr. Steel, was it?" he asked.

"Yes—yes—but not so loud!"

"And then he sent you to the devil to do your worst?"

"That's your way of putting it."

"I do the same—without the check!"

And the window shut with a slam, the hasp was fastened and the blind pulled down.

The final instalment of this story excels all the previous numbers in genuine thrill, solving finally and satisfactorily the problem of the murder.

A WEEK IN THE MILLS

within my head. For a second there hung the fearful silence of suspended motion after chaos. Then everyone rushed toward the doors. Jennie Prentice ran toward me, directing me to a group of girls who were calling her. We all went down together into the sunlight of the street. She told them that I wanted a rooming place. They looked me over quizzically. "She can come," one of them said.

After lunch, which we ate in a little shop around the corner and which cost us 10 cents apiece, for coffee, rolls and doughnuts, we went back. The afternoon seemed interminable. All I did was placing the needle back at its starting point after it had traversed a line of knitting and taking out and inserting the wool. It was work that required infinite patience. It was work of infinite monotony. Afterward, when I became accustomed to it, I saw that all the work was apportioned in the same way. Every worker was expert in one thing, but no one thing was skilled labor. It was as nearly mechanical as human labor may be made.

That night I went home with Jennie and the other girls. They did co-operative housekeeping, managing to live for about $5 a week. Their home was a tenement apartment that cost them $9 a week rent. They had kerosene lamps for light, and an old coal range for cooking and heating. They took turns in getting the breakfast of coffee, buying bread at the grocery the night before. The dinner was something quick, fried potatoes, pork chops that night, I remember, and bread and tea. They all ate listlessly. After dinner the other three went out. Jennie and I were too tired. We went to bed as soon as we had washed the dishes.

In the factory the days dragged interminably. All the girls worked mechanically. At night they were all so tired that they looked like old women as they went down the stairs. Sometimes the girls went out at night. Oftener they stayed in, too weary to move from the table.

Noontime was the only friendly time of the day. That was when the factory workers seemed to pay any attention to each other. The men were often coming around at noontime, talking to the girls. No one was gay, or happy, although there was only one woman in the room over 25 years of age. She was the woman beside me. She was supporting three children on $8 a week. She was only one of the bread-winners, though. Eight out of every ten girls in the room was supporting someone else.

On the night I came away, I talked to Jennie Prentice for a long time. She told me that she knew she had tuberculosis. "Working in the mills too long," she said. "We all get it. What's the difference? What's the use of living when there's nothing to live for, but working all day long in the mills, and sleeping all the time you're out of it, so's to be able to work next day? If I'd a chance to get out of this, you'd see me whirl," she declared with solemn conviction. "I'd sell my soul for a year's rest."

Above the memories of the whirring machines, above the thought of the fearful roaring of the wheels, her words stay with me as the concentrated recollection of that week, sounding the thought of many of those weary girls, who work drearily, wearily for money enough to live and yet who find no pleasure, happiness, no hope in the living that costs them their life blood. Others may think of Connecticut as the State that is one of the keystones in the arch of American freedom. Others may recall it as the State where Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote the book that aroused a nation to consciousness of its slavery problem. I remember it as the place where Jennie Prentice, white-lipped, tired unto death, told me that she would sell her soul for a year of rest.

Incomprehensible Marvels of the F-Ray

a glass giving out a vibrating ring when a certain chord is struck from the piano. Ulivi found that he could cause such sparks to be emitted by any metal, if he knew its distance and its radio-magnetic capacity. If this metal were in contact with an explosive, the spark would cause an explosion.

On this he set to work to construct his apparatus. The "Corriere della Sera" of Milan describes it as follows:

"It may be divided into two sections: a projector of electric waves, which discharges in every direction, and a projector of infra-red rays. The latter is furnished with a telemeter, a wireless telegraphic apparatus used for the final communications, a voltmeter, an ammeter, and a chronometer. The whole apparatus is placed upon a box in which are the batteries which produce the power for the two sections of the apparatus. This works as follows:

"When the projector is put into action it discharges its electric waves in every direction. This is a sort of reconnoissance or exploration, for the machine is so made that when the waves encounter a mass of metal they set up other waves in this, or else a certain part of them are reflected back. These so-called "return waves" reveal the presence of that particular mass of metal. Ulivi, with a receiver on his head as if he were at a telephone, stands on the alert, and as soon as his wireless waves induce return waves from any mass of metal, he catches them and analyzes them. This analysis enables him to ascertain with precision the identity of this metal, its radio-magnetic capacity and the exact distance at which it lies.

"This is the first process, and it is of the greatest importance. When it is finished, Ulivi brings into play the projector of infra-red rays. With this he takes aim, as it were, at the metal object, which in its turn responds. In other words, it behaves exactly as the steel shoes on the horses in the Paris stable and emits sparks.

"In passing through other masses of metal or other refractory material, the vibrations are diminished; but the apparatus is supplied with coils and condensers, which regulate the frequency of the vibrations. In this way the vibrations of the infra-red rays are attuned so delicately that they can cause the electric spark to be set off inside the metallic mass with which they come in contact. If, then, this mass of metal contains an explosive, the spark makes this explode."

At the suggestion of Col. Torretta, experiments are now to be made near Rome—they may have been made before these lines are printed—with actual artillery ammunition, which was not possible at Florence, owing to the danger to the spectators.

The "Tribuna" of Rome remarks that if Ulivi, stationed on the Alban hills, for example, can explode the magazine of a hostile warship, out at sea off Civita Vecchia, a revolution in warfare will be necessary.

"If," it says, "an Ulivi apparatus were stationed at every strategic point along the coasts of Italy, no enemy could approach the shore with impunity. A nation, even without a navy, would become impregnable."

To defend New York, for example, it would be necessary merely to establish an Ulivi apparatus on Atlantic Highlands and another on Shelter Island.

At what distance the deadly rays can be made effective time alone can tell. The apparatus used by the inventor at Florence was so small that he carried it about with him in a traveling bag, yet it was effective at more than 10 miles. There is no reason to doube that with further improvement and more powerful apparatus its range can be extended, as has that of the ordinary wireless telegraphy.

The British and French Governments are said to be trying to buy the invention, but his desire is to give the Italian Government an opportunity to acquire the exclusive right to it, and to keep its details a secret forever, to be used for the defense of his country in time of need.

"WHAT did he get?" I asked. I had been working in my own room all the morning, and had not seen the papers—they arrived from London about 11:30.

"Seven years' penal servitude," said our host, the Major, with grim satisfaction.

"Stiff!" I commented.

"Not a bit too much," asserted the Major, helping himself to game pie again. (He is a good luncher.)

"He's a thoroughly bad lot, a professional thief, and a deuced clever one. It's his first conviction—but it ought to have been his tenth, I should say."

"He was certainly in that big American bond robbery," said Crookes, "though he got off that time. Oxford man, wasn't he?"

"Yes. In fact, I believe I was up one term with him," said Millington. "I must have seen him, I think, but I can't remember him."

"Dear, dear!" our hostess observed, shocked, apparently at this close proximity to the criminal classes.

"Rather good what the chap said when he'd been sentenced," drawled Charlie Pryce. "See it? Well, he bowed to the Judge, and then he bowed to the jury and smiled and shrugged his shoulders, and said: "The risks of the profession, gentlemen! Au revoir!' Jolly good cheek!" Charlie's round red face (he is very well nourished, as they say at inquests) beamed almost sympathetically.

"I suppose he owes his nickname to his professional dexterity?" said I.

"Suppose so," agreed Charlie.

"No," said Mrs. Pryce, who was at the other end of table. "His name is James"——

"Yes, James Painter Walsh," interposed the Major, accurate always.

"But he was called 'Slim-Fingered' because he had beautiful hands, with very slender, tapering fingers."

"Hullo, Minnie!" cried Pryce. "How do you know that?"

"He told me so himself," she answered with a smile and the hint of a blush. "I crossed from America with him the time he was arrested at Queenstown for the bond robbery and—well, we got acquainted. Of course, nobody knew who he was."

A torrent of questions overwhelmed Mrs. Pryce. She had achieved fame—she had known the hero of the last famed jewel robbery. She spoke of him from first-hand knowledge. The unrivaled attraction of crime—crime in the grand manner—fascinates us all. But she wouldn't say much. "He was just an acquaintance for the voyage," she told us. "Though, of course, it was rather a shock to see him arrested at Queenstown."

"A surprise?" She seemed to me to start ever so little. "Oh, yes, of course, terrible!" she went on the next instant.

"Was he nice?" asked our hostess.

"Yes, he was very—very attractive—very attractive," she answered. And somehow I fancy her glance rested for a moment on her husband—indeed, on a particular portion of him. Charlie was just lighting the after-lunch cigarette. Charlie's hands (he was a very good fellow and well off) are decidedly red and particularly pudgy.

II.

I LIKED Mrs. Pryce very much. She was pretty, dainty, bright and—Well, bachelors are so apt to think that pretty married women have a dull time at home that I will lay no stress on my own private opinion as to her domestic lot. Enough that I was always glad to talk with her—and that it was pleasant to walk with her in the Major's quiet old garden on a fine night when the wind stirred the boughs and the moon shone.

Inside they had taken to pool—and whisky and soda. I play the former badly and take the latter when the evening is more advanced.

"Beautiful moon!" I observed, enjoying nature, my company and my cigar.

She was silent a moment. Then she said: "It shone just like that the third night out from New York."

"Your last trip?" She crosses pretty often, as Charlie has business connections on the other side.

"No. The one when—the one we were talking about at lunch."

"Ah! When our friend of the slim fingers"——

"Yes."

"Let's sit down," I suggested. We were just passing a garden seat.

She smiled at me half sadly, half mockingly. She saw through me; she knew I wanted to hear more about it. By some sort of sympathy I knew that she wanted to talk about it. It was queer, too, to consider through what window that moon was shining on Slim-Fingered Jim. Did it—and his other surroundings—remind him of the broad Atlantic? The risks of the profession, gentlemen!

"Yes, he had beautiful hands," she murmured.

"What'll they look like when"——

She caught my hand sharply in hers. "Hush! hush!" she whispered. I felt ashamed of myself, but, of course, I couldn't have known that—well, that she'd feel it like that.

"I was quite a girl," she went on presently. "Yes, it's six years ago—and the first two days of that voyage were like days in heaven. You know what it can be when it's fine? You seem never to have known what space was before—and bigness—and blueness. Do you know what I mean?"

"It's very exhilarating."

"Oh, don't be silly! Of course, nobody was ill—anyhow only the people who meant to be before they started—and we had an awfully jolly table."

"Mr. Walsh one of your party?"

"Yes, he was at our table. I sat next to him."

I turned half round and looked at her. The moon was strong. I could see her eyes.

"Look here, do you want to go on with this story?" I asked.

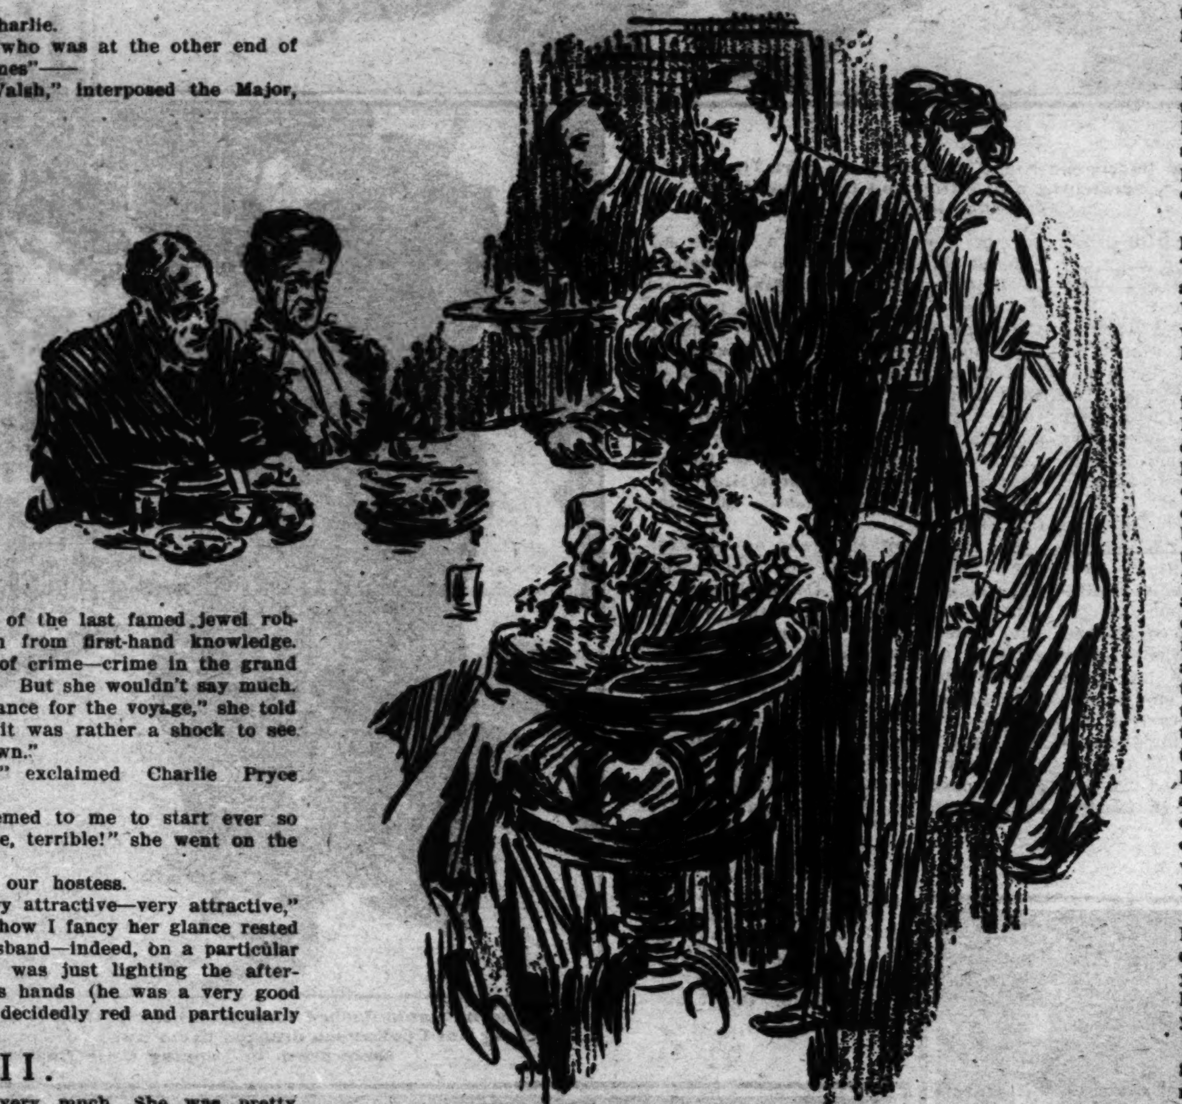
"Yes, I think so—I've never told it before. But perhaps I'll skip a little of it."

"At the beginning?"

"Yes. Will you imagine the sun shining by day and the moon at night?"

"Yes. And a sparkling sea? And nothing to do?"

"Yes. And a young girl—quite a young girl?"



"A torrent of questions overwhelmed Mrs. Pryce. She had achieved fame—she had known the hero of the last famed jewel robbery. She spoke of him from first-hand knowledge. The unrivaled attraction of crime—crime in the grand manner—fascinates us all."

"Yes—including a voice."

"Yes. Let's skip to the second evening, shall we, Mrs. Pryce?"

"Yes. And beautiful hands—and the rest to match?"

"Will you be a little more imaginative and skip to the third afternoon?"

"The third afternoon be it. What's happening when we begin to tell the story again?"

"I'm in my mother's stateroom, getting a tremendous lecture. I'm not sure you ought to hear it."

"Oh, I know all about it. You meant no harm probably, but really, it was time you learned to be more careful. Attractive girls couldn't be too careful. Men were so ready to think this and that—and say this and that—and then go and boast about it in the smoking room. And what did you or your mother know about him? Nothing! Absolutely nothing! No doubt he was a gentleman, and very pleasant and amusing—but really you knew nothing. He was probably an adventurer. And anyhow—well, really it wasn't quite—not quite—ladylike to—to"——

"Yes, that's not a bad imagination," interrupted Mrs. Pryce. "Add mamma's pince-nez, and it's quite lifelike."

"And the result?"

"Great constraint in my manner toward Mr. Walsh at dinner that evening."

"And—further result—a melancholy walk by you on the deck after dinner—a walk at first solitary—subsequently shared by a puzzled and humble Mr. Walsh!"

"I begin to think you have more experience than you always admit," said Mrs. Pryce. "But I think you'll go wrong if you try to guess any more."

"Then I won't guess any more. Take up the thread. It's now the third night out—and the moon is shining like that." I pointed to the orb which was illuminating the Major's garden—among other places where sundry of that liner's former passengers might chance to be.

"I'll go on," she said, "and don't interrupt me for a little while. There was a very slight wind—you hardly felt it aft—and I was standing looking over the sea. He came up to me and began to talk about some trifle—I don't forget what it was, but it doesn't matter. But I was afraid mamma would come up and look for me so I said I was going down to read. But I waited for just a minute more—I suppose I expected him to tell me not to go. He said nothing, but took one big, long pull at his cigar, gave one big, big puff of smoke out of his mouth and nose, and then threw the cigar overboard. 'Good-night, Mr. Walsh,' I said. He looked at me—it was as light as it is now, and said, 'Will you give me one minute, Miss Cochrane?' 'Well, only a minute,' I said, smiling. I was really afraid about mamma. 'I want to tell you something,' he said. I wonder if I blushed—and whether he could see if I did. I expect I did, and that he saw, because he went on very quickly: 'Something that doesn't matter much to you, but matters a bit to me.' 'Go on,' I said. I was quite calm again now because—well, because I saw he was going to say something serious—I mean, not of the sort I—I had thought he might be going to say before."

"You saw he wasn't making love to you, you mean."

"I told you not to interrupt—but I daresay that's putting it as nearly right as you can understand!"

I murmured thanks for this rather contemptuous forgiveness.

"Then he told me," Mrs. Pryce went on, "just simply told me, and said he was going to make some excuse for asking the purser to put him at another table."

"But you can't leave it like that!" I expostulated. "You are throwing away all your dramatic effect. What did he say? His words, his words, Mrs. Pryce!"

"He didn't use any—not in the sense you mean. He just told me. He didn't even put me on my honor not to tell anybody else. He said he didn't care a hang about anybody else on board, but that he wanted to spare me any possible shock, and that he'd been concerned in the bond robbery and would probably be arrested at Queenstown—but that he expected to get off this time. I think I repeated 'this time!' because I remember he said then that he was a thief by profession, and couldn't expect good luck every time. That was like what he said yesterday, wasn't it?"

"And what did you say? It must have been a bad quarter of an hour for you. Because you'd liked him a good deal, hadn't you?"

"Yes, a lot. But"——She turned to me smiling now—"it wasn't bad at all, really."

She gave a little laugh—a laugh with pleasant reminiscence in it.

"You were a cool hand for your age," I ventured to observe.

"It was the way he did it," she said. "Somehow I felt he was paying me a very high compliment."

"Oh, I agree," I laughed.

"And one I was glad to have. It must have been the way he did it. There are some people who abolish one's moral scruples, aren't there? He was very quiet generally, but he had a way of just moving those hands of his with a little waving gesture. And when he said that, of course, it wasn't right"——

"Oh, he admitted that?"

"Yes, but that little wave of those hands seemed to wave right and wrong out of the way."

"Overboard?"

"Absolutely overboard. Then he looked at me a moment, and said: "That's all I had to say. Thanks for listening to me, Miss Cochrane. Good-night.'

"And what did you say?"

She rested her chin in her hand, looking sidewise at me. "I said, 'Good-night, Mr. Walsh. We meet at breakfast tomorrow as usual?'

"The deuce you did!"

"'At our table?' he asked. And I said 'Yes.' He gave a little laugh, and so did I, and I held out my hand. He shook hands and left me—and I went down and read with mamma."

"Nothing else said?"

"He said nothing else. I believe I whispered, 'It'll be rather fun—because you will get off!' But I know I didn't care anything more than that."

There was a pause. I lighted another cigarette, snatching a mean advantage by stealing a look at my friend in the light of the match. She was not looking at me, but straight ahead of her. There was a pensive smile on her lips.

"And what happened afterward?" I asked.

"I suppose you'll be shocked"—— around to his house that night, chiefly because it was not ten minutes' walk from the Cadogan Hotel, and with little hope of finding anybody at home. Yet there was his friend, with the midnight lamp just lighted, and so kind a welcome that Langholm confided in him on the spot. And the man who knew all the detectives in London did not laugh at the latest recruit to their ranks; but smile he did.

"I'll tell you what I might do," he said at length. "I might give you a card that should get you into the Black Museum at New Scotland Yard, where they would show you any relics they may have kept of the Minchin murder. Doing anything tomorrow night?"

Langholm could safely say that he was not.

"Then dine with me at the Rag at 7 o'clock, and tell me how you get on. I don't want to be discouraging, my dear fellow, but it is only honest to say that I think more of your chivalry than of your chances of success!"

At the Black Museum they had all the trophies which had been produced in court. They were Mrs. Minchin's property, and if they knew where she was they would, of course, restore everything.

"But the papers say she isn't Mrs. Minchin any longer," the officer added. "Well, well! There's no accounting for taste."

"But Mrs Minchin was acquitted," remarked Langholm.

"Ye-es," drawled the guide dryly. "Well, it's not for us to say anything about that."

"But you think all the more, I suppose?"

"There's only one opinion about it in the Yard."

"But surely you haven't given up trying to find out who really did murder Mr. Minchin?"

"We think we did find out, sir," was the reply to that.

So they had given it up! Langholm sighed as he handled the weapon with which the crime had been committed, in the opinion of the police.

"What makes you so certain that this was the revolver?" he inquired.

The other smiled as he explained the peculiarity of the pistol; it had been made in Melbourne, and it carried the bullet of peculiar size which had been extracted from Alexander Minchin's body.

"But London is full of old Australians," objected Langholm, for objection's sake.

"Well, sir," laughed the officer, "you find one who carries a revolver like this, and prove that he was in Chelsea on the night of the murder, with a motive for committing it, and we shall be glad of his name and address. There's the maker's name on the barrel. I should take note of it, sir, if I was you!"

THAT name and that note were all that Langholm had to show when he dined with the criminologist at his service club the same evening. The amateur detective looked a beaten man already.

"Take the advice of an older fogy than yourself," said his friend, "and do nothing! You are quite right to believe in the lady's innocence. But when you come to putting salt on the real culprit, that's another matter. It was very sporting of you to offer to try your hand; but if I were you I should confess without delay that the task is far beyond you, for that's the honest truth."

Langholm walked back to his hotel, revolving this advice. Its soundness was undeniable, while the source from which it came gave it exceptional weight and value. He was still battling with it when he reached the Cadogan.

"A gentleman to see me?" he cried in surprise. "What gentleman?"

"Wouldn't leave his name, sir; said he'd call again; a foreign gentleman, he seemed to me."

"A delicate-looking man?"

"Very, sir. You seem to know him better than he knows you," added the hall porter. "He wasn't certain whether it was the Mr. Langholm he wanted who was staying here, and he asked to look at the register."

"Did you let him see it?" cried Langholm quickly.

"I did, sir."

"Then let me have another look at it, please!"

It was as Langholm feared. When requested to put his own name in the book, he had also filled in that full address which he took such pains to conceal in places where he was better known. And that miserable young Italian had discovered where he lived in the country; his next discovery would be Normanthorpe House and its new mistress! Langholm felt enraged, especially after his own promise to write to Rachel, a promise already fulfilled.

He was idly glancing up and down the autographed pages of the hotel register, his fingers half-mechanically turning leaf after leaf backward, his mind on Severino's trickery, when his eye suddenly caught a name of late as familiar to him as his own.

It was the name of John Buchanan Steel.

And the date was the date of the Minchin murder.

The hall porter was only too ready for further chat. It was the dull season, and this visitor was one of a variety always popular in the quieter hotels; he was never above a pleasant word with the servants.

"I see," said Langholm in the course of conversation, "I see that a friend of mine stayed here just about a year ago. I wonder if you remember him?"

"If it was the off-season, sir, I dare say I shall."

"It was in September, and his name was Steel."

"How long did he stay?"

"Only one night, I gather—an elderly gentleman with very white hair."

The porter's face lighted up.

"I remember him, sir! A very rich gentleman, I should say; yes, he only stayed the one night, but he gave me a sovereign when he went away next day."

"He is very rich," said Langholm, repressing a desire to ask questions. He fancied that the porter was not one who needed questioning, and his patience had its immediate reward.

"I remember when he arrived," the man went on. "It was late at night, and he hadn't ordered his room."

"He had just arrived from the country, I presume?"

The porter nodded.

"At King's Cross, by the 10:45, I believe; but it must have been a good bit later, for I was just coming off duty, and the night porter was just coming on."

"Then you did not see any more of Mr Steel that night?"

"I saw him go out again," said the porter dryly, "after he had something to eat. I didn't see him come in the second time."

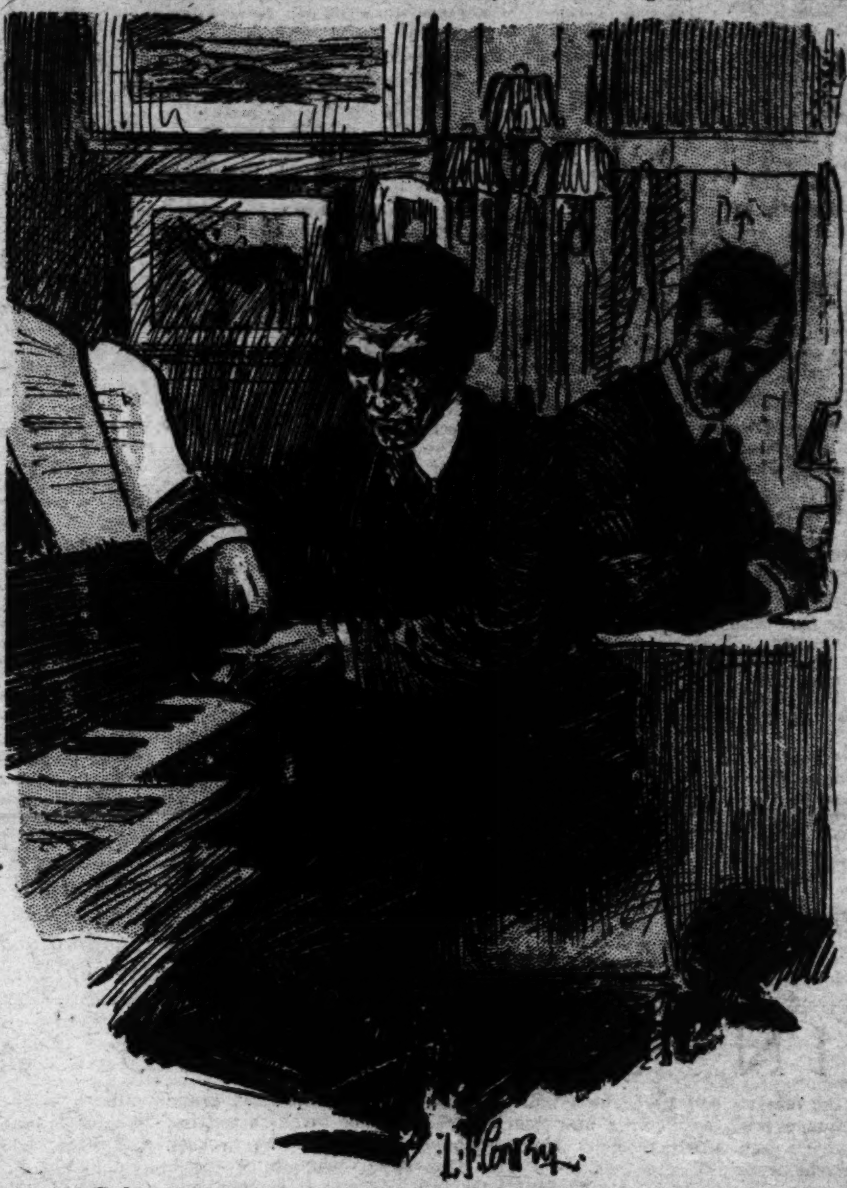
Langholm could hardly believe his ears. To cover his excitement he burst out laughing.

"The old dog!" he cried. "Do you know if he ever came in at all?"

"Between 2 and 3, I believe," said the porter in the same tone.

Langholm laughed again, but asked no more questions, and in a little while he was pacing his bedroom floor with fevered face and tremulous stride.

To suspect Steel because he chanced to have been in the neighborhood of Chelsea on the night of the murder and absent from his hotel about the hour of its committal was absurd. There was nothing within Langholm's knowledge to connect Minchin with Steel. Yet they might have known each other in Australia. Langholm remembered the Australian swagman whom he had seen "knocking down his check" at a wayside inn within a few miles of Normanthorpe, and Steel's gratuitously explicit statement that neither he nor his wife had ever been in Australia in their lives. There was one lie at least, then why not two?



"A dark and cadaverous young man has raised the piano top slowly and laboriously."

Langholm regretted now that he had not discussed the case with Mrs. Steel before embarking on his task. He had hoped to obtain what he wanted from the fuller reports of the trial; but that investigation had been conducted upon the supposition that his wife and no other had caused the death of Alexander Minchin. No business friend of the deceased had been included among the witnesses, and the very least had been made of his financial difficulties.

Langholm, however, with his wits immensely quickened by the tonic of his new discovery, began to see possibilities in this aspect of the matter, and, as soon as the telegraph offices were open he dispatched a rather long message to Mrs. Steel. The answer was:

"Shared office 2 Adam's Court Old Broad Street with a Mr. Crofts."

Langholm was now forced to take a bolder step than he quite relished. He had in his pocket the card of the detective officer who had shown him over the Black Museum, luckily it was still quite clean.

Mr. Crofts was in, his small clerk said, and the sham detective followed the real one's card into the inner chamber of the poky offices upon the third floor, where Mr. Crofts sat aghast in his office chair.

"I am sorry to intrude upon you, Mr. Crofts," began Langholm, "but I have come to make a few inquiries about the late Alexander Minchin, who, I believe, once"——

"Quite right! Quite right!" cried Crofts. "Minchin—poor fellow—to be sure! Take a seat, inspector."

If Mr. Crofts was relieved, it was also a very real relief to Langholm not to have been found out at a glance. He took a seat almost gratefully.

"The death of Mr. Minchin is, as you know, still a mystery"——

"I didn't know it," interrupted Crofts, who had quite recovered his spirits. "I thought the only mystery was how 12 sane men could have acquitted his wife."

"That," said Langholm, "was the opinion of many at the time; but it is one which we are obliged to disregard, whether we agree with it or not. What I want from you, Mr. Crofts, is any information that you can give me concerning Mr. Minchin's financial position at the time of his death."

"It was bad," said Mr. Crofts, promptly, "about as bad as it could be. He had one lucky flutter, and it would have been the ruin of him if he had lived. In another week he would have been a bankrupt."

"Had you known him long?"

"Not six months; it was down at Brighton we [illegible] quite by chance, and got on talk about Australians. It was I put him on to his one good spec. His wife was with him at the time—couldn't stand the woman! She"——

"I won't trouble you about Brighton, Mr Crofts," Langholm interrupted as politely as he could. "Mr. Minchin was not afterward a partner of yours, was he?"

"Never; though I won't say he mightn't have been."

Langholm now consulted some notes jotted down on an envelope upon his way to the city.

"Mr. Minchin, as you are aware," he resumed, "was, like his wife, an Australian by birth. Had he many Australian friends here in London?"

"None at all," replied Mr. Crofts, "that I am aware of."

"Nor anywhere else in the country, think you?"

"Not that I remember."

"Not in the north of England, for example?"

Thus led, Mr. Crofts frowned at his desk until an enlightened look broke over his florid face.

"By Jove, yes!" said he. "Now you speak of it, there was somebody up North—a rich man, too—but he only heard of him by chance a day or so before his death."

"A rich man, you say; and an Australian?"

"I don't know about that, but it was out there they had known each other."

"Do you remember the name?"

"No, I don't, for he never told it to me; fact is, we were not on the best of terms just at the last," explained Mr. Crofts. "Money matters—money matters—they divide the best of friends. But the day before the last day of his life he came in and said it was all right, he'd square up before the week was out. Of course, I asked him where the money was coming from, and he said from a man he'd not heard of for years until that morning. So then I asked why a man he hadn't seen for so long should pay his debts, but Minchin only laughed and swore and said he'd make him. And that was the last I ever heard of it: he sat down at that desk over yonder and wrote to his millionaire there and then."

"On that desk, eh?" Langholm glanced at the piece of office furniture. "Didn't he keep any papers here?"

"He did, but you fellows impounded them."

"Of course we did," said Langholm hastily. "Then you have nothing of his left?"

"Only his pen, and a dairy in which he hadn't written a word. I slipped them into a drawer with his papers, and there they are still."

Langholm felt disappointed. If only he could make sure of that millionaire friend of Minchin! Crofts was drumming on the blotting pad in front of him; all of a sudden Langholm noticed that it had a dairy attached.

"Minchin's dairy wasn't one like yours, was it?" he exclaimed.

"The same thing," said Mr. Crofts.

"Then I should like to see it."

"It's in the top long drawer of the desk he used to use—if my clerk has not appropriated it to his own use."

Langholm held his breath as he went to the drawer in question. In another instant his breath escaped him in a sigh of thankfulness. The "Universal Diary" (for the year before) was there, sure enough. And it was attached to the pink blotter precisely similar to that upon which Mr. Crofts still drummed with idle fingers.

"Anything more I can show you?" inquired that worthy, humorously.

Langholm was gazing intently, not at the dairy, but at the pink blotting paper. Suddenly he looked up.

"Yes—you can show me a looking glass, if you have one!"

Crofts had a small one on his chimney piece.

"By the Lord Harry," said he, handing it, "but you toptop tecs are a lerry lot!"

LANGHOLM went north next morning by the 10 o'clock express from King's Cross. He came back from sultry London to a world of smoke and rain, and arrived finally at his dripping garden. There he was standing to inhale the fine earthy fragrance which atoned somewhat for a rather desolate scene, when a footstep crunched the wet gravel at his back.

"Thank God you've got back, sir!" cried a Yorkshire voice in devout accents; and Langholm, turning, met the troubled face of the woman next door, who kept house for him while living in her own.

"My dear Mrs. Brunton," he exclaimed, "what on earth has happened? You didn't expect me earlier, did you?"

"Oh, no, it isn't that, sir. It's—it's the poor young gentleman"——

And her apron went to her eyes.

"What young gentleman, Mrs. Brunton?"

"Him 'at you saw 'i London an' sent all this way for change of air!"

"A young gentleman, and sent by me?" Langholm's face was blank until a harsh light broke over it. "What's his name, Mrs. Brunton?"

"I can't tell you, sir. He said he was a friend of yours, and that was all before he took ill. He's been too bad to answer questions all day."

"And did he really tell you I had sent him?"

"Well, I can't say he did, but that was what I thought he meant. It was like this, sir," continued Mrs. Brunton; "just about this time yesterday I was busy ironing when my nephew comes to me an' says, 'You're wanted.' So I went, and there was a young gentleman looking fit to drop. He had hardly life enough to ask if this was where you lived; and where I said it was, but you were away, he said he'd just seen you in London: and he was sure he might come in and rest a bit.

"'I USED to find him looking at me with his eyes all full of laughter, and I looked back at him, enjoying the secret and the way he was making fools of all the rest. We were just like two children with some game that the grown-up people knew nothing about.'"

"Being shocked is an emotion hostile to art—I never have it."

"Well, then, I never had such fun. Of course, we were careful because of mamma (mamma's idea became funny, too) and because we knew what was going to happen. But we managed to get no end of talks in quiet places—the library's very good in fine weather—and he told me all sorts of wonderful things. It was like reading the very best detective stories, only ever so much better—so much more vivid, you know."

"More personal interest?"

"A thousand times. And it was fun, too, at meals, and when there was a concert, and so on. I used to find him looking at me with his eyes all full of laughter, and I looked back at him, enjoying the secret and the way he was making fools of all the rest. We were just like two children with some game that the grown-up people knew nothing about."

"He had waved your morality overboard with a vengeance," said I.

"It was the jolliest time I ever had in my life," said Mrs. Pryce. "He recited beautifully at the concert, 'The Ballad of Beau Brocade.'"

"Well done for him," I said approvingly. I began rather to like the fellow myself.

"And at the end he made a little speech, thanking the captain, and saying how sorry we should all be when the voyage ended. 'And nobody sorrier than myself,' he said, with one of his looks at me—such a twinkling look—and a tiny wave of those hands."

"He must have been the most popular man on board."

"Well, the men thought him rather standoffish; he snubbed some of them, I think. Well, you do meet some queer men on a liner, don't you? And Mr. Walsh said that out of business hours he claimed to choose his acquaintances. But the women all worshiped him—not that he ran after them, but his manner was always just right to them."

"It's really a pity his manner of life was so—well, so unconventional."

"Yes, wasn't it?" she said, welcoming my sympathy. "Because, of course, it meant that our acquaintance had to end with the voyage".

I had perhaps been thinking of somewhat broader considerations, but I refrained from advancing them. In fact, we had somewhat got away from ordinary standards and restraints—the memory of Slim-Fingered Jim had waved them away. We fell into silence for a moment or two, until I asked: "And the manner of the end? Tell me that."

"I didn't believe in the end. I had got not to believe in it at all. I thought we might go on sailing forever over the beautiful sea, and having the most splendid fun. He could make me feel that everything was just splendid fun—that there was nothing else in the world. He made me feel that—I suppose he knew he could, or he'd never told me his secret at all. But, of course, the end had to come." She sighed and gave a little shiver—not that it was cold in the Major's garden. Then she turned to me again. "I've told you a good deal," she said, "and you're not a chicken, are you?"

I ruefully admitted that I was no chicken.

"Then I needn't say anything more about myself," said she.

"I think he liked me tremendously—but he wasn't in love."

"I don't think so. He was just the most perfect of good comrades to me—and in that way the finest gentleman I've ever met. Because, you know, I can see now that I gave him opportunities of being something else. Well, I was only 19, and"——

"Quite so. The hands, of course!"

"It seems possible to be good and bad in—in compartments, doesn't it? That's rather curious!"

"If true!"

"Oh, you know it's true."

"Perhaps I do—but I never contradict the preacher." She laughed again, but now a trifle fretfully.

"In his own business I believe he's thoroughly bad."

"Not even the chivalrous highwayman?"

"No. Just bad—bad—bad."

"Ah, well, business is one thing, and charity another, as somebody once observed. And now for the end, please—because ends come even though we don't believe in them."

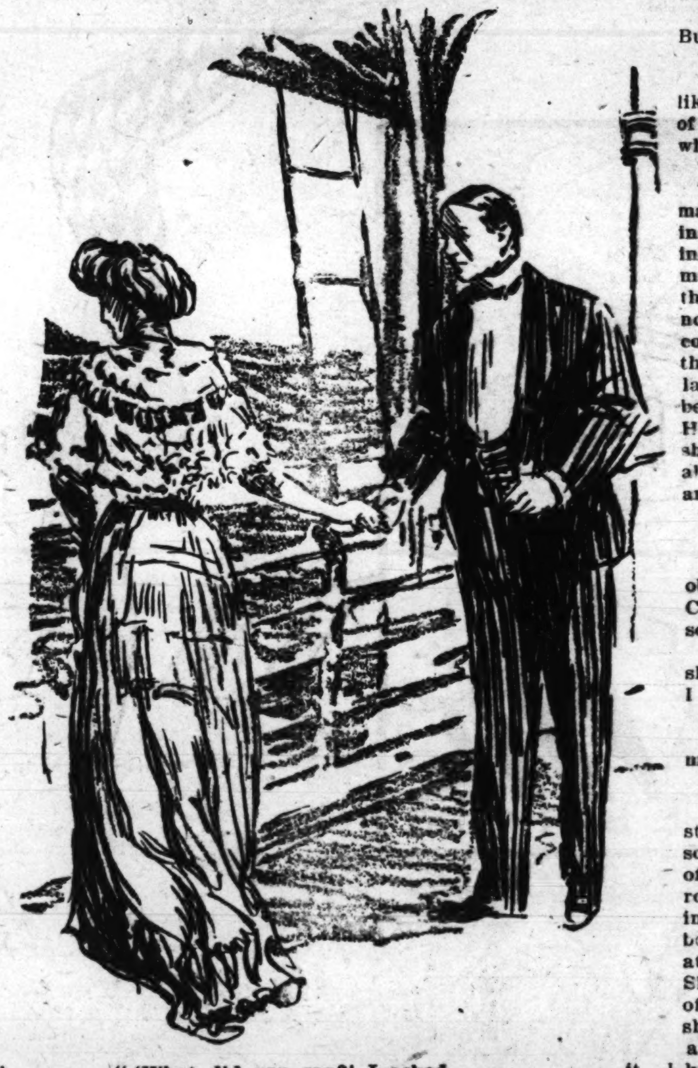
"Yes, they do—and this one came," she said. But for an instant or two she did not begin to tell me about it; and in the silence I heard Charlie Pryce assert loudly that he had made a d——d good shot.

III.

"AT LUNCH on Friday," Mrs. Pryce resumed, "the steward told us that we were expected to reach Queenstown about 1 o'clock in the morning, and we all began discussing whether we should sit up. The old travelers scoffed at the idea, and mamma, though she wasn't an old traveler, said she would never think of being so silly. But I and the two other girls at the table—they were Americans on their first trip over—said that we certainly should, and one of them asked Mr. Walsh if he meant to. 'I must,' he said, smiling. 'In fact, I expect to land there—that is, if I get the telegram I expect to get.' Of course, he glanced at me as he spoke, so that I knew what he meant, though the others hadn't the least idea. What would they have said?"

"I suppose they did say they were very sorry he wasn't going to Liverpool?"

"Yes, and even mamma said how sorry we were to part from him. Fancy mamma saying that! It was fun. Only after lunch she was terribly aggravating; she kept me down in the writing room all the afternoon, writing letters for her to all sorts of stupid people in America and at home, saying we had arrived safely. Of course, we'd arrived safely! But if mamma so much as crosses the channel without sinking, she writes to all her friends as if she's come back from the North Pole. Some people are like that, aren't they?"



"'What did you say?' I asked.

"'I don't know. I think I murmured something like "Oh, my dear, my dear!" and then I let go of his hands and turned away to the sea, and when I looked around again he was gone.'"

"Yes—and they're generally considered attentive. You may get a great reputation for good manners by writing unnecessary letters."

"Yes. So I didn't see him again till dinner. Nothing much happened then, at least I don't remember much. The end had begun, I think, and I wasn't feeling so jolly as I had been all the way across. But everybody else was in high spirits, and he was the gayest of all of us. I expect he saw that I was rather blue. And he followed me on deck soon after dinner, and there we had our last talk. He told me that he thought everything would be done quietly; he meant to tell the purser where to find him in case of inquiry, and to be ready to go ashore at once; he was sure they'd take him ashore, but if by chance they didn't he would stay in his cabin—so that anyhow this was good-by. So I said good-by and wished him good luck. 'Are you going to sit up?' he said. I look at him for a moment, then said, 'No.' He smiled in an apologetic sort of way and gave that little wave of his hands. 'It's foolish of me to care, I suppose, but—thank you for that.' I was a little surprised because I really hadn't thought he would mind my seeing; but I was pleased, too. He held out both his hands and I took them and pressed them. Then I opened my hands and looked as his as they lay there. He was smiling at me with his lips and eyes. 'Slim-Finger Jim!' he whispered. 'Don't quite forget him, little friend.' 'I suppose I shall never see you again?' I said. 'Better not,' he told me. 'But let's remember this voyage. We'll put a little fence round it, won't we, and keep all the rest of life out, and just let this stand by itself—on its own merits? Shall we, dear little friend?"

Mrs. Pryce stayed her narrative for a moment. But my curiosity was merciless.

"What did you say?" I asked.

"I don't know. I think I murmured something like, 'Oh, my dear, my dear!' and then I let go of his hands and turned away to the sea, and when I looked around again he was gone."

"And that was the end!"

"No. The end was lying in the berth above mamma—who was sound asleep and—well, snoring rather—lying there and feeling the ship slowing down and then stopping, and hearing the mailboat come alongside, and all the noise and the shouting and bustle. I knew I could hear nothing—there would be nothing to hear—but I couldn't help listening. I listened very hard all the time, but, of course, I heard nothing. And at last after hours and hours, as it seemed—we began to move again. That was the real end. He wasn't at breakfast. But luckily nobody on ship—none of the passengers I mean—found out about it till we got to Liverpool, and as mamma and I weren't going to London, it didn't matter."

"And he got off?"

"Yes, he got off—that time."

"I'm afraid this great man had one foible," I observed. "He was proud of those hands. Well, Caesar didn't like getting bald—so I learned at school."

"I always remember them as they lay in mine," she said. "His hands and his eyes—that's what I remember."

"Ever see him again?"

"Of course not." She sat where she was for a moment longer, then rose. "Shall we go in?"

"I think we may as well," said I.

So we went into the billiard parlor. They were still playing pool. I made for the whisky-and-soda and mixed myself a tumbler and drank thereof. When I set the tumbler down and turned round to the table, Charles Pryce was engaged in making a shot of critical importance. Everybody was looking at him. His wife was standing at the end of the table, and looking at him, too. She seemed as much interested in the shot as any of them. But was she? For before he played she raised her eyes and looked across at me with a queer little smile. I couldn't help returning it. I knew what she was thinking. The billiard table is a high trial.

When Charlie had brought off his shot—which he did triumphantly—his wife came and kissed him. This pleased him very much. He did not recognize the kiss penitential—which is, however, a well-ascertained variety.

I'm afraid that the magnetic current of immorality which seemed to emanate from Mr. James Painter Walsh passed through the sympathetic medium of Mrs Pryce's memory and infected, in some small degree, my more hardened intellect. For even now I can't help hoping that Slim-Fingered Jim is being put to some light form of labor. But it's a difficult business! Even the laundry—a most coveted department, as I am given to understand—would spoil them hopelessly.

Many things also happened in April. The King's chauffeur was struck by a bundle of suffragist literature which was thrown at His Majesty. A bomb exploded in a theater at Great Yarmouth shook the town and, setting fire to the theater, burned it down, with a loss of $100,000. A militant destroyed, with a hatchet, 10 cases of exhibits in the Oriental section of the British Museum, and another was found chopping to pieces with a cleaver the museum's display of porcelains. The Belfast Corporation's tearooms in Bellevue Gardens were burned. Three bombs were set off in Belmont Church, Glasgow, and Orlands, a historic mansion near Carrickfergus, Ulster, was burned. A militant was captured while trying to set fire to Springhall, a big unoccupied mansion at Tuthergien, Scotland.

Between the beginning of the year and April 1 there were numerous outrages. The King was harangued during a concert at Albert Hall, and he and the Queen were pelted with pamphlets in a music hall. Abbeylands, the country residence of Major-General Sir Hugh McCalmont, was burned near Belfast, with a loss of $75,090. The tennis grandstand and clubhouse of the Olton Club near Birmingham, were burned to the ground. A large mansion at Stewarton, belonging to the Free Church of Scotland, was consumed, and a placard announced: "This is in revenge for the arrest of Mrs. Pankhurst at Glasgow." She was arrested March 9, and in the riot firearms and bombs were discharged, and many persons were hurt.

A bomb was exploded in St. John's Church, Westminster. The parish church at Whitekirk, Scotland, containing relics of Cromwell and the battle of Dunbar, was burned to the ground. All of the municipal buildings at Bucole, England, burned, with a loss of many thousands of dollars. The aged Baron Weardale, president of the Antisuffragist Society, was beaten by a woman with a dogwhip in a London railway station. The Carnegie Library at Northfield, Worcestershire, was consumed, a bomb destroyed the Kibble Crystal Palace in the Glasgow Botanical Gardens, and two fires set at once in the village of Comrie, Perthshire, Scotland, utterly destroyed the magnificent mansion called "The House of Ross," and did heavy damage at Aberuchill Castle.

These records do not include innumerable riots which have occurred since the first of the year in England, Scotland and Ireland, in which the outstanding fact is that the "wild women" were time after time compelled to seek refuge with their old enemies, the police, against the anger of mobs. The outcome is seen through gloomy glasses by observers like Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The Briton is proverbially the most stubborn man in the world, and even if one did not remember that his wives, sisters and daughters come of the same obstinate stock, he would be made aware of the fact by the tireless and defiant pertinacity with which the militants have waged their campaign. The clash is already showing some of the symptoms of a collision between an irresistible force and an immovable body. And the ballot for women in England today seems as far away as it ever was, if not farther.

George Bernard Shaw, himself a radical suffragist, said recently:

"As we have neither conviction enough to dare to starve the militants to death, nor common sense enough to pledge ourselves to an inevitable reform, there is nothing to be done but to wait until the women provoke the mob to lynch them, and the Government hangs a satisfactory number of the mob in expiation."

THE SHADOW OF THE ROPE

LANGHOLM starts on his hunt for the criminal, and events move rapidly from the very beginning. Following up one trail, he is suddenly thrown off the scent, but only to take up another which seems equally promising. But complications follow, and Langholm finally finds himself up against a contingency which augurs ill for the woman for whose happiness he is striving.

SYNOPSIS

ALEXANDER MINCHIN is found dead in his London home, and his Australian wife, Rachel, is arrested. Though circumstantial evidence is against her she is acquitted. On the day of the verdict a Mr. Steel asks for an interview, but she refuses. Later, being homeless, she allows him to help her and he proposes marriage. Steel proves to be a wealthy landowner in the north of England, where he and Rachel are received in society. One day she discovers a portrait of her first husband in Steel's private rooms, but the latter refuses to give her any explanation. She meets a novelist, Langholm, and, at a dinner-party, in discussing plots, he mentions the Minchin case as being worthy of treatment. Rachel's intimate knowledge of the facts rouses the curiosity of Mrs. Vinson. Rachel comes face to face with her former judge in presence of several witnesses who notice her embarrassment. Among them is Mrs. Vinson. On the day of her first dinner party, Mrs. Venables, the society leader in the neighborhood, comes to ask if there is any truth in the report that Mrs. Steel had been Mrs. Minchin. On being confirmed in her suspicions, she tells Rachel that no one believes in her innocence. She spreads her information, with the result that all the guests, save three, break their engagement with the Steels. Among the three is Langholm. After dinner Rachel begs her husband to clear her name by employing detectives to track down the real criminal. He refuses, saying she has already been proved guiltless. Then she turns to Langholm, and he undertakes the task.

Fifth Installment.

IT was 3:45 o'clock on the Monday afternoon when Langholm alighted at King's Cross, having caught the 9:30 from Northborough. Langholm made sure of the time before getting into his hansom at the terminus.

"Drive hard," he said, "to the Capital and Counties Bank, in Oxford street."

And he was there some minutes before the hour.

"I want to know my exact balance, if it is not too much trouble to look it up before you close."

A slip of paper was soon put into Langholm's hand, and at a glance he flushed to the hat with pleasure and surprise, and so regained his cab. "The Cadogan Hotel, in Sloane street," he cried through the trap; "and there's no hurry."

Nor was there any further anxiety in Langholm's heart. His balance was a clear hundred more than he had expected to find it. "Thank God," he said to himself, "I have enough to run this racket till the end of the year at least! If I can't strike the trail by then"——

He lapsed into drear reminiscence and drearer daydreams, their common scene some two hundred miles north.

The hotel was very empty, and he found not only the best of rooms at his disposal, but that flattering quality of attention which awaits the first comer when few come at all. He refreshed himself with tea and a bath, and then set out to reconnoiter the scene of the already half-forgotten murder.

Of course, he remembered the name of the street, and it was easily found. Nor had Langholm any difficulty in discovering the house. It was plastered with bills of various agents, and Langholm noted down the nearest of these. He would get an order to view the house and would explore every inch of it that very night.

He was soon making fraudulent representations to the house agents near the Vestry Hall.

"Not more than ninety," repeated that gentleman, as he read out particulars of several houses at about that rental; but the house which Langholm burned to see over was not among the number.

"I want a quiet house," said the wily writer, and named the street in which it stood. "Have you nothing there?"

"I have one," said the agent with reserve, "and it's only seventy."

"The less the better," cried Langholm, light-heartedly. "I should like to see that one."

The house agent hesitated, finally looking Langholm in the face.

"You may as well know first as last," said he, "for we have had enough trouble about that house. It is the one in which Mr. Minchin was shot dead. Still want to see it?" inquired the house agent, with a wry smile.

It was all Langholm could do to conceal his eagerness, but in the end he escaped with several orders to view, and the keys of the house of houses in his pocket.

THAT evening he dined in the one club to which he still belonged. It was a Bohemian establishment off the Strand, and its time-honored name was the best thing about it in this member's eyes. Not a "clubbable" person himself, Langholm was not a little surprised when half a dozen men (most of whom he barely knew) rose to greet him on his appearance in the smoking room. But even with their greetings came the explanation to fill the newcomer with horror.

It appeared that Mrs. Steel's identity with the whilom Mrs. Minchin had not only leaked out in Delverton. It was actually in one of that morning's half-penny papers. For the moment Langholm was shocked beyond words, and not a little disgusted, to discover the cause of his own temporary importance.

Langholm took his comparative crony by the arm. "Come in and dine with me," he said; "I can't stand this! Yes, yes, I know her well," he whispered, as they went around the screen which was the only partition between pipes and plates; "but let me see what that scurrilous rag has to say while you order."

The "scurrilous rag" had less to say than Langholm had been led to expect. He breathed again when he had read the sequence of short but pithy paragraphs. Mrs. Minchin's new name was not given, after all, nor that of her adopted district; while Langholm himself only slunk into print as "a well-known novelist who, oddly enough, was among the guests, and eyewitness of a situation after his own heart."

"It's not so bad as I thought," he said, throwing the newspaper aside as his companion, whose professional name was Valentine Venn, finished with the wine card.

"Well, you've got facts to turn to for a change," answered his friend, "and for once they really do seem as strange as the other thing. Ye gods, what a part of Mrs."——

"Drink up," said Langholm grimly, as the wine made an opportune appearance; "and now tell me who that fellow is who's opening the piano."

THE big room that the screen divided had a grand piano in the dining half, and now a dark and cadaverous young man was raising the top, slowly and laboriously, as though it were too heavy for him.

Valentine Venn looked over his shoulder.

"Good God!" said he. "Another fact worth most folks' fiction—another coincidence you wouldn't dare to use!"

"Why—who is it?"

Venn's answer was to hail the dark, thin youth with rude geniality. The young fellow hesitated, almost shrank, but came shyly forward in the end. Langholm noted that he looked very ill, that his face was as sensitive as it was thin and pale.

"Severino," said Venn, with a play-actor's pomp, "let me introduce you to Charles Langholm, the celebrated novelist—'whom not to know is to argue yourself unknown.'"

Langholm took the lad's hand cordially in his own.

"Mr. Langholm," pursued Venn, "is the hero of that paragraph"—Langholm kicked him under the table—"that—that paragraph about his last book, you know. Severino, Langholm, is the best pianist we have had in the club since I have been a member, and you will say the same yourself in another minute."

"But where does the coincidence come in?" asked Langholm, as the young fellow returned to the piano with rather a sad shake of the head.

"What!" cried Venn, below his breath; "do you mean to say you are a friend of Mrs. Minchin's, or whatever her name is now, and that you never heard of Severino?"

"No," replied Langholm, his heart in an instantaneous flutter. "Who is he?"

"The man she wanted to nurse the night her husband was murdered—the cause of the final row between them!"

"But why was it," he said at length, "that they took such pains to keep his name out of the case? They ought to have put him in the box and had his evidence."

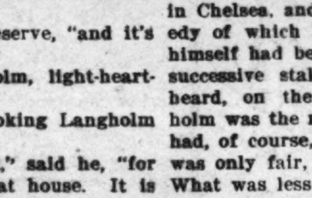
"He was still too ill to be called," rejoined Venn. "The poor devil was at death's door. But I'll tell you how I do know all about his illness. You see that dark chap with the cigar, who's just come in to listen? That's Severino's doctor; and I'll introduce you to him, if you like, after dinner."

"Thank you," said Langholm, after some little hesitation; "as a matter of fact, I should like it very much. Venn," he added, leaning right across the little table, "I know the woman well! I believe in her absolutely, and I mean to make her neighbors and mine do the same. That is my object—don't give it away!"

"Dear boy, these lips are sealed," said Valentine Venn.

The actor proved to be one of the Bohemian's colony in Chelsea, and by no means loth to talk about a tragedy of which he had exceptional knowledge, since he himself had been one of the medical witnesses at each successive stake of the investigations. He had also heard, on the other side of the screen, that Langholm was the novelist referred to in a paragraph which had, of course, had a special interest for him; and, as was only fair, Langholm was interrogated in his turn. What was less fair, was the way in which the original questioner parried all questions put to himself; and he very soon left the club.

HIS exit from the room was meanwhile producing its sequel in a little incident which would have astonished Langholm considerably. Severino had been playing for nearly an hour on end, and had seemed thoroughly engrossed in his own fascinating performance. Yet no sooner was Langholm gone than the pianist broke off abruptly and joined the group which the other had deserted.



"Who is that fellow?" he asked. "I did not catch the name."

It was repeated, with such additions as may be fairly made behind a man's back.

"A dashed good fellow, who writes dashed bad novels," was one of these.

"You forget!" said another. "He is the 'well-known novelist' who is going the rounds as a neighbor and friend of Mrs."——

Looks from Venn and the doctor cut short the speech, but not before its import had come home to the young Italian, whose hollow cheeks flushed a dusky brown, while his sunken eyes caught fire.

"He knows her, do you tell me? He knows Mrs. Minchin"——

"Or whatever her name is now; yes; so he says."

"And what is her name?"

"He won't say."

"Where does he live?"

"None of us know; he's the darkest horse in the club."

But the name acted like magic upon young Severino.

"If you don't know where he lives in the country," he burst out, "where is he staying in town?"

"We don't know that either."

"Then I mean to find out!"

And the pale musician rushed from the room, in pursuit of the man who had been all day pursuing him.

The amateur detective walked slowly up to Picadilly and climbed to the top of a Chelsea omnibus, a dejected figure evon to the casual eye. He was realizing the difficulties of his quest. It was no case for the imagination. It was a case for patient investigation, close reasoning, logical deduction, all arts in which the imaginative man is almost inevitably deficient. Langholm was deep in reflection, when he was suddenly startled by the sound of his own name. For a moment he failed to recognize the speaker or to reply.

"My name is Severino," explained the other. "I was introduced to you an hour or two ago at the club."

"Ah, to be sure!" cried Langholm, recovering. "Odd thing, though, for we must have left about the same time, and I never saw you till this moment."

Severino took the vacant place by Langholm's side. "Mr. Langholm," said he, a tremor in his sofe voice, "I have a confession to make to you. I followed you from the club!"

"You followed me?"

Langholm could not help the repetition. It was all that he could do to repress a smile.

"Yes, I followed you," the young Italian repated, in his touching voice; "I will tell you why. I thought that you were talking about me while I was strumming to them at the club, and when you went out, I stopped at once and asked questions. And they told me you were a friend of—of a great friend of mine—of Mrs. Minchin!"

"It is true enough," said Langholm, after a pause. "Well?"

"She was a very great friend of mine," repeated Severino. "That was all."

And he sighed.

"So I have heard," said Langholm, with sympathy. "I can well believe it, for I might almost say the same of her myself."

The 'bus toiled on beside the park. The two long lines of lights rose gently ahead until they almost met, and the two men watched them as they spoke.

"Until today," continued Severino, "I did not know whether she was dead or alive."

"She is both alive and well."

"And married again?"

"And married again."

There was a long pause. The park ended first.

"I want you to do me a great favor," said Severino. "She was so good to me, Mr. Langholm. I beg of you tell me her name, and where she is living now!"

Langholm looked at his companion. The pale face was alight with passion, the sunken eyes ablaze. "I cannot tell you," he answered shortly.

"Is it your own name?"

"Good God, no!"

And Langholm laughed harshly.

"Will you not even tell me where she lives?"

"I cannot, without her leave; but if you like, I will tell her about you."

THERE was no answer as they drove on. Then of a sudden Langholm's arm was seized and crushed by bony fingers.

"I am dying," the low voice whispered hoarsely in his ear. "Can't you see it for yourself? I shall never get better; it might be a year or two, it may be weeks. But I want to see her again. Yes, I love her! There is no sense in denying it. But it is all on my side, and I am dying. What harm can it do anybody if I see her once more?"

The sunken eyes were filled with tears. Langholm was deeply touched.

"My dear fellow," he said, "I will let her know. No, no, not that, of course! But I will write to her at once—tonight! Will that not do?"

Severino thanked him, with a heavy sigh. "Oh, don't get down," he added as Langholm rose. "I won't talk about her any more."

"I am staying in this street," explained Langholm guardedly.

"And these are my lodgings," rejoined the other, pulling a letter from his pocket and handing the envelope to Langholm. "Let me hear from you, for pity's sake, as soon as you hear from her!"

Langholm sauntered on the pavement until the omnibus which he had left was no longer distinguishable from the general traffic of the thoroughfare.

A bad 24 hours was now in store for him.

They began well enough with the unexpected discovery that an eminent authority on crime and criminals, who had been a good friend to Langholm in his London days, was still in town. The novelist went
